38 MILLIONAIRES PRODUCED BY SHOE FIRM IN 17 YEARS

How Officers of International and Their Heirs Have Profited by Concern's Growth.

MOST OF ITS STOCK HELD BY EMPLOYES

Roberts - Johnson - Rand, Formed in 1898, Consolidated With Peters Company in 1911.

Thirty-eight officers and heirs of officers of the International Shoe Co. have become millionaires since the merger that formed the company 17 years ago.

Of the number, 35 are St. Louisans, one is a resident of Hannibal, Mo., one of Alton, and the other of Chicago. Almost all were connected with one of the two companies which merged in 1911 to form the International, or are descendants of the men who made the merger possible.

While the personal fortunes of the company leaders have been doubling and redoubling themselves since the merger, the value of the company itself has increased eight times, to a figure slightly in excess of $100,000,000, and stock in the Roberts-Johnson-Rand Co., one of the parties to the merger, through accumulation and reinvestment, has become worth 1000 times its value 30 years ago.

22 Now in Company.

Twenty-two of the listed millionaires are actively connected with the company at present, all but one being on the directorate. Their names, and the names of millionaire heirs of International Co. founders, follow.

Frank C. Rand: President of the International since 1916. He started work for the predecessor company named for his brother, Edgar E. Rand, John C. Roberts and Oscar and Jackson Johnson, in 1898. He resides at 7100 Delmar boulevard, University City.

W. H. Moulton: One of the early Roberts-Johnson-Rand associates. He has been with the company 21 years and now is vice president in charge of manufacturing. His home is in West Brentmoor.

Horton Watkins: Also with the concern 22 years, starting in the Roberts-Johnson-Rand organization. He is vice president and general head of the sole leather department, and lives at Clayton and Warson roads.

Theodore Moreno: Vice president and head of the upper leather department. He started with Roberts-Johnson-Rand about 25 years ago. Residence, 24 West Brentmoor.

James T. Pettus: Associated with Roberts-Johnson-Rand since the first day of its operation and a member of the firm for more than 30 years. He lives at 41 Kingsbury place, is co-head of the Friedman-Shelby branch and a vice president of the International.

Andrew W. Johnson: Son of the late Jackson Johnson, who was chairman of the board. After starting a competing shoe business, he came to the International 15 years ago and now is vice president in charge of the company's advertising. Lives at 16 Portland place.

Edwin H. Peters: Head of the Peters branch of the International, the first part of his 25 years in the business was spent in the Peters Shoe Co., prior to the merger. He is son of the late H. W. Peters, he lives at 6229 Westminster place, and is a vice president of the International.

P. B. Jamison: Co-head of the Friedman-Shelby branch and vice president. He started with Roberts-Johnson-Rand about 25 years ago. Home address, 6105 Lindell boulevard.

C. D. P. Hamilton: One of the early Roberts-Johnson-Rand associates, he has been with the company 30 years and is a vice president. Home address, 5515 Cates avenue.

F. A. Seiboldt: Treasurer. Was a member of the Peters firm 19 years before the merger. Lives at 6234 Westminster place.

Byron A. Gray: Secretary and [illegible]. With Roberts-Johnson-Rand 20 years ago. Lives at 6227 [illegible]herson avenue.

W. N. Sitton: Assistant treasurer. With Roberts-Johnson-Rand [illegible] years. Lives at 7255 Maryland avenue.

C. H. Fielder: Head of the soleing and heel manufacturing department. With Roberts-Johnson-Rand 21 years ago. Lives at [illegible] Kingsbury boulevard.

"We started it much too long ago to tell about," Mrs. Mitchell said today. "It was when the boys were small. They played the banjo and cello, Mr. Mitchell the clarinet, and I the piano. We've always kept it up, and we look forward to it whenever the boys are at home."

She added that she "did it to keep them from going out to the movies."

COUNCIL FAVORS PLAN FOR U. S. TO JOIN WORLD COURT

Renewal of Negotiations Expected by League to Bring About Adherence in Short Time.

NEXT MEETING WILL BE HELD IN MADRID

Decision for Place of Next Session Thought to Signify Confidence in Stability of Spanish Regime.

By the Associated Press.

GENEVA, March 9.—Two decisions deemed significant and important in world history were made today in the Council of the League of Nations just before adjourning its fifty-fourth session.

One was the unanimous and enthusiastic hailing of the United States' initiative in reopening negotiations for adherence to the World Court of Justice. The other was unanimous decision to hold the June session of the Council in Spain.

As a result of the initiative of Elihu Root, America's "elder statesman," it was believed tonight that United States membership in the Court was now only a question of time, and the Council, confident that negotiations would culminate in agreement, voiced its conviction that adherence of the United States will be a signal contribution to consolidation of world peace.

Foreign Minister Stresemann of Germany said that "it will be a big thing for the development of arbitration." He is described as keen for the Root formula, which he discussed this afternoon at length with Root.

Indication of Confidence.

In voting to meet at Madrid, the Council is thought to have given notice to the world that it has no fears of possible Spanish revolts, and wishes to emphasize its belief in the solidity of the present Spanish regime.

Count Quinones de Leon, Spanish Ambassador to France, who represents King Alfonso's Government at the Council, is perhaps its most popular member. He believes that the best way to prove Spanish stability is by flinging Spanish doors wide open not only to the Council, but to the large contingent of foreign journalists who always trail the Council. Censorship is a problem, but it is understood that the Council goes to Madrid on the understanding that international correspondents will be absolutely unhampered in reporting League proceedings and sending messages all over the world.

On the Court question the Council approved a British resolution authorizing jurists, including Elihu Root, to study the whole problem of American adherence and to find a solution which could satisfy all interested parties.

This is regarded as virtually a mandate to get busy and succeed. The 55 nations which the Council represents want the United States in the World Court, and through their Geneva spokesmen practically issued orders that American collaboration with the Court of International Justice is too vital to the progress of the world to admit any possibility of failure.

The troublesome problem of assuring the protection of minority peoples, which many have regarded as potentially dangerous to European peace, was discussed by the Council with great calm and the belief was expressed tonight that the system of protection will eventually be modified in such a manner as to appease the affected populations and to give proper airing to their grievances.

The Madrid session of the Council was normally scheduled for June 3, but has been postponed for a week on account of the English elections and other considerations. Spain will pay the heavy bill involved in the transfer of the League Secretariat to the Spanish capital.

New Laws for Irak.

Great Britain's proposal to establish a new judicial system in Irak whereby foreigners and natives would be placed on the same legal basis was approved today by the Council of the League.

The existing agreement grants special judicial privileges to the citizens of certain states which formerly benefited by capitulations in Turkey and did not voluntarily renounce them before the signature of the treaty of Lausanne in 1923. These privileges include the right to have cases tried by British judicial officers, either sitting alone or in company with Irak colleagues.

A representative of Persia, which has no special rights in Irak, gave his unqualified support to the British plan. He said that hundreds of thousands of Persians dwell in Irak, which they regard as their holy land.

GIRL STUDENT AT WASHINGTON U. ENDS HER LIFE

Miss Pearl Reiss, 18, Red Bud, Ill., Takes Poison in McMillan Hall Shortly Before Mother Arrives.

CORONER ORDERS A POST-MORTEM

Chancellor Throop Says She Stood Well in Studies, but was Said to Have Been Melancholia Victim.

Miss Pearl Reiss, 18-year-old student at Washington University drank poison in her room at McMillan Hall yesterday and died a short time later without an explanation.

Mrs. Alfred D. Reiss of Red Bud, Ill., who had come to St. Louis to visit her daughter, arrived at the university about the time the young woman swallowed the poison, a disinfectant.

Accompanied by Mrs. Elizabeth Williamson, dean of women, Mrs. Reiss rushed her daughter to Barnes Hospital, but she was pronounced dead upon her arrival there. Later an undertaking company took the body and Coroner Dever dispatched a physician to the undertaking establishment to perform a post-mortem.

After the post-mortem examination, Coroner's Physician T. L. Carriere, announced that the girl had died as the result of poison and that her face and mouth were badly burned.

W. E. McCourt, dean of men, to whom police inquiries concerning the death were referred, declined to discuss the case with the police last night, but said he would tell about it some time today.

Chancellor Throop of Washington University told the Post-Dispatch that, while the death had been reported to him, he had not received the details. The young woman, he said, stood well in her studies.

"However," he said, "we were informed that she had been subject to spells of melancholia."

The young woman's father, an attorney at Red Bud, was summoned to St. Louis and made funeral arrangements. An inquest was tentatively set by Dever for Monday.

19 MEN ARRESTED ON GAMBLING CHARGE IN RAID ON CLUB

Two Officers and 17 Members Held After Second Visit of Police to 4251 Lindell Boulevard.

The Business Men's Club, 4251 Lindell boulevard, was raided by police last night for the second time within two weeks and two officers of the club, together with 17 "members," were taken to the Newstead Avenue Police Station and booked as "suspected of gambling."

The club was driven out of Hotel Missouri last summer after police raided it and declared it a gambling establishment. It was then known as the Progressive Realty Club. Two weeks ago it was found to have re-opened in the 14-room house on Lindell boulevard, under its new name.

Edward L. Oxenhandler, 1614 Burd avenue, and Aaron Feinstein, president and secretary of the club, were among those arrested last night. Previous charges of gambling have not been sustained in court because of lack of direct evidence. Oxenhandler asserts the club is devoted to "benevolent, social and fraternal purposes."

SANDINO'S AID SHOT BY NICARAGUAN CAPTORS

They Suspected He Was Leading Them Into Ambush, They Explain.

By the Associated Press.

MANAGUA, March 9.—The Nicaraguan Government has officially confirmed the execution of Gen. Manuel Maria Jiron by Juan Escamillo, leader of a group of native, volunteers who attempted to capture Gen. Sandino, in the Department of Nueva Segovia.

Sandino has refused to submit to the occupation of Nicaragua by U. S. Marines and has carried on a guerilla warfare in the mountains on the border of Honduras since their advent.

After Jiron's capture by Lieut. Hanneken of the United States Marine Corps, he declared his intention of deserting Sandino and offered to furnish information which might result in his chief's capture. Jiron was released from jail at Ocotal and sent as guide to Gen. Escamillo and an expedition through the jungle to Sandino's camp.

Escamillo had not gone far before he decided his command was being led into an ambush. Martial law is in force in the four Northern departments of Nicaragua, so Escamillo immediately convened a courtmartial and had Jiron shot on the spot.

Jiron's band kidnaped George Marshall, an American, when a mine was raided last year and held him captive until his death.

ACTRESS FAILS TO PROVE AGE, LOSES $3,642,452 APPEAL

Irene Fenwick Signed Mortgage in 1908 on Which Felix Isman Later Defaulted.

By the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, March 9.—Irene Fenwick, actress and wife of Lionel Barrymore, lost a motion today for reopening a case, which had resulted in a $3,641,452.29 judgment by default against her and which was based on a mortgage she signed in 1908 in behalf of Felix Isman, Philadelphia broker, who was then her husband.

The suit, brought by the Central Union Trust Co. in 1926, was successful in establishing her responsibility for a mortgage for $3,700,000 by Isman in 1908 when he purchased the Sun building, at 280 Broadway. In 1912 Isman defaulted in mortgage payments and suit was started to foreclose. The $3,641,452.29 represents the amount of default on the mortgage and interest.

In making her motion to have the case reopened, Miss Fenwick said she was only 18 when she signed the document and did not know that she was making herself responsible in case Isman defaulted.

Although she had an affidavit from Ethel Barrymore, her sister-in-law, who said that she knew her when she was married to Isman and that she was a very

Supreme Court Justice Alfred J. Townley denied the motion after Miss Fenwick failed to produce documentary proof of her age.

NO MORE CHICKEN AND ASPARAGUS AT BELLEVILLE HOUSE

85-Year-Old Hotel to Be Razed for $500,000 Structure—Closes Tuesday.

The Belleville House, leading hotel of Belleville, Ill., for 85 years and famed in this district for its chicken dinners and home-grown asparagus, will close its doors forever at midnight Tuesday. A seven-story hotel-apartment building, costing $500,000, will take the place of the old three-story brick landmark on the south side of Belleville's city square.

L. D. Turner, head of a company which owns the hotel property, said yesterday that arrangements had been made to lease the ground to a syndicate of St. Louisans and East St. Louisans, who will build and operate the new hotel. He declined to disclose their identity.

John Schlosser, who has held the lease for 10 years, will take charge of the Lincoln Hotel at A and High streets, which he purchased recently.

The Belleville House was built in 1844 by Jacob Knoebel on farm land purchased from George Blair, the founder of Belleville. Adolph Schirmer operated the place when Schlosser went to work 38 years ago as a bartender. After 17 years, Schlosser bought the saloon, and two years later the dining room. Ten years ago he took over the entire hotel.

PISTOL SMUGGLED IN BIBLE TO CONDEMNED MURDERER

Slayer of Girl Recaptured After Escaping From Jail at Pottsville, Pa.

By the Associated Press.

POTTSVILLE, Pa., March 9. — Elverez Miquel, 28-year-old condemned slayer of his sweetheart, who escaped from the Schuylkill County jail early today, was captured tonight in a barn at Cressona, three miles from here by State police. In resisting arrest Miquel shot Corporal Fleming in the head, but the wound was not regarded as serious.

Miquel, said to be a Cuban, fired at a prison guard after holding two of them at bay with a pistol smuggled into his cell in a Bible, and then forced one to open the prison doors. He was thought to have fled in an automobile in which three men were waiting outside the prison.

He was under sentence to be electrocuted March 25 for the killing of Louise Jacks, 19, a year ago.

A woman who was alleged to have taken the Bible containing the pistol to the slayer was being held by police. She is Mrs. Clara Fessler.

BLIZZARD DELAYS 1000-MILE FLIGHT TO SAVE PASTOR

Capt. Roy W. Maxwell at Camp Borden, Ontario; to Pick Up Physician En Route.

By the Associated Press.

CAMP BORDEN, Ont., March 9.—A 45-mile blizzard raging here today prevented Capt. Roy W. Maxwell, director of the Ontario Government flying service from continuing his 1000-mile airplane flight to bring out the Rev. G. Morrow, Anglican clergyman of Rupert's House near Moose Factory, who is seriously injured.

Capt. Maxwell left Toronto yesterday afternoon. He replaced his wheels with skis here and intended to take off for Sudbury but was halted here by bad weather.

The uncertainty of weather conditions made it impossible to estimate the time it would take him to reach Moose Factory, Capt. Maxwell said. He will call at Demy Lake, near Cochrane, to pick up a physician. The Rev. Mr. Morrow is suffering from a broken hip and internal injuries.

NOGALES SALOON BUSINESS GOES ON DESPITE WARFARE

Gen. Topete, Governor of Sonora, Has Headquarters There, but No Enemies Are in Sight.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

NOGALES, SONORA, March 9.—The revolution in Sonora, home State of both Calles and the assassinated Obregon, is a quiet, confident affair without bloodshed, and does not interfere to any extent with trade.

This thriving, sprawling Mexican town of plaster fronts and countless cantinas remains as quiet today as it was last Sunday when Gen. Manuel Aguirre took his position at the customs house, not with bullets, but after exchanging hands and smiles with the officers in charge.

The Club Royal and the Palais Royale, de luxe cabarets, with American jazz orchestras, have not allowed the revolution to interrupt their nightly and early morning business of purveying entertainment to wealthy Americans. The O K bar and the Star saloon, where the gentlemen back of the counter speak English, continue their usual rushing trade with Americans.

Business Just as Usual.

The straggling three-quarters of a mile of saloons, pool halls, Chinese restaurants and groceries, Italian restaurants, Mexican cafes, Japanese barber shops and quasi-American cabarets that is the main street of Nogales glitters with a million lights nocturnally as always and does its best to take care of the crowds.

Guns have boomed to the westward and southward, at Juarez, Vera Cruz, Monterey, but the characteristic sounds in Nogales are the tamp of the beer glasses on the bar, the whine of the saxophone, the click of the billiard balls. A Federal airplane from Lower California flew high over the city yesterday, dropping, not bombs, but impassioned Federal pleas to insurgent soldiers to repudiate the revolution. The soldiers picked up the broadsides and laughed.

Meanwhile, in a small brick bungalow in the lee of the mountain that overlooks the western edge of town, broad-shouldered, big-chested Gen. Fausto Topete, former friend of Plutarco Elias Calles and now his bitter enemy, sits at a round table conference with his right-hand men.

Man Who Armed Indians.

Dispatches arrive hourly and bring either smiles or frowns from the large, square-faced man wearing the splendid new leather jacket, who has armed and outfitted several thousand Yaqui Indians and shipped them southward for a prospective rebel drive on the capital.

Topete, smooth-shaven, handsome Governor of Sonora, and outstanding leader of the one-time Obregonista party, helped to touch off the revolutionary fuse with a denunciatory letter to President Portes Gil that antedated the "Plan of Hermosillo," the revolutionary manifesto, by several days.

Topete's headquarters swarm hourly with Mexican ranchers, miners and merchants from all parts of Sonora. The bungalow is the property of Gen. Francisco Borquez, tail-mustached cavalry leader, and is something in the nature of a shrine for Sonorans be-

CALLES' ARMY OF 18,000 IS MASSED AT ZACATECAS

Federal Leader Prepares to Strike Insurgents Less Than 100 Miles Away at Canitas.

LOYALISTS STILL HOLD MAZATLAN

2000 U. S. Soldiers at Fort Russell, Wyo., Made Ready to Move, Possibly to Mexican Border.

By the Associated Press.

CHEYENNE, WYO., March 9.—Two thousand troops at Fort D. A. Russell tonight were thought to be in readiness to entrain for the Mexican border should the situation there necessitate the presence of additional American soldiers.

That preparations for an anticipated removal to the Mexican border for patrol duty in connection with the Mexican revolution have been completed was obvious to visitors at the fort today, but commanding officers refused to discuss the activities.

Statements attributed to officers and soldiers at the post were widely circulated that orders had been received to pack and that an order to entrain would arrive within 12 hours.

Unusual activities at the fort included inspection of the rolling kitchens, tents, packs, ammunition and other equipment.

Many railroad cars have been moved to a siding near the fort.

By the Associated Press.

MEXICO CITY, March 9.—Gen. Plutarco E. Calles' army of 18,000 is massed tonight at Zacatecas, capital of the State of the same name, in preparation for what is expected to be the most important battle of the revolution so far. His army is said to be the largest assembled in Mexico since 1915. Calles himself arrived tonight at Aguascalientes on his way to the front. Rumors of an attempt to assassinate him were declared to be false.

The end of the first week of the revolt found rebel forces advancing southward in Central and Northwest Mexico with the prospect of the establishment before many more days of an actual war front in the States of Sinaloa, Durango and Zacatecas.

Revolutionists at Culiacan.

An oral digest given in advance of tonight's official communique said that the rebels thus far encountered by Federal troops had retreated at the first sign of battle. For this reason, the Government reported, the Federals had been unable to engage the insurgents in any important battle as yet.

The Government spokesman said that rebel troops from Sonora "have reached Culiacan, Sinaloa," but did not say whether that State capital had fallen into their hands.

The Federals were reported still in control at Mazatlan, western seaport in Sinaloa. The communique said: "The rebels will never reach Mazatlan."

Calles' Probable Strategy.

Meanwhile 200 miles directly inland insurgents led by Gen. Urbalejo were reported to have advanced southward to Canitas in the State of Zacatecas. This is a strategic position because it affords opportunity to withdraw either to Torreon or Durango.

The Government announced that Calles' army had [illegible] catecas, less than 100 miles south of Canitas, with cavalry, infantry and artillery, numbering about 18,000 men. The forces commanded by Urbalejo are thought to be much smaller. The rebel General is a full-blooded Yaqui Indian and is a renowned cavalry leader.

The Government pointed out that another very likely contact point is the City of Torreon to which point the rebel Gen. Escobar fell back four days ago when he was driven from Monterrey. Federal forces led by Gen. Juan Andreu Almazan and Gen. Eulogio Ortiz have consolidated at Saltillo to the west, but their advance on Escobar is slow because of torn up railroad lines.

At present the strategy of Gen. Calles seems to be to force Gen. Urbalejo from Canitas, which would clear the railroad line to Torreon and give opportunity to attack that point simultaneously with Almazan and Ortiz.

Captured and Executed.

The capture of the rebel, Gen. Irineo Villarreal in a battle at Paras, Nuevo Leon, and his execution before a firing squad was officially announced here tonight.

CAULFIELD PLAN OF REFORM NEAR POLITICAL ROCKS

Democratic Senate to Propose Bi-Partisan Control of Budget, Tax and Purchasing Bureau.

GOVERNOR SURE TO REJECT THIS

Even if Upper Body Yielded, Job-Holders' Opposition Would Endanger Program in House.

By CURTIS A. BETTS,
A Staff Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch.

JEFFERSON CITY, March 9. — Gov. Caulfield's governmental reform program is about to go to smash on the rocks of politics. The Democratic Senate is preparing to offer the Governor a plan for ac budget department under control of a bipartisan commission. It is quite certain the Governor will not accept it.

Not having received official information of the details of bills written by sub-committees of a joint Senate and House committee, appointed at his request to prepare the measures to carry out his ideas for a budget, a central purchasing department and a consolidation of departments, the Governor declined yesterday to discuss his attitude toward the plan. He said he could not express it until he had read th ebills. However, his views on the subject of party responsibility are too well known to leave any doubt about his refusal to agree to a bipartisan control of the department usually classed as the most important in the executive division of the Government.

Among some Republican officials the Senate plan is referred to as an attempt by the Democrats to get control of the Government after they had been defeated at the polls.

What Senate Proposes.

One measure which has been prepared by one of the subcommittees and is ready for presentation to the joint committee, contemplates the creation of a new department, to be know as the Department of Revenue and Taxation, to replace the State Tax Commission. It is proposed to group in this department the supervision of the collection of the corporation franchise, income and inheritance taxes, to put under it a central purchasing agent to be appointed by the Governor, to give it all the budget-making powers possible under the Constitution, and also to transfer to it all the present powers of the Tax Commission in the making of investigations for the State Board of Equalization in the equalization of assessments and in the assessing of railroad, street railroad and electric corporations.

The present political organization of the Tax Commission is to be changed. Whereas it now consists of three members, two of the dominant political party and one of the minority party, the Department of Revenue and Taxation would be under the control of a commission of four, two from each party.

Governor's Known View

It is known that the Governor holds to the theory that the party placed in power as a result of the election should run the State and believes the voters in the last election voted in favor of Republican party control.

Notwithstanding his refusal to discuss the matter now in reference to this particular situation, there can be no question that he will insist upon maintaining control over this department along with his responsibility for the conduct of the State affairs.

His views were expressed to some extent in his inaugural message. He said: "In the final analysis, the question is, whether the executive department shall be responsible for efficiency and economy to the Governor and through him to the people. There can be neither efficiency, economy or responsibility in a system in which both control and responsibility are dissipated." He said further: "The personnel of these various offices is generally appointed by the Governor, but his power to demand accountability, or enforce economy usually passes from his hands, for practical purposes, with the appoi tment."

Holding these views, there is no likelihood that he will approve a law which will give representatives of the minority party equal voice with representatives of his own in control of the revenue of the State.

The Governor, of course, holds the veto power and no legislation can be effective without his signature, except by passage over his veto, and that would be an impossibility in any legislation in which a question of politics was involved. It is probable, even, that no bill of this character, to which the Governor was opposed could pass the House where there is a heavy Republican majority.

The Democrats have an advantage in the joint committee. While the House division consists of four Republicans and two Democrats, the Senate division consists of five Democrats and one Republican, giving the Democrats seven and the Republicans five members of the joint committee. It would be possible for the Senate Democrats to get their bills out of the point committee, and to pass them in the Senate, but over the Governor's opposition they would be certain of defeat in the House.

Even if they had the Governor's support, the measrues would have a difficult time in the lower branch of the assembly, where Republican office-holders under the leadership of Secretary of State Becker, have built up much opposition to them. Speaker Parker is outspokenly against any reorganization plan, and Representative Elmer is very lukewarm.

It is very clear here that any governmental reform legislation can come only through a backing down by the Senate Democrats from their proposal for a bipartisan commission. Whether they will do so will be a matter for decision by the Democratic Senate caucus, and there is no precedent in the present Legislature which would justify an opinion. Until this situation arose there had appeared no partisan question to distrub the amicable relations between the Governor and the Senate. So complete has been the absence of politics that the Senate Democrats have had only one caucus and at that they considered only a minor matter of Senate clerkships.

McDaniel, Ex-Prosecutor, Raconteur, 'Recommends Himself' for Mayoralty

—By a Post-Dispatch Staff Photographer.

LAWRENCE McDANIEL.

Democratic Nominee "Can Live on the Salary and, If Elected, Will Use It for That Purpose," He Says.

LAWRENCE McDANIEL, Democratic contender against Mayor Miller in the election of April 2, is a resident of the Mayor's neighborhood. He lives at 5936 Waterman avenue, in a Twenty-eighth Ward precinct bordering on the one which contains the Mayor's home at 6100 Pershing avenue. He is 45 years old and has a wife and three children, the oldest a grown son. Their mother, his first wife, died in 1917.

Everybody, it sometimes appears, knows Larry. For years he has been first aid to luncheon programs in downtown hotels, and to church and lodge dinners. His plump, quizzical countenance hung with heavy-rimmed spectacles, has often been the only straight face in a crowded room, as he has told stories or swapped quips with toastmasters. His higher tones have a boyish treble that comes in most effectively in the climax of a narrative or an argument.

In three campaigns for himself, and in numerous campaigns for other Democrats, Larry has entertained audiences with equal facility, whether his object was to make votes in his own cause, or only to hold an impatient crowd until a belated principal speaker should arrive. He had as many stories as a vaudeliville monologist, and most of them had a local or personal twist.

"I Recommend Myself."

"I recommend myself" was his announcement to audiences in his recent campaign. "I intend to vote for myself. I'm my own campaign manager, treasurer of my campaign funds and the only contributor thereto. I can live on the Mayor's salary, and if elected, shall use it for that purpose."

He would follow this with some less facetious remarks about the big campaign funds of the Republican contenders—funds which, he reminded his hearers, the voters "would have to pay with interest" if either of the Republican candidates should be elected.

McDaniel, it happens, has been out of official life for just the length of time that Mayor Miller has been in it. The Bull Moose movement, which split the local Republican party in 1912, and the effects of which had not entirely disappeared in 1916, made it possible to elect Democrats, in those years, to the office of Circuit Attorney. Thomas B. Harvey was elected in 1912, and he made McDaniel his assistant. Larry proved a successful prosecutor, and in 1916 he was nominated and elected Circuit Attorney. Running for reelection in 1920, he was beaten, the reunited Republican vote putting Howard Sidener in office. It was after this 1920 election that Miller, as Gov. Hyde's surprise appointee to the presidency of the Police Board, began his political career.

As Harvey's assistant, McDaniel was successful in important prosecutions. In one of his cases the death penalty was assessed, for the first time in nine years here. As Circuit Attorney, he made a record of effectiveness. Among the convictions he obtained were those of three men who conducted an arson conspiracy to defraud insurance companies. One of the men committed suicide when the Supreme Court affirmed the conviction. McDaniel was commended by the retailers for prosecution of defaulters and embezzlers, and by trade organizations for his work in prosecuting automobile thieves. Defeat came in one important case, that of two street railway officers prosecuted or the theft of referendum petitions from a safe. This noted case was sent to Springfield on a change of venue, and the Judge there decided, over the protestations of McDaniel and the late Andrew C. Maroney, that referendum petitions were not property, and had no value, hence that the crime of burglary and larceny could not be committed in taking them.

Grand Jurors OK'd Him.

In running for re-election to the Circuit Attorneyship, McDaniel used as a campaign document an indorsement signed by 143 men who had served on grand juries directed by him. The number is that of 12 grand juries of 12 men each, minus one man.

"What about the other man?" McDaniel was asked at the time. "Did he die or leave town?"

"No," said Larry with a frown. "He was one of our leading business men, and he wouldn't indorse me because I cussed too much in the grand jury room."

McDaniel's term as prosecutor was in wartime, and he served by Federal appointment as Fair Price Commissioner for Missouri. Fair price committees in every county of the State helped in this work.

In 1921, McDaniel thought of running for Mayor, but decided to stand aside for James W. Byrnes. Much the same thing happened in 1925, when he did not enter the primary against William L. Igoe. He decided, some time ago, that 1929 would be the year when he would go after the nomination and the election for himself. So he began mentioning, in a pleasant and half-joking way, in his luncheon and other talks, that he was a candidate for Mayor. If his hearers took the statement as a joke, it was all right with him; if they took it seriously, it was all right for him.

Exalted Ruler of the Elks.

Among the positions which widened his local circle of friends were those of Exalted Ruler of the Elks lodge, supreme chancellor of the Legion of Honor, president of the Western Rowing Club, and president of the Community Club of Grace Methodist Church. He and a group of lawyers with a turn for comedy gave a mock trial in numerous churches and halls. He debated the subject of companionate marriage with Judge Ben B. Lindsey in the Coliseum, the Denver man making a serious talk in favor of "new freedom" in marital arrangements, and Larry ridiculing a system under which husband and wife would take each other "for better but not for worse, for richer but not for poorer, in health but not in sickness, to love and to cherish till the divorce court do us part."

He was to debate with Clarence Darrow, but the noted Chicago lawyer failed to meet him. He kept up his debating practice in the recent good-natured Democratic primary contest. When, in an appearance before the Town Club, Dr. John H. Simon talked learnedly of the philosophy of Aristotle, McDaniel chirped, "Aristotle doesn't count in this election, Doc; he isn't registered."

He has been active in Masonic bodies, and in the Advertising Club, Optimists and other clubs and groups. He lectured in St. Louis University Law School, and has been for eight years a lecturer of Benton College of Law. In 1927, when the sales managers' bureau of the Chamber of Commerce made a tour of Oklahoma, Larry went along as chief speaker. He is a member of the executive committee of the St. Louis Safety Council, and was toastmaster at the National Safety Council banquet in Chicago in 1927.

Like Mayor Miller, McDaniel is Missouri-born, but not a native of this city. Savannah, in northwest Missouri, was his home town until he came to St. Louis at the age of 20, after taking his law course at the State University, and entered the law office of Judge Valle Reyburn, Walter H. Saunders and Irvin V. Barth. He first became known as a political speaker in the 1912 campaign.

LINDBERGH TAKES 9 PASSENGERS AND AIR MAIL TO TEXAS

Arrives From Mexico City and Is Greeted by Large Crowd at Flying Field in Brownsville.

By the Associated Press.

BROWNSVILLE, Tex., March 9. —A new communications link between Mexico and the United States was forged today by Col. Charles A. Lindbergh when he opened regular daily air mail service between Mexico City and this American border town.

Carrying a heavy cargo of mail and nine passengers, Col. Lindbergh reached here at 1:34 p. m. to be greeted by an enthusiastic crowd estimated at 20,000, which included a number of noted aviators. He took off from Mexico City at 7:56 a. m. and made a stop of a few minutes at Tampico.

The mail was transferred to a Texas air transport plane to be carried to San Antonio and thence to Dallas for the northward flight to Chicago on the existing air mail line, which connects with the transcontinental route.

The Mexican service will afford 36-hour delivery of letters between Mexico City and New York.

Col. Lindbergh was expected to leave on the return flight to the Mexican capital at 10:30 a. m. tomorrow to rejoin his fiancee, Miss Anne Morrow, daughter of the American Ambassador. No definite announcement was made, however.

The welcoming crowd at the airport was so large and enthusiastic that it got out of hand. As the wheels of Col. Lindbergh's trimotored plane touched the ground one large group of spectators broke through the ropes that had kept the landing field clear. They rushed out and surrounded the plane. Pilots of the two ships that escorted Lindbergh from Mexico City had difficulty in making safe landings because of the throng on the field. Col. Lindbergh and his passengers remained in the cabin while officers drove back the crowds.

Scores of airplanes flew here from various sections of the country for the celebration. Miss Amelia Earhart, first woman to fly the Atlantic, was among those on hand.

Calles Masses Force Of 18,000 at Zacatecas

Irineo, it is said, is not a relative of Antonio Villarreal, candidate for President, who also is with the insurgents.

Reports of heavy fighting between civilan rebels and Federal soldiers in the State of Colima, 600 miles west of here, were contained in press dispatches tonight. The rebels were said to have been driven off after spirited attacks on Colima and its port, Manzanillo.

The dispatches told of the capture and execution after summary court-martial of Gen. J. Guadalupe Michel, said to be a priest, and three other rebel leaders who were taken near Mamey. Three hundred rebels, who attempted to rescue these men after they had been taken to Manzanillo, were repulsed by Federal outposts stationed in the high hills around the port. Gen. Heliodoro Chalis, Federal military commander in the state, managed to keep the railroad between the two cities open despite three days of fighting and tonight reported the situation entirely under control.

The reports said that the rebels had lost 32, killed during the three days while the Federals had lost an officer and two soldiers. Women among the rebels captured were not executed. Minor engagements occurred at Mamey, Ayutilan and Camotlan. Michel was said to have 5000 pesos ($2500) for his freedom but his executioners refused.

A dispatch to El Universal from Queretaro said that near Noria a bomb was exploded today under an armored car of a passenger train bound from Laredo to Mexico City. One soldier was killed and another wounded.

Rebels in Vera Cruz Scattered.

It was reported that the rebel General Jesus M. Aguirre had abandoned his railway trains and disbanded his men in the Isthmus of Tehuantepec, following upon his defeat at Vera Cruz. Rail traffic between Cordoba and Tierra Blanca in that State has been re-established.

Chapultepec Castle, residence of President Portes Gil, for the past week had been the seat of the Supreme War Council which now is likely to be transferred to the field. Activity about the castle had lessened noticeably today while the general life of the Capital continued orderly and undisturbed.

A group of leaders in Congress has started a movement to suspend all Congressmen from Sonora and those from any other states who support the present revolution. Their pay would be stopped.

Gen. Jesus M. Ferriera, former chief of military operations in the state of Chihuahua, attempted suicide in his cell in the military prison here rather than face a court martial on charge of implication in the revolution.

Hoover Acts Quickly When Decisions on Mexico Are Necessary.

WASHINGTON, March 9.—An appreciable lessening of the tension in administration circles over the Mexican situation was noticeable today.

Dispatches from Mexico, some of a confidential character, led to the belief that the Mexican Government was improving its position not alone in the Vera Cruz area, but also to the northward, the present stronghold of the revolutionists.

President Hoover is following this first international problem of his administration very closely and is acting with dispatch as decisions are necessary. He is following not alone precedents in similar situations in Mexico, but also the spirit, at least, of the Havana convention signed more than a year ago and which is awaiting ratification by the Senate.

Both the United States and Mexico are signatories to this convention, which binds the contracting parties to forbid the traffic in arms and war material, except when intended for the Government against which a revolution is aimed. Under its terms the United States has authorized the purchase in this country of munitiions of war and airplanes by the Mexican Government while denying such privilege to the rebels.

The President conferred today both with Secretaries Kellogg and Good on the latest developments in the Southern Republic. The Secretary of State said afterward that there was no cause for alarm as a result of recent developments, including the capture of Juarez by the rebels, while the War Secretary said the situation seemed improved.

The Mexican request that the War Department sell to the Southern Government 10,000 rifles and a quantity of ammunition will be granted, but there has been no decision yet as to whether these will be shipped by water to Tampico or some other Mexican port or sent over the border by rail.

The American Government was unable to comply with a request for the sale of army airplanes as there are no surplus aircraft and the law permitting the sale of war materials to foreign governments limits such sales to materials that actually are surplus.

Secretary Kellogg said there was every indication that the Mexican Government had no intention of asking permission for troop movements through American territory.

American Visitors Flock to Juarez Now in Rebel Hands.

EL PASO, Tex., March 9.—Battle-scarred Juarez was putting itself in order today while crowds of visitors flocked from the American side of the border and saw only shattered windows, broken signs and bullet marks in the walls of buildings as evidence of yesterday's clash which placed revolutionary forces in control of the town.

Business was resumed and went on as usual, except in the banks and the Tivoli gambling house, which remained closed. The jail was empty. Federal authorities freed 90 prisoners, including 30 held for major offenses, soon before the rebel attack.

Rebel forces were stationed at other strategic points apparently prepared for any attempt to retake the city. Federal forces, driven from the city, were interned at Fort Bliss, Tex.

A revised casualty list issued today showed that the total number of dead on both sides was 12 with 29 wounded.

Teddy Barnes, American bartender at the Mint Cafe in Juarez, was killed by a stray bullet in his room in the course of yesterday's fighting.

The interned Government forces at Fort Bliss were wondering how long they would have to remain in American custody. Brigadier-General George Van Horn Moseley, commandant at Fort Bliss, said he had received no word from Washington after having reported that the Mexicans were interned at their own request. One of the interned men, Lieut. Ruiz, died of injuries suffered in the battle.

Trains were running from Juarez as far south as Torreon today.

About 250 rebel soldiers entrained for the south from Juarez late today to meet Mexican Federal forces reported advancing on Torreon. Gen. Miguel Valles, who led the successful attack against Juarez was in command.

The soldiers were equipped with rifles, side arms, ammunition and machine guns. The families of the soldiers went with the troops.

$700,000,000 MOVED IN STREET

Transferred, Under Armed Guards, to Bank in Chicago.

CHICAGO, March 9.—For four hours today a stream of gold moved down La Salle street between rows of armed guards, while traffic for two blocks was roped off.

Four hundred cases of gold, currency and securities containing a total of $700,000,000, were being moved from the Continental & Commercial National Bank to the Illinois Merchants' Trust Co., one of the final moves of the consolidation of the two banks. Each of the 400 cases was insured.

ROBBERS FIND $1100 HIDDEN UNDER CAR RUG

Saloon Man Hopes in Vain They Will Miss Money After He Gives Up $500.

Two men held up Charles T. Hoevelmann, a saloonkeeper, yesterday, took his automobile and $500 from his pockets and drove away with an additional $1100 under the rug beneath their feet. Hoevelmann expressed the belief that perhaps the robbers wouldn't look under the rug, and that he might get his Hupmobile sedan back with the money still concealed.

An hour later the police found the car, abandoned on Winnebago street between Broadway and Jefferson avenue. Under the rug they found a little dust, but no money.

Hoevelmann, who operates a saloon at 3300 South Broadway, drew the money from the Chippewa Trust Co., yesterday morning to cash pay cheks for employes of the nearby Busch-Diesel Engine Co. As a precaution against robbery, he put $500 in his pocket and hid the rest beneath the rug.

He stopped at the Ideal Cigar Co., 3908 South Broadway, to get some cigars, and when he reentered his car, at 10:30 a. m. two men with revolvers were right behind him. They made him drive to Illinois avenue and Keokuk street, where they took the $500 and the auto, which they promised to abandon in the neighborhood.

Hoevelmann neglected to inform them their feet were resting on $1100. He notified police and spent the next hour hoping.

Telephone Company Pay Clerk Robbed of $505.

Henry L. Nordes, a clerk for the American Telephone & Telegraph Co., was robbed of $505 of payroll and other company money, at about 11 o'clock yesterday morning, by three men who forced him into an automobile at Pocahontas, Ill., drove him west on United States Highway No. 40 to within three miles of Highland, and then put him out of the car.

Norden, who is with a field unit of the company working near Pocahontas, was stopped by the three men who were riding in a Chevrolet sedan, as he was about to enter the Bond County National Bank. The men asked him for work and he told them there was none. He then entered the bank, got the money and walked out. About 150 feet from the bank the three in the sedan drove up to him again. Two of them got out, covered him with revolvers, and forced him into the car.

When near Highland, they pushed him out of the machine, and as they sped away fired two shots in his general direction.

Amundsen's Old Ship Burns.

HAMBURG, March 9.—The old wooden vessel Knut Skaloren, formerly the transport ship of the late explorer Roald Amundsen, was destroyed by fire which started when she grounded in an estuary of the Elbe today. The crew of 14 landed but the ship and her cargo of ore were lost.

POPE MUCH PLEASED, HE TELLS DIPLOMAT

Flood of Messages at Italo-Vatican Conciliation Causes Him Happiness.

By the Associated Press.

VATICAN CITY, March 9.—Pope Pius today spoke with happiness of the Italo-Vatican conciliation to a gathering of more than 100 diplomats representing 35 countries in the throne room of the Vatican.

He attributed the success of the conciliation to the good offices and intelligent reports transmitted by the diplomats at the Holy See which produced in all states a good impression and contributed to what he called a universal plebiscite in favor of the agreement that was reached.

He added that since the fall of temporal power in 1870, the sympathy and support of the diplomats representing the various countries at the Holy See had never failed and indeed were accentuated by being the chief source of comfort for himself and his predecessors.

He said that he was happy the Almighty had entrusted to him to lead the Holy See to the present event which might be called a "turning point in the history of the Holy See and the church." The present pacification, besides having removed civil and political divergencies, he felt above all was the loftiest treasure for any country.

Speaking of the flood of messages felicitating him upon the settlement, the Pope said: "This truly impressive fact authorizes me to say that not only all Italy but the whole world is with me.

"I wish that the diplomatic corps would say to these brave people that I shall never forget them and assure them that the Pope is not ungrateful and has prayed and will masses for all," he said "another sentiment which struck me profoundly has been the assurances from many that they have begun again to make their Easter duties and be reconciled to the church."

FORD COMPANY FOR HOLLAND

ROTTERDAM, Holland, March 9.—Plans are being made here for the establishment of a Dutch Ford company with a capital of 5,000,000 florins (approximately $2,000,000). The aim of the company is for the gradual extension of the Ford business into a factory for the complete manufacture of Ford motors.

6000 CHEER REED ON HOMECOMING TO KANSAS CITY

In Station Speech He Says "I'd Rather Come Back Here Than Be King of Any Country on Earth."

"CONQUERING HERO" PLAYED BY BAND

After Talk From on Top of Information Desk, Ex-Senator Is Guest of Honor at Banquet.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

KANSAS CITY, Mo., March 9.—Six thousand of former Senator James A Reed's friends and neighbors today welcomed him home.

It was a noisy greeting and a sentimental gesture of the affection in which Democratic party workers have held the senior Missouri Senator through all his fighting career.

The silver-haired leader, standing on the information desk in the main corridor of the Union Station, said to the crowd of home folks: "I would rather come back here and live with my friends and neighbors in Kansas City and in Missouri than to be the king of any country on the face of the earth."

The ex-Senator's face showed the earnestness of the sentiment. His voice was not extended, as it has been in the heat of Senate debates. He wasn't oratorical. He was eloquent in the use of simple words to express his pleasure at arriving home.

After he had been elevated to the improvised speaker's stand, Reed smiled and waved his right hand toward the cheering crowd. A band blared, "The Conquering Hero."

Remembers First Trip.

"When I first was elected to the Senate and went away there was no one here at the station to tell me good-by," the Senator said. "When I returned I received no welcome. There was a time when I went to the convention at San Francisco and was kicked out and I returned to find my friends gathered to welcome me. Again you welcomed me when I returned after seeking the highest honor within the gift of my party. And today you are welcoming me again."

Through this part of his remarks the ex-Senator was smiling. Then his face became serious.

"I am not returning with the title and vestments of office," he said. "I am bearing none of the honors of public office. I am here as a private citizen. I am your neighbor and your fellow citizen, and I believe this is the finest honor that can be accorded to a man This is the finest tribute a man's friends and neighbors ever could give."

Time to Give Thanks.

Reminding that the homecoming was no occasion for speeches, Reed added that it was rather "a time for the expression of my thanks."

The retiring leader spoke of the choice of residence made by other men who have quit public life in Washington. Many preferred to remain in the National Capital or in the large centers of the East.

"Those places have their attractions, of course," Reed asserted, "but I would rather come back here and live with my friends and neighbors in Kansas City and in Missouri than be the King of any country on the face of the earth."

As Reed turned to go, scores of hands reached up to help him down from the stand. A thunder of cheers reverberated to the tall ceiling.

The band was playing. James A. Reed, citizen of Kansas City, Mo., walked with Mrs. Reed through the throng to a waiting motor car to go to their home.

Former Senator Reed tonight was guest of honor at a dinner attended by 600 persons.

Besides Reed, speakers at the dinner were John H. Atwood, his former law partner; Dr. George H. Combs; Miss Violet Thompson, president of the Women's Committee in Industry, and Conrad Mann, president of the Kansas City Chamber of Commerce. A message from W. H. H. Piatt, president of the Kansas City Bar Association, was read by Judge C. A. Burney, Bishop Thomas Lillis gave the invocation.

Again you welcomed me when I returned after seeking the highest honor within the gift of my party. And today you are welcoming me again."

Through this part of his remarks the ex-Senator was smiling. Then his face became serious.

"I am not returning with the title and vestments of office," he said. "I am bearing none of the honors of public office. I am here as a private citizen. I am your neighbor and your fellow citizen. and I believe this is the finest honor that can be accorded to a man This is the finest tribute a man's friends and neighbors ever could give."

Time to Give Thanks.

Reminding that the homecoming was no occasion for speeches, Reed added that it was rather "a time for the expression of my thanks."

The retiring leader spoke of the choice of residence made by other men who have quit public life in Washington. Many preferred to remain in the National Capital or in the large centers of the East.

"Those places have their attractions, of course," Reed asserted. "but I would rather come back here and live with my friends and neighbors in Kansas City and in Missouri than be the King of any country on the face of the earth."

As Reed turned to go, scores of hands reached up to help him down from the stand. A thunder of cheers reverberated to the tall ceiling.

The band was playing. James A. Reed, citizen of Kansas City, Mo., walked with Mrs. Reed through the throng to a waiting motor car to go to their home.

Former Senator Reed tonight was guest of honor at a dinner attended by 600 persons.

Besides Reed, speakers at the dinner were John H. Atwood, his former law partner; Dr. George H. Combs; Miss Violet Thompson, president of the Women's Committee in Industry, and Conrad Mann. president of the Kansas City Chamber of Commerce. A message from W. H. H. Platt, president of the Kansas City Bar Association, was read by Judge C. A. Burney, Bishop Thomas Lillis gave the invocation.

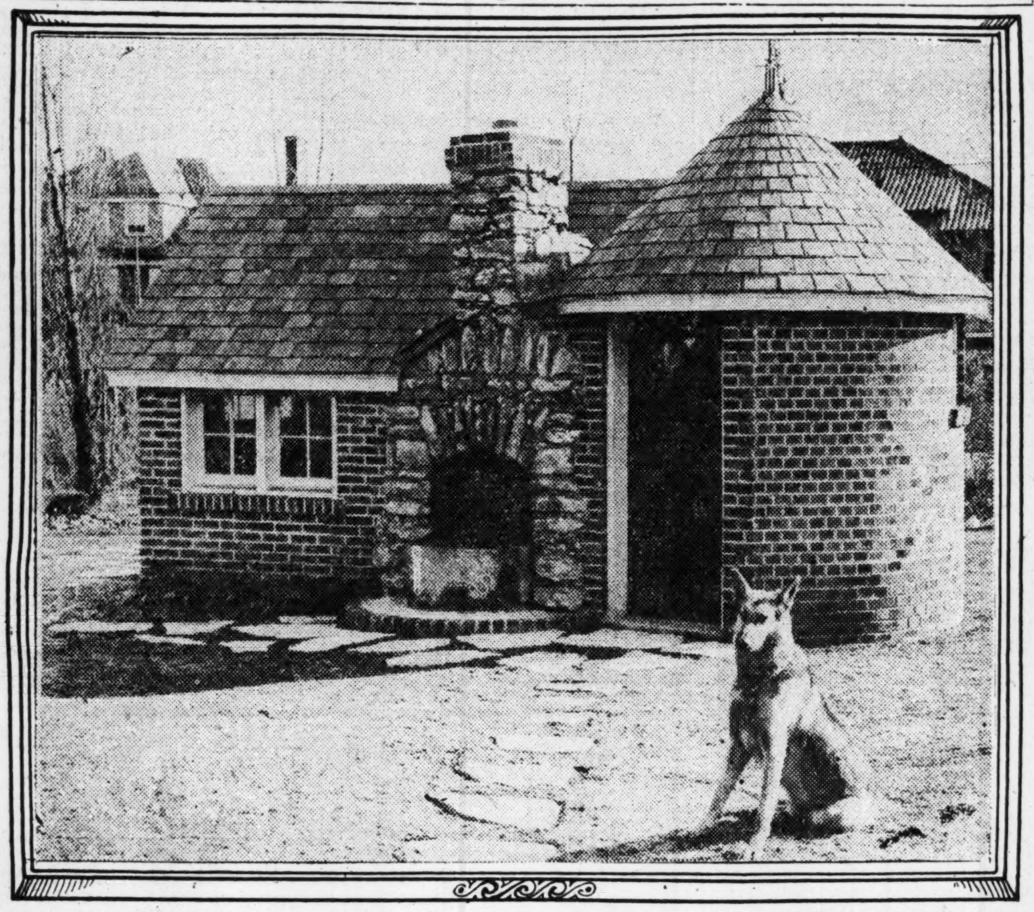
Phillips, until recently chairman of the Missouri Workmen's Compensation Commission will be the chief speaker at a banquet of the alumni of the School of Commerce and Finance St. Louis University to be held at the Busy Bee Tea Room at 6 p. m. German Shepherd Dog and His $4000 Kennel



—By a Post-Dispatch Staff Photographer

DOFFO VON HOHENTANN and the expensive house built for his use by his master, C. P. De Lore, chemical manufacturer, in the rear of his home at 6336 Forsythe boulevard.

$4000 Doghouse Built For German Shepherd

C. P. De Lore Houses Pedigreed Animal in Handsome Quarters Behind His Home, 6336 Forsythe Blvd.

There is nothing ritzy about Doffo von Hohentann, although his blooded German shepherd ancestry might justify him in holding his chops a little higher than the common run of mutts.

And the fact that his owner, C. P. DeLore, chemical manufacturer. 6336 Forsythe boulevard, has built a home for him in the back yard at an approximate cost of $4000 hasn't gone to his head. Why should the great-grandson of Nores von der Kriminalpolize, the veritable Officer Pupp of Ditzenbach Wuertt, Germany, get excited about a miniature English country house?

The home of Doffo is unusual. Designed to harmonize with the rambling structure in which the De Lores live, it is constructed of variegated matt brick with a roof of variegated Vermont slate. One enters through a door of rustic design, the hardware for which was especially made. Part of the interior of the building is used for the storing of garden hose, hoes, rakes and other such implements but the greater part of the space is occupied with two large cages, raised about two feet from the floor level, with large windows opening to the south.

In one of these cages Doffo spends a great part of the day sunning his great gray body. Or, if he feels so inclined, he walks out the window and runs around in a large yard in the rear. The yard is enclosed with the best copper wire available, the netting being about 10 feet high.

Under the lodge, in what might be called the basement, a pit has been constructed in which Doffo may find a cool refuge in the hot days which are coming. The floor has been covered with crushed rock and many a dog would give his back teeth for the right to bury his nose in the cool pulverized rock when the weather has him whipped. This pit is protected from the flies by screens. It may be entered from the lodge itself or through an outside entrance in the yard.

Built in the front of the lodge, but on the exterior, is an open fireplace, but this is just a decoration so far as Doffo is concerned. It is used by the yardman as a place in which to burn leaves and rubbish. The lodge itself has no heating system. Doffo spends extremely cold nights inside the DeLore home.

Each day he rides with the master to work at the plant at the junction of the Mississippi and River des Peres. Here in another kennel lives Lady of Rumsey Park with several of Doffo's puppies. After a brief visit, Doffo returns home with the chauffeur. There are many walks in the park with friends who love to take him out, and there is always home to come back to in the evening. Nothing like it, after all.

De Target Kennel, the lodge is called. It is named for an ancestor of De Lore's, a French nobleman. who in 1767, three years after the founding of St Louis, founded a settlement at Carondelet in the hope of making it the "Birmingham of America" and annexing St. Louis as a suburb. The only St. Louisians be succeeded in attracting away from the trading post were Laclede's young officers. who had a weakness for dancing with De Target's pretty daughters.

It is a fitting tradition to overshadow a dog of such noble lineage as that of Doffo, who won the purple ribbon for the best shepherd dog at the 1925 show of the Mississippi Valley Kennel Club, and whose puppy, Arden de Target, was judged best shepherd puppy in the 1927 show. Doffo's sire is Vasco vom Vestengau and his mother Reina von Vestengau. Farther back in the family tree are such names as Ewald vom Gigelberg, Jutta von Vestengau, Kuno Edelweiss, Erwin vom Siegestor, Marc von Hohen Espsch and a lot of others that cannot even be growled.

Trained to his many tricks by German commands, Doffo, after four years in America, now performs in response to English commands, too. He is seven years old.

Shonts, former head of the Interborough Rapid Transit Co., is dying in destitution, according to her lawyer in arguing for immediate payment of a judgment for $149,545 against Percy Jay Fuller, broker.

The judgment against the broker was obtained on allegations that she gave money and bonds to Fuller for investment and collection of interest, taking a receipt, which later was stolen. The judgment was stayed on the report of a Referee that Fuller never received service of notice in the action which was not defended. Fuller, who denied withholding any property or giving any receipt, is now on bail pending an appeal on a four-year conviction to Atlanta prison for using the mails to defraud.

FAMILY TRIES TO SAVE YOUTH FROM GALLOWS

St Louisans Plan Appeal for Alphonse Reilly, Sentenced in California.

As Alphonse Reilly, 21-year-old former golf caddy here, paces a death cell in San Quentin prison, under sentence to be hanged May 17 for the murder of a Los Angeles shoe store manager on Jan. 9, members of his family in St. Louis are preparing to conduct a final fight to save him from the gallows.

The father, mother, four sisters and three brothers hope that if an appeal to the California Supreme Court fails, Gov. Young of that State will see fit to commute the sentence to life imprisisonment Just as they all contributed what they could from slender savings to send an older brother, Cornelius Reilly, to Los Angeles, where he remained seven weeks until the trial closed early last week, the family plans to continue their efforts.

Four Sisters, Three Brothers Here

His parents are Mr. and Mrs. Martin Reilly of 1427 Hodiamont avenue. The sisters are Mrs. Cecelia Kohn of 2559 West Sullivan avenue; Mrs. Margaret Tate, who lives on the St. Charles Rock road, St. Louis County; Mrs. Winnie Adams of 6123 Ella avenue, and Mary Reilly, 12, who lives with the parents. The brothers, besides Cornelius, are Joseph and John Reilly, who also live with their parents.

Cornelius Reilly returned to the small grocery at 4663 Page boulevard, which he and his wife runs yesterday, and at intervals between waiting on customers, all of whom seemed to know of "Bunny's" predicament and to sympathize with the brother, related the story of "the kid's" life to a Post-Dispatch reporter.

"My brother," he said, "was born in St. Louis and attended Notre Dame Parochial School. On Saturdays and Sundays, he caddied at the Glen Echo Country Club. One o the golfers, an attorney, became interested in him and told him to come to see him when he finished school. "Bunny" graduated and went to the lawyer's office. He received a job as office boy.

Decides to Enlist in Navy.

"He kept on caddying for his boss once in awhile. After about a year, though, he went to work as a clerk for the McQuay-Norris Manufacturing Co. He stayed there for about six months and decided to enlist in the navy."

Against the opposition of his family, the boy signed up for four years in February, 1924. He trained at San Diego, went on a world cruise on the U. S. S. Mullany and then, tiring of the life, deserted, Nov. 9, 1926.

Three months later he gave himself up at San Diego and served almost a year in the "brig" at the Mare Island Navy Yard, the brother said.

Kills Shoe Store Owner.

The youth obtained and later gave up a $14-a-week job washing dishes in a Long Beach, Cal., restaurant, and, on the afternoon of Jan. 9, entered Sandelman's shoe store. He bought a pair of shoes and some socks, then announced he had no money, produced a revolver and told the manager to go into the back of the establishment. When Sandelman refused and started toward the front door to call a policeman, young Reilly, first warning him four times to stop, according to the brother, began shooting. One of the four bullets lodged below Sandelman's heart and Reilly ran out, dashed through an alley, entered a tailoring shop and was captured

Cornelius said his brother's pride and desire to return home wearing good clothes and with money in his pockets kept him from appealing to his family for assistance, which wolud have been given gladly.

Except for Cornelius, members of the youth's family have not seen him since he joined the Navy. He ceased writing shortly after he deserted, it was said.

Appeal will be taken on the ground that the trial Judge erred in permitting allegedly improper statements to be made to the jury by the prosecution, the brother asserted.

TWO ADMIT HOLDUP MURDER OF DRUGGIST

James Wyatt, 20 and Otto Morgan, 24, Held for Killing C. C. Ladrick in E. St. Louis.

Two men arrested Friday by East St. Louis police, investigating the murder of Charles C. Ladrick, druggist, who was shot to death in his store at 1401 Missouri avenue, East St. Louis, last Sunday, confessed the killing last night.

They are Jesse Wyatt, 20 years old, of 1131A St. Louis avenue, East St. Louis, and Otto Morgan, 24, of 25 North Fourteenth street, East St. Louis, Wyatt admitting firing two shots at Ladrick when he resisted a holdup, police said.

Wyatt and Morgan said they passed the drug store on their way to a dance in Madison, and Morgan remarked as they reached the store that it was "a good night for a holdup." Wyatt agreed, and leaving Morgan at the entrance to the store, went in himself. Ladrick was alone at the prescription counter when Wyatt commanded him to hold up his hands. Instead, the druggist reached for a revolver.

Wyatt fired two shots, one striking Ladrick in the abdomen, the other in the heart. The druggist died without firing his pistol and Wyatt ran out and escaped with his companion. They went on to the dance.

Suspicion was directed to Wyatt when police, convassing the neighborhood, learned that he had been away from home on the night of the killing. He lives within a block of the drug store. A revolver, recently cleaned, was found in his room.

Morgan was arrested when police learned he associated with Wyatt and was also absent from home the night of the murder.

ST. LOUIS POLICE BOARD LIKELY TO BE NAMED SOON

Four Mentioned for Posts Are G. T. Kollas, Daniel Bartlett, Dietrich Hedenkamp and J. L. Ayres.

Appointment of four new members of the St. Louis Board of Police Commissioners by Gov. Caulfield is expected within a few days. The Governor some time ago said he would not make the appointments until after the city primary election which was held Friday, and in a talk with newspaper men in Jefferson City yesterday he said he probably would come to St. Louis in a day or two to consider the appointments.

Meanwhile St. Louis political leaders have been discussing the probable personnel of the new board and have named four men that they believe have the best chance of succeeding the present four appointive members. The Mayor is an ex-officio member

The four men most prominently mentioned are George T. Kollas, a real estate dealer; Daniel Bartlett, lawyer and former partner of the Governor; Dietrisk Hedenkamp, vice president of the American Exchange National Bank and officer of a bank building and equipment company, with Joseph T. Ayres, an automobile dealer and former policeman.

Those speculating on the appointments do not agree as to which one of the four might be named president of the board, a position that the Governor offered to former Mayor Frederick H. Kreismann some weeks ago. Kreismann did not want the job.

Col. Allen C. Orrick, present head of the board, has another year to serve of the term for which he was appointed, but it is said he wishes to retire with the other members, leaving the Governor free to appoint a complete new board. Other members of the present board are Frank L. Magoon, Arthur J. Freund and Henry Kortjohn Jr., besides Mayor Miller and Secretary T. H. Bartelsmeyer.

In detailing the remarkable growth of the International Shoe Co. to the Post-Dispatch, President Rand yesterday cited the co-operation of the employes and officers of the organization as primarily responsible for the huge volume of business and the company's low overhead expense as the agent of the multi-million annual earnings.

"Eighty-five per cent of the stock is held by officers, employes and the heirs of officers," he said. "We have 5619 stockholders, and of that number, about 5000 are working for the company. Instead of working for a group of stockholders, our employes, as stockholders, are working for themselves. The men who have made fortunes out of the International Shoe Co., are the men who for many years have put their money and all of their efforts into the company.

Overhead Is Kept Low.

"Our overhead expense, on a percentage basis, compares favorably with what it was 15 years ago. In spite of the increased cost of operations that followed the war, we have kept our overhead low by centralizing as much as possible and by acquiring tanneries and other contributory businesses necessary to shoe manufacturing.

"Our subsidiary plants (tanneries of sole leather, and upper leather; factories making all leather counters, heels and soles, rubber heels and soles, welting, box toes, cartons and containers, chemicals, cements, etc.) produced in 1928, shoe materials and shoe supplies amounting to $78,927,505, which, combined with our sales, made an aggregate of $201,622,037* business transacted.

"One of the sound principles of economy which has been followed by the company since its organization has been the payment of comparatively small salaries to its officers and chief executives, who have taken their rewards and compensation primarily from earnings realized by the company and distributed them in the form of dividends. For instance, the president and other executive officers receive salaries of $5000 a year.

"This tells the story of the International Shoe Company's success."

Rose From $25 a Month.

Although a man who has risen in 30 years from a $25-a-month salesman to the presidency of a $100,000,000 corporation might well feel proud of his achievement, there was nothing of pride in Rand's voice as he sketched the early history of the Roberts-Johnson-Rand and Peters companies, and the joint history of the International from the date of the merger on.

Back in the early eighties, Henry Oscar Rand, well-to-do planter in Marshall County, Miss., with his two nephews, Jackson and Oscar Johnson, organized a general merchandise business at Holly Springs, Mass., under the name Rand, Johnson & Co. In 1888, Edgar E. Rand, the eldest son of Oscar Rand, entered the business.

Rand Sr., died in 1892, leaving approximately $6000 to his widow and four children. The following year, Jackson and Oscar Johnson and Edgar Rand purchased a shoe jobbing business in Memphis, only to sell it four years later, after a yellow fever epidemic had brought the enterprise to a virtual standstill for three months.

Shoe Concern Is Formed.

The three men came to St. Louis and here they met John C. Roberts, who had just gotten out of the Hamilton-Brown Shoe Co. Several conferences followed and the four formed the Roberts-Johnson-Rand Shoe Co. The authorized capital of the concern was $250,000, of which $190,000 worth of stock, all the money the partners could raise, was issued.

With their capital the partners purchased shoes which were sold to retailers by the 12 salesmen they employed. The concern received a middleman's profit and did about $1,500,000 worth of business the first year, 1898. Six months of that year had passed when Frank Hand, a younger brother of Edgar, fresh from Vanderbilt University, at Nashville, went to work for $25 a month, first as a stock clerk and then as a salesman. He invested in the company $5000 of the money he had inherited from his father.

In 1900, the company started the manufacture of shoes in a small way, producing 250 pairs a day, and continuing its jobbing business. Paying small dividends, and turning the rest of the earning into operating capital, the concern grew through the years until 1910.

Two Big Firms Unite.

In 1911, sales amounted to $12,000,000. Meanwhile, the Peters Shoe Co., which, with its predecessors, had been in operation since 1836, had built up a business with annual sales of $8,000,000 in 1911. The companies merged and produced the International Shoe Co. with assets of $21,000,000, of which $8,250,000* were tangible, and the remainder was good will. At this point the jobbing business ended.

In the war period, the company took Government contracts on a basis of 2 per cent profit. As Rand explained it, "we were trying to do our Government a service. We produced shoes as nearly at cost as possible. Two per cent is about as close as any company can figure on a large contract. All we wanted was to turn out the shoes without impairing our capital, and we were able to accomplish that.

"At the same time we kept taking care of our regular trade. Some companies took nothing but war contracts, and when the war was over, their profits from that source ended, and they were left without a market for their product."

Total Assets $100,000,000.

By 1920, the capitalization of the company had been increased to $25,000,000. A reorganization took place March 16 of that year, and the $100 a share common stock was exchanged for six shares of a new no par value stock. The capitalization was increased to $52,548,676, and by the last of 1925, had been raised to more than $70,00,000. On Nov. 30, 1927, the no par value common was exchanged on a four for one basis for a new no par value stock. The net assets of the company, on Nov. 30, 1928, amounted to $98,325,695, the total assets to more than $100,000,000, and the company now is capable of producing 200,000 pairs of shoes a day.

Since the merger, the International's net income after paying income taxes has amounted to $126,171,736. Of this amount, 56 per cent, or more than $70,000,000, has been retained in the business. The rest has gone to the stockholders; the outside investors, who hold only 15 per cent of the outstanding 3,760,000 shares, the employes, who form the bulk of the stockholders in numbers, and the officers, who hold the bulk of the stock in shares, and who constitute a majority of the millionaires.

"This company has not 'made millionaires' " President Rand said. "Instead it has given to a group of fine men an opportunity and business association in which they could develop and give expression to the best within themselves."

WOMAN WHO ACCUSED MOTHER OF MURDER DECLARED INSANE

Commission Finds Parent "Truthful but Primitive"; Charge of Killing to Be Dropped.

BENTON HARBOR, Mich., March 9.—A sanity commission, appointed by Circuit Judge Charles E. White, reported today that Mrs. Oakel Gorham, 23 years old, of Dowagiac, Mich., who charged her mother, Mrs. Ethel Lewis, 48, with the killing of several babies, is mentally unbalanced and should be confined in an institution for the insane.

The elder woman, the commission reported, "seems truthful but primitive." The commission recommended that Mrs. Lewis be sent to the state home for the feeble minded at LaPeer, Mich.

Mrs. Gorham's accusations, the commission report said, were the result of delusions.

The findings of the commission, make it virtually certain the mother and daughter will not be tried on the first degree murder charges now pending against them as the result of the death of Mrs. Gorham's five months' old baby, several weeks ago.

Piles Now Cured Without Surgery

The old theory that surgery was the only method by which hemorrhoids (piles) could be successfully cured has been wholly disproved. This treacherous affliction which slowly but surely undermines the health of its victims, if taken in time, can be successfully treated without recourse to surgical aid. All this is fully explained in a new book, fully illustrated and copyrighted, just published by the noted rectal specialist, Dr. McCleary, 566 Elms Blvd., Excelsior Springs, Mo. It describes in detail the mild McCleary treatments by which more than 15,000 persons living in all parts of the United States have been cured. If you or any of your relatives or friends suffer from piles or rectal trouble in any form, write today for this free book and their list of cured patients in your community. They will be sent in plain wrapper, postpaid.

SCENT OF ALCOHOL LEADS POLICE TO 200-GALLON STILL

Federal Warrants Issued Against Five Men Arrested at Rutger Street Plant.

Warrants charging possession and manufacture of liquor and possession of a still were issued yesterday by United States Commissioner Atkins against five men arrested by police at 3325 Rutger street.

Police were attracted by the odor of alcohol to a shed in the back yard. They found a 200-gallon still, 15,000 gallons of mash and 10 gallons of alcohol. At the house they arrested John, Milton and Clarence Krankel and Louis Boitano, who said they resided there, and Joseph Mitchell, 314 Chouteau avenue. John Krankel said that he had rented the shed to a man whose name he did not know.

M'DANIEL STARTS CAMPAIGN, MILLER GOES ON VACATION

Democratic Nominee for Mayor Plans to Make Most of Three Weeks in Which He Has to Work.

Lawrence McDaniel, former Circuit Attorney, nominated as the Democratic candidate for Mayor in Friday's primary election, began his campaign against Mayor Miller, Republican nominee to succeed himself, at 6 o'clock yesterday morning, when he telephoned a Republican friend to solicit the latter's vote.

During the morning McDaniel continued laying his plans to win the election April 2, undaunted by the fact that St. Louis has not chosen a Democrat as its chief executive since 1905. In the afternoon he held a private conference with friends and advisers to consider campaign management, finance and other questions. He expects to get his campaign actively started within a few days, because he has only three weeks.

Mayor Miller, on the other hand, left the city yesterday for a stay of three or four days to rest after his strenuous campaign of more than two months. His secretary was unwilling to say where Miller had gone, and it was said at the Mayor's office that no campaign plans were ready to be announced.

Harmony in Both Parties.

Both Republican and Democratic leaders anticipate harmony within their party organizations in support of the respective nominees. McDaniel's hope, of course, lies in winning enough votes from independents and Republicans to overcome the normal Republican majority of about 40,000. The task is not impossible since Miller defeated the Democratic nominee by only 3129 votes in 1925, former Mayor Kiel beat his Democratic opponent in 1921 by 9610, and Kiel, when elected to his first term in 1913, was just 2300 ahead of the Democrat, while an independent got 4528 votes. Kiel was defeated by Miller for the Republican nomination on Friday by 13,900 majority.

Miller counts on the customary Republican preponderance and on meeting successfully any issues raised by McDaniel.

Isaac A. Hedges, manager of Miller's primary campaign, announced that Miller's campaign headquarters in the Holland Building had been closed. Hedges is retiring from active leadership, because the task of management and campaigning is now in the hands of the Republican City Committee and its chairman, Park Commissioner Pape, who was a Miller supporter.

Hedges declared there would be a united Republican front against McDaniel, without a sore spot in the G. O. P., and that the Republican City Committee would be a unit in backing Miller. Thirty-three members of the committee favored Miller's nomination and 23 were for Kiel, with one committeewoman inactive because of illness.

G. O. P. Campaign to Start Late.

Mayor Miller would continue to point out progress of the city and its accomplishments under his administration, Hedges said, but he did not know what issues might be raised between the Democratic and Republican nominees. It would be nearly a week before the Republican campaign gets under way, Hedges said. He praised Kiel's magnanimity in defeat and the former Mayor's immediate reiteration of his pledge to support Miller. Circuit Clerk Schmoll, a Kiel lieutenant, announced he would support Miller.

McDaniel was supported by 27 members of the Democratic City Committee and claimed at least two more. There is no indication that the party body will not be united behind him against Miller, and McDaniel said yesterday that he expected to have the entire committee aiding him, as none of those who had backed his Democratic opponents had anything against him. Chairman Mestres of the Democratic City Committee will be aided by some sort of special campaign committee. Prior to the primary McDaniel was his own manager, without an organization, and supplied his own campaign funds. He carried every ward but the Seventeenth and lost that by only 17 votes.

McDaniel Optimistic.

"I expect to be elected," McDaniel told a Post-Dispatch reporter. "The primary demonstrates the fact that there are no party lines here. I shall proceed immediatly to organize a Campaign Committee, having called a meeting of a few advisers for this afternoon. So far as I am concerned, I shall make the same kind of a race for election that I did for nomination, campaigning strictly on the issues.

"The issues, which are my platform, are: Business administration and economy, building a subway annexation of a part of St. Louis County, completion of bond issue items, improvement of the river front, bettering the railroad terminal facilities and rapid transit.

"From my observation and experience in campaigning and campaign expenses, it was evident the Mayor's organization had spent at least $250,000 for his renomination. In the event of his election, the taxpayers must return this to the contributors, plus interest, and the interest rate will be enormous. It is my purpose to be elected and avoid the necessity of the taxpayers' paying for the primary campaign. The only way the contributors can get their money back is by having business with the city, receiving contracts from the city and preferment or favoritism over somebody else.

Says His Campaign Cost $600.

"I spent about $600 in my campaign, and it was all my own. About $200 went for radio time, the filing fee was $200 and printing cost about $200.

"I am confident of my election because the people want a change. From expressions I have received during the primary campaign, I know many persons feel a change would benefit the city. The participation of so many Democrats in the Republican primary, for both Republican contestants, is an indication of the feeling."

Jocularly, McDaniel added that the election contest would be a "sort of neighborhood row," as he and the Mayor reside two blocks apart. Miller's home is at 6100 Pershing avenue and McDaniel's at 5936 Waterman boulevard.

Both Miller and McDaniel are advocating, with certain provisos, creation of rapid transit facilities, completion of the bond issue projects as soon as possible, riverfront improvement, annexation of parts of St. Louis County, smoke abatement and speedy completion of the municipal airport. Miller also is urging reclamation of land along the northern river front, for use in part as another air field, and McDaniel is pointing to the advantages of a handy airport on the East Side.

Miller's Majority 13,900.

The Republican vote totaled 169,850, Miller receiving 91,875 and Kiel 77,975, with Miller carrying 18 of the 28 wards. The Democratic vote was 18,316, of which McDaniel polled 11,484, former Federal Judge Henry S. Priest 3151 and Dr. John H. Simon, 1913, nominee, 3681. The aggregate vote was 188,166, not quite 54 per cent of the registration of 348,951. In the mayoralty primary of 1925 the vote was 174,823, or 58 per cent of a registration of 299,046.

Comptroller Nolte, Republican, was nominated without opposition for a fourth successive term. There was no Democratic candidate for this office.

Party nominees for membership on the Board of Aldermen from the 14 odd-numbered wards also were chosen, the Democratic candidates without opposition. The 14 Republican incumbents sought renomination but four of them were defeated, the other 10 being successful. The nominees chosen in place of the four defeated ones and those whom they defeated are:

Seventh Ward, Louis Fischer defeated Alderman Henry Wander.

Ninth Ward, former Alderman Martin D. Lohmann defeated Alderman Andrew A. Koettker.

Twenty-third Ward, Rudolph H. Brock defeated Alderman Clinton E. Udell.

Twenty-fifth Ward, Clarence C. Kaufmann defeated Alderman Sylvester A. Nangle.

"People Have Spoken," Says Kiel to Miller; "Congratulations."

Former Mayor Kiel yesterday sent the following note of congratulation to Mayor Miller at City Hall:

"Dear Mr. Mayor: You have my best wishes. The people have spoken. You are their choice. Accept my heartiest congraulations."

LABOR FEDERATION HAS NOT OK'D NATIONAL ORIGINS LAW

President Green Not Sure It Will Restrict Immigration Properly.

By the Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, March 9.—The American Federation of Labor is not ready to indorse the revision of the immigration quotas provided in the controversial national origins provision which is about to go into effect, President William Green said today.

"We are not sure that this law," he said, "would serve to restrict immigration in the very definite and practical way which labor desires in order to protect its economic and social interests. Until we are certain of this fact, we are committed to the existing quota provisions as embodied in the immigation law."

The statement of Green was written as a denial of a statement made by Senator Reed (Rep.), Pennsylvania, the chairman of the national origins provision, in Senate debate. Reed interpreted a telegram from Green as indorsing the provision.

Meanwhile, foes of the origins provision are preparing for a campaign at the forthcoming extra session to repeal or postpone it. Otherwise it goes into effect July 1. The provision would further restrict immigration to this country but the quota basis of the various nations would be revised drastically, England getting an increase and Germany being the principal loser.

SMITH TO GET LAETARE MEDAL

Notre Dame Honor Most Notable U. S. Catholic Can Receive.

By the Associated Press.

NOTRE DAME, Ind., March 9.—Alfred E. Smith of New York is to be the recipient of the Laetare medal for 1929, administrative authorities of the University of Notre Dame will announce officially tomorrow morning.

The Laetare medal, considered the most notable distinction that can be conferred upon a Catholic of the United States, is presented annually by the University of Notre Dame on Laetare Sunday, the fourth Sunday of Lent. It is comparable to the Golden Rose, which is conferred by the Pope at Rome each year on some Catholic who has distinguished himself in world affairs. Official presentation of the medal will be arranged after University authorities have conferred with former Gov. Smith.

JUDICIAL EXPERTS SOUGHT FOR STUDY OF ENFORCEMENT

President Will Make Careful Examination and May Not Name Commission for a Month.

By the Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, March 9.—Herbert Hoover closed his first week in the Presidency today with a busy round of conferences on farm relief, law enforcement, and the first important foreign problem of his administration, the situation created by the Mexican revolution.

Leaders in both the House and Senate were included among his callers, bringing with them the problem of a legislative program for the special session of Congress which Mr. Hoover has called for next month while Secretary Kellogg visited the White House to discuss developments in the Mexican insurrection. The State Department head assured the President that events of the last 24 hours had given no cause for increased alarm.

Word went out during the day that the President had not as yet considered the personnel of his proposed commission for a thorough study of Federal law enforcement and court procedure. Mr. Hoover, it was said, has set up wide legal and judicial experience as the first requirement of the members of the commission.

May Not Act for a Month.

The President is understood to desire time for a careful study of persons so qualified and porbaly will come to no definite decision regarding the commission's makeup for a month at least.

Chairman M'Nary of the Senate Agriculture Committee informed the President that he intended to open hearings shortly on a farm relief measure, with a view to having a bill drafted for the consideration of the Senate when the special session meets April 15. It is his purpose at that time to make the measure the Senate's unfinished business and he predicted that it would be disposed of within a week.

From cairman Snell of the House Rules Committee, Mr. Hoover heard that it is proposed that the House follow much the same plan and he, too, predicted that a farm bill could be approved by the House in less than a week. He placed the agricultural problem first upon a tentative legislative calendar, followed by tariff revision and Congressional reapportionment, should the Senate approve a bill dealing with the latter.

Senator McNary proposes to take the farm measure he introduced at the last session of Congress as a basis for discussion at the coming hearings. This bill provides for the establishment of a large Federal revolving fund to assist co-operative organizations in solving their marketing problems and the creation of a national Farm Board to handle the surplus crop situation.

Senator Brookhart, (Rep.) Iowa, declared in the course of a conference with Mr. Hoover that the Senate was in general agreement on the essential features of farm legislation. A sufficiently large appropriation from the Government, he said, would obviate any necessity for an equalization fee.

Urges Action on Muscle Shoals.

Representative Almon (Dem.), Alabama, brought Muscle Shoals into the farm discussion with a recommendation to the President that the disposition of this project, which has been before Congress for more than a decade, be included in the proposed farm relief legislation. Mr. Hoover, he said, did not indicate what action he would take, but said it seemed to him that the question could be settled by Congress.

Others of the day's callers included Senator Harris (Dem.), Georgia, who congratulated the President upon his law enforcement stand, Senator Ransdell (Dem.), Louisiana, who urged Mr. Hoover's support for his bill creating a national department of public health; Representative Andrew of Massachusetts, and the entire Kentucky congressional delegation, who called to pay their respects.

Aside from meeting a long list of callers, Mr. Hoover had as his guest at luncheon T. T. C. Gregory, a neighbor from Palo Alto, who served with him in relieving post-war conditions in Europe.

cause Obregon himself frequently used it as headquarters.

The Post-Dispatch correspondent, after journeying by foot and by taxicab through Nogales, was admitted to military headquarters by a frowning sentry and gravely introduced to the revolutionary leaders.

Staff of Tall Young Men.

Most of the men in the room were at least six feet tall. They were all under the age of 40. There was not a gray beard in sight. There was a profusion of glittering small arms—gold and onyx automatics imported from Spain, big revolvers with hand-carved ivory grips, special American forty-fives with buckhorn handles. Above a piano, draped with a brilliant-hued Mexican shawl, was a massive lithograph of "Christ the King."

Congressman Aurelio Manrique, towering six feet three, and wearing a magnificent shovel beard and long mustaches, was delegated by Gen. Topete as a spokesman to the Post-Dispatch correspondent. If a question puzzled him, Manrique repeated it in Spanish to Gen. Topete, and received an answer which in turn he passed on.

"We are optimistic," said Manrique. "We believe the revolution cannot fail. It may require a few days. It may take weeks. We cannot tell. But our forces are too strong to be defeated by Calles.

Attitude Toward Church.

"To what extent, you inquire, is the Clerical party backing our movement? let me say this. That the men lined up with Gen. Escobar, Gen. Manzo, Gen. Topete, and the revolutionary forces, formerly were Obregonistas rather than Clericals. It is true that here in Sonora we have lifted the ban on the Catholic churches. We believe in religious tolerance. We ask only that the church shall obey the law.

"We stand squarely behind the manifesto of the revolutionary leaders which denounced Calles as a clown and excoriated Portes Gil as a weak mannikin who slavishly follows the dictatorial orders of his master. Our troops are advancing everywhere. I do not see how the revolution can fail."

Hour by hour the dispatches came in. Rough, sun-bronzed men chuckled, swore happily, slapped shoulders when a messenger brought the news that Juarez had fallen. Another telegram from Gen. Jose Escobar, Commander-in-Chief of all revolutionary troops, stating that he was advancing from Saltillo to take San Luis Potosi, which stands directly along the route to Mexico City, caused a similar demonstration. Gen. Borquez gravely read out the reports, translating telegrams for the correspondents.

Tourists Enter at Will.

Meanwhile, in the handsome bar a stone's throw from military headquarters, a gentleman with an elk tooth watch charm pushed a small glass across the smooth surface of the bar and called: "Hey, Emilio, let's have another one of these things," and American sightseers or pleasure seekers, waved on by the revolutionary officials, crossed International street in their automobiles, saluting joyfully that great electric sign over the first Mexican cantona which calls out in bright electric lights. "Drink High Life Beer."

The revolution in Nogales thus far is only words, conferences, telegrams, bottles of beer, several hundred men, however, equipped with rifles, machine guns and small arms, however, are quartered about the city. In badly lighted warehouses at night, gathered in groups in sun-baked streets by day, one sees them with their rifles. Troop trains too, at whose windows are wrinkled, impassive yaqui faces stand on the siding in the town, their locomotives, with steam up, wheezing and puffing.

Nogales, and all of Sonora, in fact, is prepared for war, but in this particular State at least there is no enemy. All the Federal troops, and all the former partisans of Portes Gil and Calles, save one, Gen. Armente, now being pursued in the mountains, shook off the old allegiance at the first word of revolution, and joined fortunes with Escobar, Aguirre, Topete and Manzo.

The particular straw that broke the camel's back, it is now generally said by revolutionary leaders, was an alleged attempt of Calles to control the forthcoming elections, dictating Portes Gil's successor.

Seeks Entries for $25,000 Air Prize.

By the Associated Press.

VIENNA, March 9.—Col. W. E. Easterwood Jr., of Dallas, Tex., who has offered a prize of $25,000 for a non-stop flight from Rome to Dallas, arrived today in an airplane which Premier Mussolini had placed at his disposal. After conferring with Government officials in hope of interesting Austrian aviators in the flight, Easterwood will proceed by airplane to Berlin, Paris and London with the same object.

WEBSTER'S 809 N. 7th St.

Here Is the Story I Promised to Tell You About Laundry Prices

They Are Coming Down!

and Joe Glick is Responsible for the Reduction.

Nobody invited me to come to St. Louis. I came on my own responsibility and have been operating Glick's Laundry, at 5190 Delmar. If I do say it myself, this laundry has been a success. I have built up a substantial trade among the best people in St. Louis, and have established the reputation of being a square dealer who is willing to lay all the cards face up.

Now, About Prices

Prices have been very much the same at virtually all St. Louis laundries. It may be that my most modern equipment, my carefully trained organization and my "live and let live" policy enables me to operate at a lower cost.

But, whatever the reason may be, I have found that I can continue to do the highest grade of laundry work at lower prices and still make all the profit to which I am entitled. I find further that I can reduce prices to the extent that St. Louisans can buy their laundry work at prices as low as are charged their relatives in Chicago, Detroit, Kansas City or Indianapolis.

I am not a member of any price fixing combine and do not have to ask permission of any man or group to lower my prices.

I do not belong to any organization which can dictate what I shall or shall not do. If I can reduce my prices and still make a fair profit on my investment that is all I want. I will not charge my customers high prices to protect any other laundries and enable them to make more money. I am interested in Joe Glick and Glick's customers—present and future—and I am playing the game fair because that is the only way to insure continued success in business. I am going to announce tomorrow a new schedule of prices—lower prices. I have decided on MY new prices without consulting any other laundryman. These new low prices are Joe Glick's challenge to the high costs of keeping clean.

We Pay the Insurance

If we tell you we are "responsible" and then immediately contradict ourselves by making you pay your own insurance on your bundle, at a high rate on which we could make another profit, can we say we are dealing squarely? The answer is "no" and consequently Glick's Laundry carries your insurance for you.

Watch for the New Price Lists Tomorrow—and remember, Glick's Laundry and Joe Glick are INDEPENDENT.

Yours very truly,
JOE GLICK

Careful Home Buyers Insist on Insulation

HOW much better it is to think of insulation before you build or buy than to be reminded of it later by wasteful heat-leakage; dampness, chill and draughts!

And how quickly you realize that uninsulated houses are out-of-date when you visit homes that resist the passage of heat . . . that help keep furnace warmth inside during winter and scorching sun heat outside in summer! Celotex, more than any other material, brings these advantages of insulation to American homes. It saves 25% or more on fuel bills, protects health and increases comfort all the year.

As a heat-stopper, Celotex is three times as effective as wood, eight times plasterboard, twelve times brick and twenty-five times concrete. Its effectiveness is proven by the fact that it is used in thousands of refrigerator cars and household refrigerators, as well as in more than 250,000 homes.

When you buy a new house look for the Celotex Sign. It is your assurance of greater home comfort Celotex is the only insulation made from the long, tough fibres of cane. It comes in big, strong boards, 4 feet wide, 7 to 12 feet long and 7/16 inch thick. These boards withstand all kinds of weather and add structural strength to buildings when used as sheathing.

Celotex is also used for insulating roofs; for lining basements, attics and garages; for making comfortable extra rooms out of waste spaces.

As interior finish, Celotex adds new beauty to homes through its natural tan color and delicate fibre texture.

And for plasterbase there is Celotex Lath 18 inches by 48 inches, and 7/16 inch thick. It is especially designed to reinforce against plaster cracks and eliminate lath marks . . . to give finer, smoother plastered walls plus insulation.

AGREEMENT ON BRITISH PACT EXPECTED SOON

Negotiations With Dominions as to Treaty With U. S. Now in Progress.

By the Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, March 9.—Definite action by the British Government on the proposed arbitration treaty between Great Britain and the United States is expected by official and diplomatic circles to be taken shortly.

The new treaty would replace the famous Root arbitration treaty signed between the two countries in April, 1908, which automatically expired last June.

Drafts of a treaty similar to that which the United States had signed with other nations were submitted to the British Ambassador, Sir Esme Howard, late in 1927, but to date the British Government has taken no action. In the interim it is understood the British Foreign Office has been consulting with the dominions.

Exceptions Listed in Pact.

The new treaty confines the subjects which are excepted from arbitration to much closer lines than the Root treaty. The only exceptions in which arbitration would not be allowed are questions of a domestic nature; those involving a third party; those which might interfere with the traditional attitude of the United States under the Monroe doctrine and obligations of the British Empire under the covenant of the League of Nations.

All of the British dominions are understood to have made their position known to the Foreign Office, and discussions now are taking place to meet their views and decide upon a middle course which will meet with the dominions' desires and at the same time not destroy the effectiveness of such a treaty.

Special Clause Is Sought.

It is thought possible in some circles here that both Canada and the Irish Free State might prefer a clause in the treaty permitting them to negotiate directly with the United States questions which concern only them and do not involve other sections of the British Empire. It is not thought likely, however, that either of these dominions would refuse to approve the treaty in the event that such a clause was not inserted.

It has also been suggested that Canada and the Free State might negotiate a separate arbitration treaty with the United States, leaving the treaty with Great Britain to cover the dominions of Australia, South Africa and New Zealand. Although diplomatic circles believe that such separate treaties would be acceptable to the United States, the plan has not received much attention.

When the dominions have decided in their discussions with the Foreign Office just what they desire in the treaty, Sir Esme Howard will be instructed to begin conversations with State Department officials.

AVIATION HOLDING COMPANY IS ORGANIZED IN ST. LOUIS

Love, Bryan & Co. and Agustine & Co., Announce Plan; 500,000 Share Capital.

The organization of the Allied Aviation Industries, Inc., with headquarters in St. Louis, as a holding company for airplane manufacturing and accessories companies, was announced yesterday by the investment firms of Love, Bryant & Co. and Augustine & Co. of St. Louis.

With a capitalization of 500,000 shares of no par value stock, of which 125,000 shares will be issued, the company will own all of the capital stock of the Lambert Aircraft Corporation, the Aviation Accessories Corporation and the Hurricane Aircraft Engine Co. and also proposes to acquire shares in other concerns.

Lambert Aircraft Corporation, named for Samuel B. Lambert, head of Lambert-Graves Motor Co., was organized recently to take over the Mono-Aircraft Co. of Moline, Ill., which makes the Monocoach, Monoprep and Monocoupe planes. Hurricane Aircraft Engine Co. has taken over the aircraft engine department of the Velie Motor Co. Aviation Accessories Corporation was organized to deal in airplane accessories.

Mono-Aircraft and Hurricane are established in Moline but it is contemplated that eventually they will be moved to St. Louis. While the names of the backers of the new organizations have not been announced, it is understood that Lambert and John A. Love of Love, Bryan & Co. will be among the principal figures.

THREE GIVEN UP AS LOST IN LAKE STORM LAND SAFELY

CHICAGO, March 9.—Two men and a woman, who were reported missing in their lake boat Wednesday and given up as lost during a storm, pulled in at the South Chicago coast guard station today, safe and sound although suffering from exposure. They were Nels Jansen, 30, Waukegan fisherman; his wife, Anne, 21, and brother, Charles, 21.

They had drifted in the lake between Waukegan and Grand Haven, but today they succeeded in partly repairing their disabled motors and pulled in under the boat's own power.

One of the worst storms of the winter swept over the lake Wednesday afternoon and night, disabling the small craft. The boat was a 35-foot cabin launch.

SAYS HOOVER LACKS DEMOCRATIC SOUL

Norman Thomas Declares We Act Like Sheep and Are Treated Like Mutton.

Norman Thomas, Socialist candidate for the presidency last November, told about 150 St. Louisans gathered in the assembly room of the Public Library last night what he expected from the Hoover administration. He said the new President undoubtedly would face economic conditions more aggressively than his predecessor, but at best "his approach will be that of a glorified social worker."

"In other words," he said, "we shall see on President Hoover's part a strenuous engineer's effort to make capitalism as efficient as possible. But there will be no statesman-like attempt to abolish waste and increase plenty, to curb exploitation and encourage liberty, to end imperialism and bring about that internationism which is the sole basis for peace. All of these things require a conscious, intelligent and democratic soul, in which Herbert Hoover does not believe and which we may doubt if he understands.

Flowers Instead of Marines.

"The best we may hope for in foreign affairs is not that Mr. Hoover will stay the march of imperialism but that he will say it with flowers instead of with Marines."

Thomas referred to the last campaign as one in which it was important to decide how to pronounce "radio," what lady would most adorn the White House, and how we felt about "the three R'c—race, rum and religion.'

"We made no effort at all to get from the winning candidate any detailed program of his foreign or domestic policy. It gives us a thrill to put men in office with a blank check for them to fill in," he said.

"There is no sign at all that our capitalist system is going to deal constructively with such sore spots as the soft coal and textile industries. The present mania for gambling on Wall street is bound to have dangerous psychological and economic consequences even if it does not result in sharp disaster.

"Milk From Contented Cows."

"Mr. Hoover talks much and probably sincerely about abolishing poverty. He has not talked at all about such relevant facts as we have summarized. Neither has he understood how much poverty is left in America. The system in which he really believes is indicated by the slogan 'Milk from contented cows; and it is yet to be proved whether he can keep his cows contented while they are milked by our private monopolists and holders of special privilege.

"The moral of this tale is that it is idle for the workers with hand and brain to expect one of the two parties which belong to big business to advance their interests as producers or consumers. While we continue to act politically like sheep we cannot much blame the butchers for treating us like mutton."

HAD ARTHRITIS FOR NINETEEN YEARS JOINTS WERE SORE, STIFF AND WEAK

Mrs. Kenner Tells How Simple Remedy Weldona Tablets Quickly Conquered Rheumatism

"I am sixty-five years of age, and have had rheumatism for nineteen years," said Mrs. W. S. Kenner, who resides at 2145 State Street, Granite City, Ill. Mrs. Kenner continued: "Almost every joint in my body was afflicted. My hands, hips, arms, shoulders, knees, ankles and fingers were sore, stiff and swollen. My hands were sore and stiff and small, hard lumps deformed my fingers. My fingers seemed to have lost their feeling, and it was impossible to hold anything because of the weakness and deformity. At times I had to sleep in a chair because of the pain in the joints and the difficulty in finding a comfortable position.

"It was very hard for me to go up or down stairs because of the pain and stiffness in my knee joints. I would have to hold on to a banister to pull myself up and then go up one step at a time. My shoulders were sore and stiff, and it was very painful to raise my hand to my head. I was told time and time again that nothing made in the nature of medicine would reach my case, but reading how many local people had been helped by Weldona tablets I decided to try them. This proved to be the one remedy I had long been looking for. After taking Weldona tablets a short time the pain and stiffness left me and I never felt better in my life. My hands have lost their stiffness and deformity—the pain has all left me and I now do all my own work. I am recommending Weldona tablets to all my friends in church and at meetings. If anyone doubts my statement I would be glad to have them call or write or telephone TRi-City 584M.

$1000 reward to anyone proving that testimonials are not genuine.

Weldona tablets are always put up in a box—never in a bottle. Weldona tablets are recommended for rheumatism and rheumatic conditions only. Weldona tablets are absolutely harmless and will not upset the stomach, affect the heart or any other organ.

The Weldona representative, who now meets the public every day at Walgreen's Drug Store, 514 Washington Av., St. Louis, gladly explains more about this remedy and gives out the 24-page fully illustrated and interesting books, entitled "Germs of Rheumatism," which are absolutely free of charge to all who call or write for them.

The President Asked His Sales Executive to Listen

The president insisted on more profitable sales—and more of them.

So the sales executive put his ear to the ground — The Billionarea—that rich sales territory of Greater St. Louis—and listened to the rumblings of newspaper circulation differences usual to nearly all Metropolitan markets.

Here in St. Louis is the Globe-Democrat with a far-flung circulation dribbling out across the states.

And here in St. Louis is a selling medium, the Post-Dispatch, focused fully upon teeming buyers—multitudes with immense purchasing power.

The Post-Dispatch is the one in which St. Louis advertisers concentrate—

It covers 72% of the English newspaper reading families of St. Louis daily as compared with 43% by the second newspaper.

Here is the Post-Dispatch with a daily circulation in St. Louis so much greater than the second newspaper that the difference equals the population of sizeable cities, not small towns, out in the dim distances where advertising force fades away like evening shadows.

Here in St. Louis is the focus—not the flare.

This is the advertising spotlight of the rich sales area of Metropolitan St. Louis.

Thus the sales executive got down to the facts and got wise to profitable sales.

And he placed his advertising—

As do all who want more profitable sales—and more of them—in the Post-Dispatch!

And here is a recent happening: On Friday, March 8, the Post-Dispatch carried 350 columns of paid advertising, which was more than the three other St. Louis newspapers COMBINED carried. The gain alone of the Post-Dispatch was 103 columns over the corresponding day of last year, while the Globe-Democrat carried only 108 columns all told.

DISTANT EARTHQUAKE JARS ST. LOUIS U. SEISMOGRAPH

Father Macelwane Says It May Take Two Days to Determine Where It Occurred.

Violent earth disturbances were recorded at the seismological laboratory at St. Louis University yesterday morning. The shocks first were noted at 5:19 o'clock and continued until shortly after 9 o'clock. Father Macelwane, head of the seismological work at the university, said the earthquakes were "very distant," and that it might take as long as two days to determine their direction and actual distance.

The seismograph at Fordham University, New York, also recorded earth shocks. It was the opinion at Fordham that the disturbances occurred more than 5000 miles west of New York.

WOMAN HANGS SON, 9, THEN ENDS HER LIFE

Coroner at Imperial, Mo., Decides Mrs. Otto Frederitzi was Mentally Deranged.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

IMPERIAL, Mo., March 9.—Mental derangement due to illness is thought to have been the cause of the hanging of her 9-year-old son, Herold, by Mrs. Blanche Frederitzi, 31, and the subsequent hanging of herself at their home yesterday.

A Coroner's jury returned a verdict of homicide at the hands of his mother last night following an inquest into the death of the boy, her only child. Another jury found the mother had killed herself.

Otto Frederitzi left his wife to operate their confectionery on the main street, and drove to a farm two miles away to assist in digging a well. Mrs. Frederitzi, recently recovered from influenza, had complained for more than a month of severe headaches, and kept Herold from school yesterday to assist her at the store, her husband said.

Neighbors found the store closed about 10 a. m., but no investigation was made until Frederitzi returned home about 6 p. m. Finding the door locked he entered the basement and found his son dead, hanging from a rafter. About his neck was a length of rope. A block of wood indicated that the boy had stood upon it while the rope was made fast, and that it then had been kicked from under him.

Summoning Justice of the Peace C. H. Clement and Deputy Sheriffs, Frederitzi began a search for his wife. Her body was found by Deputy Sheriff W. B. Caudle hanging from a rafter of a garage. Apparently she had jumped from the top of a truck after tying about her neck the rope, of the same kind used in the hanging of her son.

There was no appearance of a struggle on the part of the boy. His hands were not tied and his clothing was not disheveled. A search for notes explaining the act has been made, but nothing was found. Both had been dead several hours. Coroner Walter Gibson of Jefferson County said.

A double funeral will be held at 2 p. m. Monday from the home above the store.

REHEARING ASKED ON ORDER ON COUNTY RATE CUT

Effective Date of 12.2 Per Cent Reduction Is Deferred Pending Ruling.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

JEFFERSON CITY, March 9.—The Missouri Public Service Commission was asked to set aside its recent order for a reduction of 12.2 per cent in the rates of the St. Louis County Water Co. for metered water service and conduct a rehearing of the case, in a motion filed with the commission today by attorneys for the company.

The effective date of the commission's order was March 20, but it will be deferred until the rehearing motion is passed upon by the commission. In the event the motion is overruled and the company appeals, it will be deferred until the courts pass upon the case. If the reduction is sustained, customers of the company will be saved about $100,000 a year.

City Attorney Grand of University City was here today and announced he, too, would file a rehearing motion in a few days, contending the reduction should have been 25 per cent instead of 12.2 per cent.

Attorneys for the company also filed a motion to strike out admissions in briefs prepared by counsel for the company which conceded that certain extensions of the distribution system, installed with money advanced by consumers, and on which refunds were due, were not a proper part of the valuation for a rate base. The commission immediately overruled this motion.

ZEPPELIN WILL FLY TO U. S. IN MAY; WORLD TRIP PLANNED

Navy Department Asked About Reservation for Another Visit by Dirigible.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

NEW YORK, March 9.—The Graf Zeppelin, which visited the United States last year, is to fly here again in May, it was announced today by F. W. Von Meister, following his appointment as special American representative of the Luftschiffbau Zeppelin Co., of Friedrichshafen, Germany. He has been asked to learn from the navy department whether it will be convenient to berth the big airship again at the Lakehurst, N. J. air station "about May 10."

At least two other Atlantic crossings during the year are contemplated for the Graf Zeppelin, Von Meister said, probably in June and July, besides a four-leg round the world flight with stops at Tokio, San Diego and Lakehurst. Like the dirigible's maiden voyage to this country, the projected round trip flights from Friedrichshafen to Lakehurst are being undertaken as a further demonstration of the airship's practicability in trans-Atlantic travel. Passengers, mail and express will be carried. The Graf Zeppelin will again be commanded by Dr. Hugo Eckener.

Italia's Navigator Marries.

LAUSANNE, Switzerland, March 9.—Capt. Filippo Zappi, navigator of the ill-fated Italian dirigible Italia, and one of the two survivors of the Malmgren party, was married today to Mlle. Le Coultre in the little village of Le Sentier. A wedding dinner was attended by Commandant Maddalena of the Italian relief expedition and many notable figures in the Italian aviation and army services.

GUS NATIONS SUES THE CENSOR

Gus O. Nations, former Federal prohibition enforcement officer in this district, filed suit in Circuit Court yesterday for $200,000 against the Censor Publishing Co. and its editor, George C. Dyer, who publish the Censor, a weekly periodical. Nations alleges that in an article printed in the Censor March 7 he was libeled.

The article was an editorial in which the writer confused Gus Nations with his brother, Heber Nations, former State Labor Commissioner, who was convicted of a liquor conspiracy charge and whose appeal is pending.

The Britt Printing and Publishing Co. and three department stores—Scruggs, Vandervoort and Barney, the May Department Stores and Stix, Baer & Fuller—are named as co-defendants in the action as purveyors and distributors of the Censor.

TREATMENT FOR DEAFNESS, HEAD NOISES AND CATARRH SENT FREE!

Offensive Catarrhal Conditions Ended by Home Treatment

Quick Relief for Nasal Catarrh Assured by the Dr. W. O. Coffee Co. Healing Process.

Free Trial Sent to All Sufferers.

This a generous offer. An offer of a regular, scientific, carefully prepared and tested home treatment for catarrh of the nose, throat, head and air passages absolutely free. No strings to it in any way—it is open to everyone—to every catarrh sufferer in the entire United States. Every sufferer, everywhere, who reads this announcement, should unhesitatingly accept it.

There are sure to be thousands of these treatments given away. The more the better; because it is certain that all who make this free test will prove to their satisfaction the worth of the Dr. W. O. Coffee Co. treatment, that—every self-treatment will make a permanent booster.

For no matter how much you are told about the wonders of this way of combating catarrhal conditions, or of the thousands who have been given complete freedom by its use—a real test—a chance to actually try it and its reactions—in your particular case is better than all explanations.

This treatment for catarrh—relieves and forestalls many feared and distressing situations. A real test is better even than the real testimonials from those who have been given that wonderful relief. And when the gift-treatment has been tried, you will wonder why this wonderful method was never called to your attention before.

The treatment was originated by the late Dr. Coffee, who won national renown as a noted catarrh and deafness specialist. He, too, suffered with catarrh, deafness and head noises and many of its complications. Innumerable treatments failed to better his condition.

Is This Your Condition?

He experimented until he found a way that gave him real and actual relief in a permanent way. Following this, he treated literally thousands of sufferers in the same manner. Many have since written the Dr. W. O. Coffee Co., after completing the treatment, expressing thanks for their recovery; for their absolute freedom from colds, nose, bronchial and throat discharges; from poisoned systems, foul breath, bronchial troubles and even rheumatism and intestinal troubles. All due, as they say, to their catarrhal condition.

Catarrh Is a Handicap

Dirt and dust, from contaminated sections are deposited in the nose and throat with every breath. Much of it finds its way into the mouth, for nasal catarrh causes the disgusting, offensive mouth breathing. The impurities in this filth-laden air are deposited in the catarrhal fluid—the mucus. Soon it finds its way into the body—and it is a strong constitution indeed that can withstand the fight, once it is started.

Thousands Recommend the Dr. W. O. Coffee Co. Treatment

Don't miss this chance to make the acquaintance of this logical, scientific and purely medical catarrh treatment. A treatment, the worth of which is attested by so many who have written of their relief.

Slowly and carefully it was developed—until at last, after many thorough, painstaking tests, the Dr. W. O. Coffee Co. was convinced that they had the best treatment, the most effective course ever found. Its success in the past proves that it accomplishes its purpose. And it is free on trial to you. Just send the coupon.

Deaf Since Childhood; Hearing Greatly Benefited This Way

Chronic and Acute Deafness Ends.

Mrs. Mona McBride, of Illinois, says: "This is to certify that since having scarlet fever when a little girl, I have been hard of hearing, and for the past four or five years I have been almost entirely deaf. A few months ago my left ear began to discharge. I found it to be abscessed and discharging a foul fluid. Nothing seemed to stop it and finally I tried Dr. Coffee's treatment. To my surprise and delight the hearing in the ear which was partially deaf for nearly 20 years has returned and the abscess has healed. Now I can hear a conversation six feet away. I didn't believe it possible, and I certainly advise anyone suffering with deafness to try this treatment. I obtained relief in a short time."

"DON'T YOU THINK AN OLD LADY LIKE ME WOULD BE HAPPY TO BE RID OF HER DEAFNESS AND CATARRH?"

Saved From Deafness and Catarrh by Home Treatment!

Literally thousands of people from different sections of the United States have used this special, original home treatment. Not only have many found relief from distressing head noises, but restoration of good or normal hearing as well.

Head Noises Gone.

"I was remarkably benefited by your treatments. I have been troubled for years with violent head noises and finally a friend advised me to try your method; he sent for the treatment himself. I noticed improvement at once, and now I am well."

Mr. C. McGinnes, Pennsylvania.

I am writing this letter in reply to the one that I received from you. Your treatment has certainly done wonders for me. I can't find words to express my thanks. I will recommend your treatment wherever I go If you wish to publish this letter you have my permission to do so.

Yours truly,
Mamie A. Chapman.

"I had been suffering with catarrh for seven years and tried a great many remedies, but did not find anything that helped me until I got hold of Dr. Coffee's. Can say after taking the treatment I noticed a change for the better inside of a week. I will recommend your treatment to anyone who has catarrh."

P. A. P., Monte Vista, Colo.

Wonderfully Improved

"I received your treatment for catarrhal deafness and in just three days after I had used it my hearing began to improve. And now I am wonderfully improved."

Yours very truly,
D. H. Carpenter,
Alabama.

Please accept my sincere thanks for the successful treatment of my hearing. After being nearly deaf in both ears I have attained my good hearing once more.

Sorry not to have acknowledged before and wish to say I am grateful to you for the wonderful results.

Mrs. C. Lunden,

Deafness Due to Catarrh Of The Air Passages

Authorities Blame Ear Tubal Catarrh for 90 Per Cent of Deafness Throughout the World.

Free Trial to All Sufferers

According to authorities who base their assertions on years of research and actual medical observation and practice, 90 per cent of the deafness in the world today is due to catarrh—ear tubal catarrh.

Not only is ear tubal catarrh, which is really a development of nasal catarrh, blamed for deafness, but at its door are laid many other diseases, such as stomach catarrh, poisoned conditions of the body, and a generally diseased condition.

This May Be Relieved

This condition may be relieved. The Dr. W. O. Coffee Co., a widely known institution in the Middle West, developed a home treatment for deafness, head noises from ear tubal catarrh, and catarrh itself Through this method, it is possible to remedy the catarrhal condition in many cases and make hearing practically normal once more. It has been proved that in many cases this is true.

Great Success

Phenomenal success has attended the Dr. W. O. Coffee Co. home treatment. More than 500,000 cases of deafness, head noises due to ear tubal catarrh and ordinary nasal catarrh have used this method in all sections of the country, and out of this number a huge number have reported complete satisfaction.

Most of these sufferers have been people whose hearing was bad in one ear and was rapidly getting bad in the other. With every cold, the hearing grew worse. This condition was relieved for many; relieved not only for the time but the catarrhal condition was bettered and in many cases all traces of the disease were gone.

Deafness strikes at all ages—and the Dr. W. O. Coffee Co.'s home treatment has been used by people of all ages. By this method many who were apparently destined to go through life with the handicap of impaired hearing were made normal once more.

Improvement General

Many authorities state, too, that in these cases doubtless other diseased conditions were combated and relieved by the defeat of catarrh; for it no longer poured its daily portion of poison into the human system and the body was no longer required to use a great portion of its strength in throwing off this poison. As a result it was better able to combat new disease and the general physical condition was bettered in addition to the relief given for deafness.

This wonderful Home Treatment for Deafness has been used by over 500,000 persons. It will benefit you likewise provided you are not totally deaf from disease of any kind, or from shock, or from any cause where the whole hearing apparatus has been entirely broken down.

PEASANT PROBLEM SERIOUS, RUSSIAN OFFICIALS ADMIT

They Are Disturbed by Farmers' Demands for Good Food, Silks, Rouge and Other Luxuries.

By the Associated Press.

MOSCOW, March 9.—Soviet officials today, while denying that the rule of Stalin was in danger, admitted the seriousness of the peasant problem, which they traced to increased demand for the rural dwellers.

Reports abroad that Nikolai Bucharin had resigned the editorship of Pravda and the presidency of the Communist Internationale because of charges that he was preparing a coup against Stalin were characterized as sheer nonsense. It was said that while Bucharin had withdrawn from the editorship he could not under the rules give up leadership of the Internationale until the next Congress met.

Theoretical Discussion.

The reports abroad were attributed to the Rightist tendency of a group of communists headed by Bucharin, Tomsky, president of the Soviet Labor Federation, and Alexis Rykoff who were inclined to a more liberal peasant policy and lessening of the rigors to which village bourgeoise were subjected. All this was said not to have advanced beyond the limits of mere theoretical discussion.

Soviet officials said that Bucharin as the foremost theoretician of the revolution had often taken issue with Lenin and most of the other leaders, but never had been considered a practical statesman, never had held any administrative position and admitted was unqualified for practical leadership.

The peasant problem was said to be looming as big as ever and to have drawn the most intensive attention of the party, particularly since the last crop shortage and all consequential difficulties became evident. Bucharin and less eminent leaders advanced the theory of a much more liberal policy toward the peasant, under the belief that the village bourgeoisie may bow into Socialism naturally.

The authorities interviewed were not inclined to conceal the current difficulties resulting largely from the crop shortage. Big investments in industry were inadequate for the supply of the ever-growing demands of the population.

Peasants Want Silks and Rouge.

Commissar of trade Mikoyan, who recently returned from an extensive trip across Siberia, in a detailed report of his investigations dwelt particularly on the ever-increasing demand of the peasantry for such appendages of civilization as modern shirts, footwear, collars, shaving implements, rouge, powder, silk and lingerie.

To draw from the rural districts adequate allotments of grain, the central authorities last summer shipped large quantities of ordinary peasant apparel, such as heavy boots, sheepskin coats, heavy fur caps, and rough peasant shirts and materials for peasant women. A large part of this stock is lying in Government warehouses because it appears that peasants have acquired, along with learning the tenets of Marxism and Sovietism, new tastes by the same propaganda methods.

Eating Their Own Products.

Along with their developing taste for good clothes the peasants have developed also a taste for good food. This was said to account largely for the urban population's lacking eggs, butter and other rural commodities which have been largely consumed by the producers.

The authorities declare that these natural and temporary difficulties surely will be solved by one good crop and without the disturbances and unrest imagined by counter-revolutionary forces in and out of Russia. These, they said, were ever ready to see the specter of revolt in economic difficulties and the resulting theoretical political debates.

MRS. HAMMONDS' QUARRELS AMUSED HIM, JOHNSTON SAYS

Oklahoma Governor at Trial, Tells of Standing in Door to Hear Disputes.

By the Associated Press.

OKLAHOMA CITY, Ok., March 9.—Gov. Henry S. Johnston cannot understand a lot of things that have been blamed on Mrs. O. O. Hammonds, his former confidential secretary, he said today in his testimony before the State Senate Court, which is trying him on 10 charges of impeachment.

He commented on testimony of Sam H. Harris, chairman of the State Fish and Game Commission, that Mrs. Hammonds interfered materially with that department.

"I used to get a lot of amusement out of Harris' quarrels with Mrs. Hammonds," Johnston said. "As soon as he would come in I knew they would get to fighting and I would stand in the door and listen."

"A lot of things have been blamed on Mrs. Hammonds that I can't altogether understand," he said at another juncture.

The suspended official related that if restored to office, he would accept the resignation of Robert Gilliam, secretary of the board of affairs. He previously had said also he would not re-employ Mrs. Hammonds.

FIRST U. S. JAIL IN A STATE TO BE OPENED MARCH 15

Crush of Dry Act Prisoners Compels It to Establish Prison in New York City.

By the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, March 9.—The first jail ever operated by the Federal Government in any State will be opened next Friday on the western fringe of Greenwich Village. It will be called the Federal House of Detention and is intended for the housing of short-term prisoners and those awaiting trial. The majority of such prisoners are Volstead act violators.

In the past it has been the custom to board Government prisoners in the Tombs and the Raymond street jail in Brooklyn, paying the city between 85 cents and $1 a day apiece. Recently, however, the city notified Federal officials that after March 15 it could accommodate no more Federal boarders.

The Government has its own jails in territories like Alaska and had them in Oklahoma and New Mexico before they became states. The Federal penitentiaries do not accept prisoners sentenced to serve less than a year, which accounts for the common year and a day terms imposed in Federal courts.

DISABLED BOY STARTS EAST ON TRAIN ALONE

Charles Gowen, 7, in Hospital Almost a Year, Going to Parents in Erie, Pa.

Charles Gowen, 7 years old, has not walked for nearly three years, and it may be as many more before he will be able to do so, but although happy by nature, he is overjoyed today. A limited train is speeding with him toward Erie, Pa., to be with his parents, Mr. and Mrs. James Gowen, former residents of Ellington, Mo., whom he has not seen since early last fall.

Charles is traveling with only the conductors and porters to care for his wants, but attaches of Missouri Baptist Hospital, 919 North Taylor avenue, had no misgivings about his becoming lonely. He has been under treatment at the hospital in the children's free ward since last May 12, because of a diseased left hip joint. During that time he has amply shown his winning nature in claiming the close friendship of the nurses and the other crippled children of the ward.

Side of Body in Cast.

Because of the diseased joint, the whole leg and most of that side of his body are encased in an armor-like plaster cast. Taken to the train late yesterday afternoon in the hospital ambulance accompanied by Dr. B. A. Wilkes, hospital superintendent, he was placed in a berth which he will occupy until his parents greet him in Erie. With him he took an envelope containing $5 for rewarding the services of the porters who must assist him and bring him his food.

Charles did not mind the recent application of the cast. It meant freedom from the fetters of a weight-extension which previously had served to keep the ailing limb from becoming shorter than its brother while the diseased bone was being treated. It meant he, too, could turn over and fly a kite from the window at the head of his bed like the other bed-ridden little boys of the ward were able to do. It meant he could draw better pictures of houses—"They're easier to draw than people," he sagely asserted—and that he could attend school classes in the hospital solarium instead of obliging the teacher to bring the three R's to his bedside.

Treated at Hospital.

Charles' parents were not able to have him treated properly for his affliction. It came to the attention of the Missouri Federation of Women's Clubs, which keeps an eye out for such cases and in the end, by virtue of an agreement three years ago between the Federation and the hospital, he was brought to St. Louis from his Ellington home.

While he was in the hospital, his father obtained employment in Erie, and arrangements have been made in Pennsylvania whereby the social service organization and the company employing the father will continue his treatments in the company hospital in that city.

"This is just one of the children admitted for free treatment," it was explained by Dr. B. A. Wilkes, superintendent of the hospital. "About 300 such cases were admitted last year. The expense is borne by the hospital; likewise, the doctor bills. Charles has made splendid progress. He was underweight and otherwise unhealthy. Now his general health is considered normal and he is steadily gaining weight."

Dies After Operation.

L. Sylvester Brand, 49 years old, a member of the Scottish Rite choir, died yesterday at Beaumont Hospital after an operation to remove a tumor on his vocal cords. He was a city market inspector. Surviving him are his father, with whom he lived at 2137 Nebraska avenue, two sisters and a brother. Funeral services will be held Tuesday afternoon at Memorial M. E. Church, Accomac and Jefferson avenues.

ALDERMAN WHO WON BY LARGEST MARGIN SPENT $51

E. L. Kuhs Got 64,413 Plurality and Total of 91,895 Votes, Heaviest Cast for a Candidate.

Edward L. Kuhs, Alderman from the First Ward, got more votes than any other Republican candidate in the primary, Friday, with by far the largest plurality, but spent only $51 in his campaign, made but one brief speech and had no political cards printed.

His vote was 91,895, which was 30 more votes than Mayor Miller obtained. It was a plurality of 64,413 over his nearest opponent, Charles J. Grassmuck Jr., whose vote was 27,482, while a third candidate in the ward polled 19,719. The one ward meeting at which Kuhs made an address, merely announcing his candidacy, was held in the Twenty-seventh Ward. His expenses included the compulsory filing fee of $36 and $15 for miscellaneous items.

Kuhs, an automobile dealer, has served one term and a short preceding term. He is a close friend of Comptroller Nolte, who has led the ticket in the past but was unopposed for renomination. Kuhs handles appropriation bills and is chairman of the Aldermanic Ways and Means Committee. He was chairman of the special committee which handled the 1923 bond issue.

Four of 14 Incumbents Beaten.

Party nominees for Aldermen from the 14 odd-numbered wards were chosen in the primary. The 14 Republican incumbents sought renomination. Nine besides Kuhs were successful. Henry Wander of the Seventh Ward, Andrew A. Koettker of the Ninth, Clinton E. Udell of the Twenty-third and Sylvester A. Nangle of the Twenty-fifth were the defeated Aldermen. Udell, a retired manufacturer, had been an Alderman since the board was established in 1915, previously having been on the Board of Freeholders which drafted the 1914 Charter. Wander and Nangle had served for the last two terms and Koettker one. The Republican nominees who defeated these officeholders are:

Louis Fischer, Seventh Ward, a baker, of 839 Hickory street.

Martin D. Lohmann, Ninth, a salesman, of 919 Lami street, and former Alderman, who was defeated for renomination by Koettker in 1925.

Rudolph H. Brock, Twenty-third, an automobile agent, of 4494 Washington boulevard.

Clarence C. Kaufmann, Twenty-fifth, a lawyer, of 5474 Delmar boulevard.

William F. Niederluecke of the Third Ward and his cousin, August H. Niederluecke of the Nineteenth Ward, both of whom have served two terms as Aldermen, were renominated without opposition.

Edward W. Wiehe, Fifth Ward; John A. Fett, Eleventh; John Neu Jr., Thirteenth; Harry F. Riefling, Fifteenth; Thomas S. Watts, Seventeenth; William J. Studt, Twenty-first, and Samuel L. Wimer, Twenty-seventh, also were renominated. Their pluralities ranged from 53 votes for Riefling to 49,956 for Neu, but the smallest margin except Riefling's was 2367 for Studt. It is possible that the official vote figures may change the plurality for or against Riefling as shown in the present unofficial count. In so close a race there is always the chance of a contest. Riefling, who has served two terms, polled 69,874 votes against 69,421 for Arthur Kramer, who ran second to Riefling for the nomination in 1925.

Wiehe and Fett have been Aldermen since the board was established. Watts and Wimer have served two terms and Neu and Studt one term. Neu's plurality, second only to that of Kuhs, was surprising in view of the fact that he had five opponents and a hard-fought campaign. Former Alderman Joseph H. Heckel, who was defeated by Neu in 1925, ran second to him. In a field of four, Kaufmann of the Twenty-fifth Ward achieved a plurality of 25,246 over Nangle. Lohmann of the Ninth defeated Koettker by a margin of 1825.

Aldermen represent wards but are elected by the city at large, a fact which always has prevented election of Democratic Aldermen and has made it possible for a candidate to lose his own ward and still be nominated or elected. Fischer, Lohmann and Wimer lost their own wards by several hundred votes.

The 14 Democratic candidates, who had no opposition, included Mrs. Mayme C. Hyland, Democratic committeewoman of the Eleventh Ward. Mrs. Rilla B. Lunt, who ran for the Republican aldermanic nomination in the Twenty-fifth, trailed three men candidates.

It was noticeable that all aldermanic candidates supported by the victorious Miller faction did not win, nor did all those aided by the unsuccessful [illegible] of former Mayor Kiel lose.

50 Forest Fires in Arkansas.

HOT SPRINGS, Ark., March 9. Fifty or more forest fires are burning in the area between Waldron and Mena, one fire already having destroyed more than 500 acres of timber north of Yowell Mountain, the United States Forestry Service here was advised today. Increasing high winds and low humidity are giving the fires an advantage over the fighters.

BRITAIN ANXIOUS ABOUT MENTAL STATUS OF KING

Ruler Improves Physically, but Has Full Possession of Faculties Only for Brief Periods.

By JOHN L. BALDERSTON,
London Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch and New York World.

Copyright, 1929, by the Press and Pulitzer Publishing Cos. (the New York World and Post-Dispatch).

LONDON, March 9.—Although it is premature to talk of the appointment of the Prince of Wales as regent, King George's mental condition is a matter of extreme anxiety in court and governmental circles. The King is improving physically, eating and sleeping well, but only for brief periods is he in full possession of normal faculties.

The most embarrassing feature of the situation is that the doctors are unable to tell whether complete recovery is to be anticipated. They are hopeful, but not confident. So long as hope persists, a strong influence will be brought to bear against the appointment of the Prince of Wales as regent.

The progress hoped for by the sea at Bognor has not been realized, despite the surrounding of the King with his intimate possessions from home, including his phonograph and a collection of records, most of them jazz tunes. Plans are being made to take him to Sandringham, his country estate, as soon as his health permits.

Recovery Reported Still Distant.

It is remarkable that the full significance of the bulletin issued last Saturday by Lord Dawson of Penn and Sir Stanley Hewitt was not generally recognized. This said that the King "is now able to read and apply his mind for short periods of time," and ended with the remark that complete recovery was "still some months distant."

Lord Dawson had written this communique at Bognor, but instead of giving it out through the equerry at Bognor as usual, he took it to London and submitted it to Premier Baldwin and to the Prince of Wales. They gave it their sanction before it was published.

Doctors hope that as soon as his bodily strength has increased sufficiently, the King will be able to take short walks in the garden of Craigwell House and brief motor rides to relieve the monotony of sitting day after day at the bedroom window. As it is, he is still so weak that when he walks from the bed to the window or to the adjoining sunroom he is supported by two nurses and uses a stick.

Visits Depend on His Mood.

He sees the Queen and other members of the family for only a few minutes daily. When, during the course of the day, the nurses find him in a mood for visitors, they summon the Queen or any other member of the family there.

When the Duke of York went from London Thursday to see the King the newspapers reported he had a long conversation, but in reality he had talked only seven minutes. This situation accounts in part at least for the fact that the Prince of Wales has been at Craigwell House only once since the King was taken there. It is also understood to be the reason why neither Lord Lascelles nor the Duchess of York had been to see the King.

The best time in the King's day is usually just after six in the evening. In the best periods the King realizes his weakness and insists on being treated as an extreme invalid. In his other moods, however, he apparently does not recognize the situation and is inclined to expect to be treated as a well person, which increases the difficulties for the doctors and nurses.

SEEKS TO DELAY BUILDING OF WEBSTER GROVES SEWERS

Julius Yore to Circulate Petitions; Wants Check Put Upon Supervisors.

A petition protesting against present plans for construction of sewers in the Webster Groves Sewer District, and calling upon Circuit Judge Nolte to ask the Board of Supervisors to delay action until the law can be amended by the present Legislature, will be circulated by Julius Yore, Webster Groves freight solicitor.

One of the objections to the Ralph act is that supervisors are not restricted in authority after their appointment by the Circuit Court. Judge Nolte has no authority to stop their work, but the petition is addressed to him inasmuch as supervisors for the $2,000,000 project were appointed by his predecessor, the late Judge McElhinney, and that division of the court, yet has certain functions in connection with the district.

The action follows exclusive publication by the Post-Dispatch Wednesday of the resignation of George Barnett, one of three supervisors, who withdrew because his associates insisted on paying what he believed to be exorbitant attorneys' fees. E. Glion Curtis and Joseph B. Ackfeld, over the objection of Barnett, agreed to guarantee attorneys a minimum of $17,500 at the rate of $500 a month.

2 Men Burned to Death at Camp.

MANISTIQUE, Mich., March 9.—William J. Rodda, 35 years old, and Jack Gray, 48, both of Detroit, Mich., were burned to death today when fire destroyed a road camp at Blaney near here. The fire apparently started from an overheated stove.

KEWANEE
BUILD from the BOILER UP!

Many a fine building in this country stands today practically untenanted because the builder regarded the heating boiler as an insignificant detail, when as a matter of fact, it is the big thing and the most important thing in any building which houses many people.

Had the builders given the boiler its rightful prominence in the scheme of things, they would not now be renting space at ruinous rates. Had they bought the best boiler on the market, regardless of price, their buildings would be profitable instead of profitless ventures.

The heating boiler measures the value of a building to its tenants and its builder. And it is a matter of supreme surprise when otherwise smart men sometimes fail to recognize the fact.

The KEWANEE ALL-STEEL (riveted) FIREBOX BOILER, because of unfailing efficiency, long-life and fuel conservation, not only makes your building a sound investment, easily rented and easily sold, but it also keeps your tenants indefinitely.

When you skimp on the heating-boiler, you undermine your entire enterprise in advance, when you put a poor boiler into a fine building, you are daring the building to pay dividends.

Buy the best boiler, no matter what its price, and you will soon save its cost in fuel and freedom from repairs.

DR. GRINDON TELLS HOW TO STAY YOUNG

Physician, 70, Honored by Colleagues on 50th Anniversary of Medical Career.

From the eminence of his 50 years in medicine—distinguished years, years in which he gave to medicine quite as richly as it gave to him—Dr. Joseph Grindon last night told his colleagues what he had learned about staying young.

It was a recipe, though convincing, altogether out of the ordinary, but the occasion for it likewise was out of the ordinary. A gathering of hundreds filled the large auditorium of the St. Louis Medical Society to honor the dermatologist on his golden jubilee.

A plaque by Victor Holm had been unveiled, as Dr. Armand Ravold said in presenting it for a committee to the Medical Society, "to extend down to posterity our opinion of Dr. Grindon." Below the profile of the physician was the inscription "President, St. Louis Medical Society, 1899. For many years teacher of dermatology; beloved Physician, Scholar, Friend. Efected on his golden jubilee by his colleagues."

Tributes From Old Friends.

Speakers for the society, for Washington University where he was professor of dermatology until 1912, and of St. Louis University where he is professor of dermatology now, had praised his scientific attainments, his culture and social graces, his stanchness as a friend and had called him young despite his 70 years.

Dr. Joseph Erlanger had sent his regrets, "Especially because of Dr. Grindon's early interest in physiology," and thereby had recalled that years ago, in an emergency, the dermatologist had taken over the department of physiology at Washington University.

"I don't suppose you remember treating me in 1912," another letter began. "We always think of you as a very kind man and a great doctor. We just want to thank you again for your kindness to me."

"Perhaps," said Dr. Grindon, acknowledging the plaque and the gift of a bound volume of the guests' signatures, "some of you wonder what is the reaction of the recipient of such kindness as you have showered on me. Perhaps you think one would be puffed up—chesty, I believe, is the word.

"If so you are mistaken. The reaction is quite the contrary. It brings rather acutely to mind all the foolish things and the wrong things which one has done, and, most profoundly, all the things one should have done and did not. Sir William Osler urged the study of medicine as teaching humility, but if anyone wishes for true humility, let him make a study of his own life such as has been forced on me in the last few days.

How to Stay Young.

"You have called me young. I have ideas of how one may stay young. I haven't followed all of them, but I have some notions of how to go about it.

"For one thing, keep in touch with nature. Learn to love the sky and the stars and still water, the trees and birds and flowers. Nature, the first-born of all, stays always young.

"Associate with young people, and especially with children. What is their chief charm if not their constantly changing expression—changing because they live in a new world, a world full of wonder? So do we live in a world of wonders. Let us not close our eyes in weariness. Keep young as does the child, by learning new things, and life will never bore us.

"Have friends and love them, because it is they who make this planet habitable. Admit no one to your intimacy except saints, angels and fairies. I know saints of both sexes, the angels all of us have met, ad the children the fairies—'except ye become as one of these'—all of you know the quotation.

"Last, and I do not need to tell this to physicians, live in great part for others. 'It is more blessed to give than to receive.' We know that each of us at the last will count his life by loss and not by gain—not by the wine drunk, but by the wine poured forth."

HEALS LEGS
As You Work and Walk

The discovery that the great cause of all leg troubles is lack of circulation, enabled Dr. Clason to develop a "walking treatment" that circulates the blood, stops suffering and heals, after all else fails. No laying up is necessary for varicose veins, ulcers, eczema, milk leg, swelling, fever leg, phlebitis, pains, aches, cramps, itching or open sores. Get well while you work. Come to the Ambulatorium or write for free information. No charge for consultation.

HOOVER SELECTS AIDS FOR CABINET OFFICERS

Replaces Solicitor Whose Opinion on Sinclair Oil Lease Renewal Drew Fire.

By the Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, March 9.—The first important change of Department officials under the Hoover administration was made today in the Interior Department with the appointment of Joseph M. Dixon, of Montana, former United States Senator, Congressman and Governor, as first Assistant Secretary and the transfer of E. C. Finney from that post to the office of solicitor of the department. Dixon is 60 years old.

In naming Finney the President accepted the resignation of Ernest O. Patterson, solicitor for several years, whose opinion to Dr. Work then Secretary of the Interior that the renewal of the Sinclair contract for royalty oil in the Salt Creek fields of Wyoming was mandatory, came under fire in the Senate.

David S. Ingalls, of Cleveland, known as the "Flying Legislator," was appointed Assistant Secretary of the Navy for Aviation to succeed Edward P. Warner, of Boston, who is returning to private business.

Finney was appointed by President Harding in 1921 to be first Assistant Secretary under Albert B. Fall as Secretary. While Finney was acting secretary during part of the period in which the negotiations between Fall and Edward L. Doheny and Harry F. Sinclair for the California and Teapot Dome naval oil reserves were carried on, Senator Walsh, of Montana, prosecutor of the oil inquiry, stated that the record was abundantly clear that Finney was in no wise responsible for those leases and was a diligent and faithful public servant.

The new solicitor frequently appeared before the Senate Committee investigating the oil leases and also was a witness in the various civil and criminal cases growing out of the leases which the United States Supreme Court annulled, returning the reserves to the Federal Government. Finney is 59 years old.

WHEAT LEADS LATE UPTURN IN GRAINS

ST. LOUIS MERCHANTS' EXCHANGE, March 9.—Wheat recovered on early setback and closed higher at the week end session on the local market, corn also finishing at advance. Report of freezing temperature in winter wheat belt though rising temperature expected, was factor in market. The advance at Chicago in which short covering was said to have played part exerted influence.

In the cash grain market Saturday, soft wheat was in light supply and prices were higher. Starchy milling and mixing grades were 1 and 2 cents up. Dark vitreous types and damaged wheat were in light demand. Hard wheat advanced 1 and 2 cents. No. 3s sold at prices up to 3 cents higher. Offerings which were light cleared closely. The demand was for the better classes of off grades, and especially for low protein types. Market on corn where comparisons were possible was up 1 cent. Supplies were not heavy and although mills, industries, elevators and shippers bought sparingly a fairly close clearance was effected. Oats were steady to 1 cent up. A good local and shipping demand resulted in a total clearance.

The opening on wheat was fractionally higher but the market soon reacted to below previous close. May corn opened ½c higher and then reacted to previous close. The official returns on wheat and oats farm reserves were declared about as anticipated. Corn reserves, however, were put at 12,000,000 bushels less than unofficial estimates indicated. Liverpool wheat closed unchanged to ⅛c higher. Winnipeg was shade lower early.

Freezing temperatures in winter wheat belt and better Liverpool cable than expected were credited with bringing early buying.

May wheat opened at $1.24¾; July wheat $1.27⅝-½; Sept. wheat $1.29¾; May corn $1.02⅛ and July corn $1.04½.

Local wheat receipts, which were 123,200 bushels, compared with 166,600 a week ago and 112,000 a year ago, included 27 cars local and 61 through. Corn receipts, which were 86,800 bushels, compared with 109,200 a week ago and 142,800 a year ago, included 36 cars local and 26 through. Oats receipts, which were 59,400 bushels, compared with 44,000 a week ago and 24,000 a year ago, included 23 cars local and four through. Hay receipts were four cars local and one through.

St. Louis Cash Grain.

Sales of cash grain made on the exchange Saturday were as follows:

WHEAT PRICES RUN UP LATE, CORN FOLLOWING

By the Associated Press.

CHICAGO, March 9.—Wheat prices ran up like a steeplejack today, and corn followed in quick order. Speculators discovered they had sold themselves into a hole and that to get out before the week-end they had bid against each other at such a lively rate as to force a sharp general rise in values. Drouth advices from Canada and Australia, together with reports of seeding delays in Europe and of freezing temperatures in the United States winter wheat belt were all of some effect toward bringing about what resembled a stampede to the buying side.

Closing quotations on wheat were strong, 1⅝ cents to 2⅛ cents a bushel net higher. Corn finished ¾ cent to 1⅛ cents up. Oats unchanged to ⅝c advance and provisions unchanged to a rise of 12 cents.

From the outset the wheat pit was uneasy because of renewed cold weather threatening the safety of domestic winter wheat. Besides, Liverpool wheat quotations were higher than had been looked for. On the other hand, Government figures on United States farm reserve stocks of wheat were construed generally as bearish. Reactions from advances were much in evidence for a while, but for the most part the effect of the Government report appeared to have been already discounted. Offerings gradually became scarce, and then the market started up with a rush.

A forecast of fair and warmer weather to succeed the prevalent freezing temperatures was of little comfort to wheat bears, inasmuch as crop damage at this stage of the season is generally largely due to alternate freezing and thawing weather. In the flurry that ensued after a dearth of offerings became apparent, much of the buying was credited to eastern sources. Contributing to the subsequent upward swing of values was the fact that primary receipts of wheat in this country today showed a decided falling off, totaling but 957,000 bushels, against 1,199,000 bushels a week ago and 1,102,000 bushels on the corresponding day last year.

Corn as well as wheat finished with the bulls having the whip hand, to a considerable extent, upturns in corn prices were associated with comment that farm reserves showed little more corn than last year. However, the fact also was pointed out that considering the early start of feeding this season the disappearance of corn was only moderate, 63.3 per cent of the total Nov. 1 supply compared with a 10-year average of 61.2 per cent. Country offerings of corn today were of fair volume, but in the main were held above buyers' views.

Oats were unsettled, with action of corn the chief influence.

Provisions reflected a new upturn in the value of hogs.

TEXTILE STATISTICS FACTOR IN LATE COTTON RISE

By the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, March 9.—An early decline influenced by relatively weak Liverpool cables was followed by advances in cotton today on renewal of buying promoted by textile statistics and talk of unfavorable weather in the South. May contracts, after selling off to 21.31c, advanced to 21.47c, or 8 points net higher, and closed at 21.44c. The general market closed very steady at net advances of 1 to 6 points.

The opening was steady at a decline of 1 to 11 points. Active months showed net losses of 8 to 11 points during the first few minutes under heavy week-end realizing. Some local selling for a reaction also was in evidence and probably was promoted by the showing of Liverpool. Offerings appeared to be very readily absorbed at the decline, however. The market turned upward during the middle of the morning on continuation of recent buying from Wall street, commission houses and trade sources.

The easier showing of Liverpool appeared to be offset by the standard cloth statistics showing that sales of cotton cloths during February exceeded production by 16.3 per cent and that shipments exceeded production by 5.5 per cent with stocks of goods on hand showing a decrease of 4.2 per cent for the month, while there was an increase of 7.2 per cent in unfilled orders.

Reports of continued good business in print cloths and sheetings probably contributed to the midmorning advance. There may also have been a little buying on reports of rains in the South.

Actives months sold 5 to 10 points net higher. March advanced from 21.28c to 21.44c, and the new October contract from 20.43c to 20.63c, making new high ground for the movement. Demand tapered off at these figures and the market sagged a few points from the best in the late trading under realizing.

Cable advice from London said that the proposal for short time in the American spinning section of Lancashire was not expected to carry. A similar opinion was said to have been expressed by English cotton men here.

Cotton on shipboard awaiting clearance at the end of the week was estimated at 135,000 bales, against 102,000 last year. Private cable reported heavy local, Manchester and continental realizing in Liverpool.

ERRATIC PRICE MOVEMENTS IN STOCK MARKET

Radio Issues Again Spectacular Features of Trade — Kennecott Copper Bought Late in Day.

By the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, March 9.—Stock prices were churned about in erratic fashion today, but, except in a handful of issues, the day's net changes were negligible. The market opened with a surprising outburst of strength, turned reactionary in the last hour and then made recovery.

Call money was not a direct factor in today's market because the Friday rate carries over the week-end, but credit conditions continued to receive widespread attention in brokerage and banking house comment. Retention of the 4½-per-cent rediscount rate by the San Francisco Federal Reserve Bank generated some bullish enthusiasm on the theory that the New York Federal Reserve Bank would not increase its charge until all other central bank rates had been brought to the 5 per cent level. However, the recent decline in sterling, threatening a further drain on Great Britain's gold, is likely to resultin another increase in the Bank of England rate, which undoubtedly would draw foreign funds from New York.

Most traders confess they are completely at sea regarding the credit situation and outlook. While many veteran observers point out that stocks yielding 3 to 4 per cent or less cannot be carried indefinitely on margin at the recent call rates of 6 to 12 per cent, stock market operators continue to show defiance of the Federal Reserve authorities in their effort to curb securities inflation by bidding up many issues to new high records.

Radios Are Features.

Radio issues were again the spectacular features. The old stock opened 4 points higher at 449, ran up to a new high record at 464, broke to 451 on the selling which followed publication of President Harbord's official denial of Radio-Western Union merger rumors, rebounded to 463½ and closed at 461. The stock touched 368 in Wednesday's break. The new stock, which dropped below 75 earlier in the week, rallied to a new high at 93½ and closed at 92, up 3 points net. Western Union touched a new high record at 220¾, broke to 213 and rallied to 215, up 2½ net.

More than 1,000,000 shares of the Radio new stock have changed hands this week. Announcement was made that an agreement had been concluded in London whereby the Gramophone Co., in which radio has a 51 per cent interest, had acquired the Marconiphone Co., which gives it the right to use present and future Marconi patents and inventions in all fields of public entertainment.

Newcomb Carlton, president of the Western Union Co., Owen D. Young, chairman of the Board of Directors of the Radio Corporation, and David Sarnoff, executive vice-president of the Radio Corporation, are all in Europe. Mr. Harbord, in his statement, said that "present relations are no closer than they have been during the last several years, and there is no prospect of their becoming more so." He explained that the statement in the annual report of the Radio Corporation of its preparing to enter the field of domestic telegraphy has no relation to the Western Union Telegraph Co. except in a "competitive sense."

Except for the publication of more favorable earnings reports and optimistic week-end trade reviews, there was little in the day's business news to influence the price movement. The monthly tonnage report of the United States Steel Corporation, issued after the close of the market, showed a gain of 24,854 tons despite heavy shipments last month.

Kennecott Copper was heavily bought in the late trading, touching a new high record at 93½. Miami Copper advanced two points. On the other hand, Anaconda fell 2½ points, Greene Cananea 1⅝, Andes one and American Smelting and Cerro de Pasco yielded fractionally.

Some Wide Swings.

Wide swings took place in some of the higher priced specialties. Adams Express and Burroughs Adding Machine jumped 39 and 11¾ points, respectively, on one sale each. Brooklyn Union Gas soared 7¾ points and Crosley Radio, Commercial Investment Trust, Mandel Bros., Allied Chemical, Gillette Safety Razor and People's Gas moved up 2 to 5¼ points.

Baltimore & Ohio, International Combustion, International Harvester, Southern Railway and Vanadium were conspicuously heavy.

Establishment of another new low by the Canadian dollar around 99.28 cents featured the irregular foreign exchange market. Sterling cables held steady around $4.85 1-16 and Spanish pesetas rallied nearly 15 points to 14.83 cents.

Dry Goods Market Review.

NEW YORK, March 9.—Both cotton and fine cotton goods became quiet today after a week of very satisfactory business. Sheeting sales recently have been heavy with Friday's volume greater than in many weeks.

Prices were very firm. The week closed ⅛c to ¼c higher in practically all coarse goods.

In burlaps cables were few, but in most instances showed an advance of two tenths. Calcutta was quiet. The market was slow and prices unchanged at firm.

Raw silk continued to rise abroad. This was reflected in spot dealings here.

Wall Street News and Comment

By the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, March 9.

Curtiss Aeroplane and Motor Co., Inc., which has been expanding rapidly, has several other plans nearing completion, President C. M. Keys states in his annual report to stockholders. Earnings for 1928 totaled $1,528,782, against $794,148 in 1927.

NEW YORK, March 9.—Stock issues this week fell below the total of new financing through bonds for the first time in weeks, but still maintained a comfortable lead for the year over the corresponding 1928 period. Stock issues totaled $20,519,000, against $88,150,000 the preceding week. Since Jan. 1 new stock financing has reached $803,848,000, compared with $727,729,000 in bonds and $163,056,000 in stocks in the same 1928 period. Last year this time bonds had a lead of more than $1,000,000 over stocks.

Gold imports are due for an increase next week. Altogether $5,500,000 of the metal is en route to New York from Argentina.

WEEK'S METAL MARKET REVIEW

By the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, March 9.—Steel mills in many instances were reported to be operating in virtually at capacity. Steel ingot output rate for February was the highest on record. Demand against specifications remained good with railroads, automobile industry, structural steel, farm implement and pipe line manufacturers contributing the largest requests. New business came to hand in better volume, especially from the railroad and structural steel interests. Prices were very steady, covering all lines. Pig iron was active and prices were well maintained.

Folowing the subsidance of domestic buying in copper during the preceding week, the demand from foreign consumers tapered off, leaving the market rather quiet at the recently established advances. Producers continued to hold steady on expectation of a renewal of export demand, as European consumers are said to have large tonnages to fill for April and May shipment. Electrolytic is quoted at 19½ cents for deliver in the Connecticut valley.

Tin was very steadly but there was a lack of important developments all week with price fluctuations narrow in all markets.

Consuming demand for lead was active with some reports intimating that this was stimulated partly by the political developments in Mexico. Prices were firm.

Zinc was very steady with an improvement in the demand for early second-quarter shipment noted. Ore remained without change.

Antimony was slightly firmer and followed the upturn in the Far East and also on reports of smaller shipments from there during February.

Foreign Exchange

NEW YORK, March 9.—The Evening Post in copyrighted weekly foreign exchange market review, says:

"The leading European exchanges held steady all through the week, although when the high rates for money became the chief factor there were some recessions. Sterling at that time was without substantial inquiry and yielded ¼ to $4.85¼ for cables, bringing the rate close to the gold importing point. Scandinavian exchanges sank slowly down to new low levels for the year, but business in these documents was small and without much importance. Italian and French, as well as Swiss and Dutch, had only slight variations during the week.

"Spanish exchange, which has shown declining tendency ever since the recent political unrest, was under pressure apparently from home sources, and found little demand. Pesetas, which had recently ranged around 16 cents, but had been declining steadily, broke through the 15-cent level and sold yesterday as low as 14.65, a new low for recent trading.

"Japanese exchange had intervals of weakness and was under special pressure in the first few days, selling as low as 44.14, but found support and rallied to 44.45.

"Canadian exchange was in increased supply and made a new low for recent years at 99.31, but although this rate is ⅛ cent below the gold import rate, no advices of gold shipments from Montreal were received.

"South American exchanges showed increased weakness, led by Uruguay, which yielded ⅛ to 100.75. Argentine and Brazil showed a steadier tone. The Mexican troubles did not affect the market for Mexican pesos."

New York Sugar.

NEW YORK, March 9.—Raw sugar was quiet today. In absence of business prices were unchanged at 3.74 for spots, duty paid, with March shipment Cubas available at this level.

Inactivity in spots and more liberal offerings seemed to check aggressive new buying of futures. Prices were easier under increased hedge selling and liquidation for over the week-end.

The market opened unchanged to one point lower, with some buying by commission houses of the later positions. Demand was soon supplied and reactions followed under Cuban selling.

The market closed at net losses of one to three points.

Approximate sales, 24,400 tons. March closed 1.91, May 2.01, July 2.11, September 2.16, December and January 2.21, March 2.25.

Refined was unchanged at 4.90 for fine granulated. Withdrawals on old contracts were fair, but no new business was in evidence.

LONDON CLOSELY WATCHES WALL STREET ACTIVITIES

Views Situation From Standpoint of Credit Demand and Effect on Exchanges.

By ARTHUR W. KIDDY,
(Copyright by New York Evening Post, Inc.)

LONDON, March 9.—The approach of the British general election with the dear monetary influences gives a golden opportunity to bears here. That partly explains the extreme weakness of English gilt-edged stocks, the bear leaders assuming there is plenty of time to close operations if things look brighter.

Meanwhile the activities in Wall Street are absorbing the attention of nearly everybody in London and even of these returning from New York.

Views Visitors Bring Back.

Perhaps the general consensus of those returning from New York favors the idea that the rise in securities is justified and is likely to go further and that, although many stocks may be on a 2, and even 1 per cent basis, the rise will be justified by conditions two years hence. Moreover, the same opinions also favor the continuance of the rise on the belief in the enormous financial resources uncontrolled by the banks at the disposal of Wall street, while some quarters emphasize that the biggest people in America are not solely concerned with the booming shares on Wall street, but have large financial schemes, including the acquirement of industrial interests abroad.

Some other opinions, however, give quite a different story and emphasize the extent of the speculative mania in Wall street, maintaining that in present conditions the place to seek for sound tips is not the big banking houses, but from tram conductors and bootblacks.

Europe, however, not unnaturally views the whole situation from the standpoint of the demand on loanable resources and the effect on international exchanges.

Probably some millions of English money are in New York and Berlin owing to the high interest rates, and while the rise in the English bank rate might fetch some of this money back, it is not considered that the American market or American exchange would be greatly affected by the loss, and if Berlin should have to part with gold it might go to France.

Control of Sterling.

Moreover, the speculative activities among the British is only second to that in the United States, and this increases the mischievous tendency of English money to flow toward the Wall street maelstrom.

Underlying all these conditions, however, is the striking fact that someone or some groups must be controlling sterling exchange, because it is unlikely that with such feverish financial activities exchange would be so steady.

Generally it is believed here in London that the controlling influence is in America, and possibly it is based on the desire that the English bank rate is not forced up. Were gold to leave us now for the United States in any large amounts the rate would probably rise, while it might also rise, though less certainly, if there were indications of a further flow of Lombard street credits to Wall street attracted by high money rates.

BOND MARKET CLOSES AT LOWEST OF WEEK

By the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, March 9.—Trading in the bond market today fell into the doldrums and prices generally closed at the lowest levels of the week. The Associated Press combined averages again established a new low mark for the past two years.

Buying support is not looked for by traders until after the 15th of the month, when the Treasury financing will be out of the way and income tax demands met until that time a scarcity of investment funds is anticipated, with time money firm at its peak price of 7¾ per cent.

The convertibles were generally lower in sympathy with declines in stocks. Anaconda Copper 7s closed down nearly five points at 240¼, while Alleghany Corporation 5s and American International 5½s sold off fractionally. Atchison convertible 4½s declined to 114¾, their lowest price since admission to trading.

In the industrials Chile Copper 5s sold at their year's lowest price. Cuban Dominican Sugar 7½s were under pressure and lost a point. Pressure also was exerted against the oils.

Nearly a half a dozen rails established new lows for the year. New York Central refunding 4½s dropped a point to a new low at 97.

Utilities were mixed. Buying support arrested the decline in International Telephone 4½s. New York Edison refunding 5s and New England Telephone 5s sank into new low territory for the year.

Mexican issues again were under pressure on reports of rebel victories in the revolution, the assented 6s of 1933 slumping 3½ points to a new low at 29.

All United States Government obligations, except the Liberty 3½s, declined to new lows for the year.

New York Coffee.

NEW YORK, March 9. — Coffee was higher today on further covering and trade buying promoted by steadiness in Brazil. No. 7 contracts opened at an advance of 14 to 16 points, but met a little week-end realizing and closed slightly off from the best at a net gain of 10 to 15 points. Sales estimated 18,000. Santos opened 9 to 23 points higher and closed 13 to 17 points net higher. Sales estimated 17,000.

IRREGULARLY HIGHER CLOSE ON THE CURB

By the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, March 9.—Prices moved in a zigzag fashion on the New York Curb Market today, but speculators for the advance eventually gained control of the price movement. Final quotations were irregularly higher, with nearly a score issues at new high levels for the year, or longer.

Aviation shares were again the speculative favorites, Fokker standing out by climbing nearly 5 points to a new high record at 42⅞ and then easing to 41. Aviation Corporation of the Americas, the holding company for the Pan-American Airways, rallied 3½ points on buying that followed the inauguration of the Mexican-United States air mail service by Col. Lindbergh. Sikorsky advanced nearly 2 points on a single sale. Alexander Industries advanced 1¼.

Public utilities held fairly firm. United Gas Improvement closed a point higher and United Light and Power B advanced 4 points, to 50, duplicating the year's high. Canadian Marconi dropped nearly a point, but Marconi International and Marconi of England showed slight gains. Cities Service advanced to within a fraction of the year's high.

Phelps Dodge soared 20½ points on odd-lot trading. Budd Manufacturing moved up nearly 10 points to a new peak at 67. Other issues to reach new high ground included Northwestern Engineering, Haygart Corporation, Raybestos and Safe-T-Stat.

Oils were mixed, with most of the price changes nominal. J. C. Penney jumped 8½ points. Lerner Stores advanced 1¼ and National Family fell back about a point.

Metals.

Lead was quoted at $7.25 per 100 pounds in St. Louis today.

Slab zinc was quoted at $6.35 per 100 pounds.

RADIO STOCK HAS 96-POINT RANGE IN WEEK'S MARKET

Associated Press Indices of 50 Industrials, 20 Rails and 20 Utilities End at Lower Levels.

By the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, March 9.—Maintaining what has become almost a tradition on a change in national administration, the stock market lost ground during the inaugural week. There were several conspicuous exceptions to the downward trend, notably Radio Corporation (old stock) which soared to a record high at 464 from low of 368 at midweek. But the Associated Press indices of 50 industrials, 20 rails and 20 public utilities all ended at lower levels than a week ago.

High money rates were the chief deterrent to speculative activity, call loans soaring to 12 per cent for the second time this year while time money, commercial paper and bankers acceptances held firm at the highest levels since the post-war deflation crisis.

The revolution in Mexico, the decision of the Anaconda Copper Co. to retire its funded debt through the issuance of additional common stock, the increase of $140,000,000 in Federal reserve brokers' loans, the statement by Paul Warburg, International banker, that control of the money market had passed from the Federal Reserve authorities to stock market operators, the official denial of Radio-Western Union merger rumors and an increase of nearly 35,000 tons in the unfilled orders of the United States Steel Corporation were the outstanding developments of the week.

Trade Largely Professional.

Outside the stock market chief speculative interest centered in the rise in cotton futures to the highest levelt since last July, the renewed decline of Sterling Exchange to around the "gold import" point and the drop in the Canadian dollar to a new low level for the year.

The week's trading in stocks was largely professional in character. Brokerage houses reported that accounts of small customers were well margined, and that there had been little extensive liquidation of long accounts. On the other hand "bear" traders sold stocks heavily earlier in the week, and covered almost as freely when speculators for the advance started aggressive buying operations in the last few days.

Coppers to New Highs.

Output of steel plants is between 90 and 95 per cent of capacity, automobile production is steadily increasing and current earnings reports of most of the leading industrial and railroad companies continue to make favorable comparison with last year.

Most of the copper stocks reached new high ground during the week but all of the gains were not maintained.

WON'T BID UP STOCKS, NOR LIQUIDATE

Reserve's Attitude on Speculation Not Destroying Confidence of Holders of Stocks in Their Equity Positions.

By Leased Wire From the New York Bureau of the Post-Dispatch.

NEW YORK, March 9.—The Evening Post in copyrighted weekly financial review says:

"By its manner of meeting this week's severe money tests the market shows that the February-March adjustment is not shaking faith in the position of stocks. No ordinary market could stand up under a barrage of 12 per cent call money, an unexpected $140,000,000 rise in brokers' loans and Mr. Warburg's brutally bold reminder of 1919-1921. Concern is felt for the immediate movement of stocks on any turn for the worse in credit conditions but the market will not dismiss its hope of easier money before a rise in rates begins to pinch industry. On any substantial recession in prices the volume of trading immediately shrinks as it did after the early June and early December set backs. Apparently the reserve's attitude on speculation is not destroying the confidence of American investors in their equity positions but it obviously is making them reluctant to bid up recklessly for new stock from present market levels.

Reluctant to Be Drastic.

"At no time since the Reserve began its restrictive measures more than a year ago has the market been so convinced as now that the Reserve will resort to any measure within its power in its struggle to keep new money away from speculative channels. Yet it remains as much of a mystery as ever whether the Reserve or the market will win in this interesting contest. Part of the confusion results from the Reserve officials' failure to state publicly or even agree among themselves on exactly what is needed to bring an adjustment satisfactory to the central banking authorities. While the Reserve feels that the expansion in brokers' loans has exceeded all reasonable bounds it will be reluctant to adopt drastic measures to induce liquidation provided it gets evidence simply that the patient's fever has been brought under control.

No Evidence of Injury to Industry.

"The anomaly of the situation is that the rising trend in money rates to date has brought no evidence of injury to industry. Certainly business enterprises have not been in need of funds that were not readily available to them. In the financial district it has been assumed that the steel and motor industries would continue at a record pace in 1929, but that the first sign of recession as a result of dear money might come in the shape of relaxation in the construction industry. As the first quarter of the year draws toward a close, it seems more likely that the test may come in another industry than in building. Contracts awarded for building during February fell 22 per cent below a year ago, but in general the principal change has been in the speculative residential building at a time when demands for major construction and plant programs reveal an underlying position of strength that had not been anticipated.

Raising Funds Through Stock.

"Meanwhile the public's craze for stocks is enabling the managements of American corporations to put through financing programs highly beneficial. By raising funds through the flotation of stock rather than bond issues and by in many cases actually wiping out all funded debts through the sale of stock the managements are preparing themselves to ride through any storms the future may bring. With these revised capital structures the managements could face a long period of depressed earnings without embarrassment. What is more they will be in a position when the time comes if it ever does, to enter the market with a clean structure to sell bonds. Needless to say, the extraordinarily strong earnings position of most American companies at this time enables them to market their junior securities on a more favorable basis than ever before in history and alert managements have not been slow to take advantage of their opportunity."

LONGEST ORCHID SHOW COMES TO END TODAY

World's Finest Collection on View Eight Weeks at Shaw's Garden.

Hundreds of spring-blooming flowers are coming into blossom today at Shaw's Garden, the last day of the Orchid Show which began eight weeks ago in the Floral Display House.

This, the longest as well as most ambitious show ever made of the world's greatest public orchid collection, indicates how that collection has grown. Four years ago 22,000 plants were removed from city smoke, scrubbed clean with fuller's earth—plain soap and water was not enough—and intalled in eight special greenhouses at Gray Summit, where the garden is developing a 1600-acre extension.

Now there are 30,000 or more adult plants at Gray Summit, growing so vigorously as to amaze the scores of orchid growers who come to St. Louis annually to see them. Two shipments from Central America have been received as the result of Superintendent Pring's orchil hunts, but most of the increase is due to propagation of Andean varieties he obtained several years in Colombia. And beside all these are tens of thousands of baby orchids grown from the miscoscopic seed at Shaw's Garden.

One Specimen Worth $1000.

Another factor has a part in the length of this show—three weeks longer than the longest orchid show of earlier years. The two kinds of cattleyas from the Andes—Tulipan and Flora de Mayo—fade and are replaced from week to week, but the slipper orchids, and the long, showy spikes of the cymbidiums, have remained crisply and proudly in bloom throughout the show. Anybody who wants a plant to remain long in flower may get a slipper orchid, but there is one hitch. The superb green slipper orchid displayed in a niche of the orchid pavilion is worth $1000.

Visitors at Shaw's Garden today, however, will have much to see in seasonal flowers before they reach the Floral Display House and the Orchid Show. In the Linnaean House, the red brick building along the wall north of the rose garden and between the main gates and the display house, scores of camellias remain in bloom.

Newer arrivals are beginning to dominate this display. Among them are cyclamen or Alpine violets in many colors, dainty English primroses and frilled Chinese primroses in pale lavender and white. From the slender tendrils and soft green foliage of a Canary Island genista gleams a constellation of yellow flowers, and near it are the myriad blossoms, orange-yellow above and orange-red below, of the Australian tango flower.

More of the tango-flowers may be seen in the display house with the Orchid Show. Here they are trained to grow on wire globes, like ivy. At the entrance of the display house are two huge banks of flowers of the month. Among them are nemesias—orange, crimson, white and a light lavender blue—marigold, ageratums, freesias and many others.

Shell Flower in Bloom.

Those who, completing a circuit of the Orchid Show and Cineraria Show, pass on through the door at the west side of the entrance balcony into the Alcove House, may see the rare shell flower, or false ginger, in full bloom. The East Indian shrub is 10 feet high, and its flowers hang in 10-inch clusters. They are well-named, pearly outside and figured in crimson on an orange field inside, just like exquisitely colored shells.

Back in a propagation house, where the visitors are not likely to penetrate, is a spectacle which astounded a guest of Superintendent Pring yesterday. The guest was Theodore Grevers, representing bulb growers in Sassenheim, Holland.

What Three Years Brought Forth.

In May, 1926, Grevers' principals shipped from Holland a box one foot square, containing moss-covered cuttings of the magnificant Martha Washington geranium in 24 varieties. Yesterday he saw, developed from those 24 cuttings a whole greenhouse packed to capacity with hundreds of large and lustily flourishing plants. In one corner was an army of smaller plants, products of a single year. He counted them. There were 175.

Though the orchids and cinerarias will be removed tomorrow, the seasonal flowers may still be seen in the other houses in increasing profusion, and on Thursday in the Floral Display House will open the annual commercial Spring Flower Show, free to the public, which last year attracted record attendance.

Maid Held on Theft Charge.

KANSAS CITY, Mo., March 9.—Rosi Phillippi, 19 years lod, was arrested here yesterday and returned to Jefferson City, on charges brought by Mrs. Jack Stanford, who employed her as a maid there, that she had stolen $40 and personal belongings. Officers said the girl confessed the thefts.

EARL SHELTON AND B. R. BAKER UNDER ARREST IN ALABAMA

East St. Louis Gangster Caught Transporting Liquor; Confiscation of Auto Likely.

Earl Shelton, East St. Louis gangster, and a companion, B. Roy Baker, have been arersted in Pike County, Alabama, when transporting liquor. East St. Louis police were advised yesterday in a telegram from Attorney-General Charles C. McCall of Alabama.

Proceedings are pending to confiscate the expensive automobile in which they were riding, and the East St. Louis authorities were asked to obtain information as to a mortgage on the car.

Earl and his brothers, Carl and Bernie, formerly were engaged in the saloon business in East St. Louis and in the Southern Illinois gang feuds. The brothers were convicted of participation in the Collinsville, Ill., mail robbery and the Kinkaid, Ill., bank robbery, but the cases were reversed on appeal and remanded for retrial.

M'BRIDE HIGH WINS DISTRICT BASKETBALL TITLE

Wray's Column

WEST PALM BEACH, Fla., March 9.

THE soccer cup game between the Brickies and the Sparta Club of Chicago proved once more that the no-substitute rule peculiar in this pastime ought to be revoked.

Because the goalkeeper of the Brickies suffered a broken leg with the score tied, his team was forced to play the remaining eight minutes of the regular game and a 30-minute extra period with only 10 men in the lineup.

As a result, the Sparta team, shooting against an inexperienced goal tender, taken from the Brickies' forward line, scored two goals in the overtime period and won the game, 3 to 1.

The "no-substitute" rule seems to us to be without an excuse, particularly in the case of injuries. To penalize a club because of an accident is beyond justification. Not only this, but it unbalances the game and gives one team an advantage it in no wise won for itself. It also deprives onlookers the entertainment for which they paid—namely, a battle between 11 men on each side.

The only case in which substitutes might reasonably be barred is the one in which a player is sent out of the game for fouling a foe. In that case, the team management is responsible for the player's deportment and the eleven itself deserves to suffer.

The international soccer body should be petitioned at once to alter this rule. Some concessions have already been made. It is permissible to make substitutions in exhibition contests, but not in cup matches.

If substitutions are right and desirable in one case they are right in all instances. Some day the international body will recognize this fact. In the meantime the absurdity of seeing a contest between 11 men, on one side and 10, nine or even eight on the other is a possibility and in a championship.

The Browns' Outfield.

FIGURES don't lie—but they do, sometimes. For example: Frank McGowan, great hitter, played for the Browns last year. His fielding figures indicate he's just ordinary but don't tell that to Dan Howley.

"McGowan is a great fielder. Where do you get that stuff that he is weak in the field? The records? Throw them in the sewer, if they say Frank can't catch flies. He's great."

Yet the figures for last year show that he fielded .962, which is 30 percentage points below Manush, 20 points below McNeely's figure and 11 points below Schulte—and Schulte made 12 errors last year.

Nevertheless, both Vice President McEvoy and Howley insist that McGowan is a fine fielder. Evidently, the figures are not "hitting on all six" in this man's record.

Heine Manush, of course, has a remarkable record. He played in 154 games and made only three errors. If memory serves, he did not make a single error on his home grounds during the season. Fielding like that, of course, can't be surpassed.

Whatever McGowan's fielding figures may say, all that he has to do to clinch his job this year is to come close to his 1928 batting record with the Browns. He

CARDS TO PLAY FIVE GAMES IN NEXT SIX DAYS

From a Special Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch.

AVON PARK, Fla., March 9.

STARTING with a Sunday game against the Indianapolis Club at Sarasota, the Cardinals will play five contests in six days this week.

Monday the Boston Braves with Lester Bell and George Sisler, call at Avon Park. Wednesday the Red Birds journey to Bradenton to oppose the Red Sox, Boston's other alleged major-league team. Thursday Walter Johnson and his Washington Senators will visit Avon Park for two games in two days. Next Saturday again will be an open date.

By L. A. McMaster

Of the Post-Dispatch Sport Staff.

AVON PARK, Fla., March 9.—Charles "Chick" Hafey is wearing glasses in the spring training drills of the Cardinals here. The slugging leftfielder joined up just two days ago and today was the first time he practiced with the full squad and under the eye of Manager Southworth.

Hitting in the batting cage against the offerings of some of the young pitchers here for the very purpose of giving the regulars lots of batting practice, Hafey impressed his manager with his straightaway punch. He met the ball hard and on the nose.

"He's hitting so good I actually forgot after I got out there to ask him how his eyes were," said Southwort after a trip out to the far corner of the field where the batting cages and sliding pit are located. "He is just a natural walloper."

Same Old Fence Buster.

Taking a turn at the plate, with Bill Hallahan curving the ball, Hafey socked three or four to left field with that old-time whiz to them. He was fouling the sphere when not meeting it squarely, so indications are that he will be just as good using the "cheaters" as he was before. Even in pepper games he grabbed hot shots off the bat of Wattie Holm without batting any one of his four eyes.

The husky Californian is counted on as a big figure in the coming campaign to retain the National League championship.

"Satisfied, I should say I am satisfied," replied Southworth in answer to a query as to how he liked his team at the end of the first full week in training. "Everybody is in fine shape and spirit."

Hurrah for Our Side.

"Did you ever see more spirit than these fellows are showing? I'll answer for you. No. They're all working hard and fighting for jobs. I told the squad every job was open. You can't get fellows to try for anything that is not open to them. So I let each man know

Drake Captures Valley Swim From Bears; Six New Records Are Set

By Gerald Holland.

Drake University took the championship that Washington had held for the past seven years and close competition was responsible for six new records in an eventful Missouri Valley Conference swimming meet at the Wilson Pool last night. Drake's point score was 47. Washington was second with 43, Grinnell fourth with 15 and Oklahoma A. M. last with six points.

Records were broken in the 50-yard free style, 200-yard breast stroke, 400-yard free style, 150-yard back stroke, 220-yard free style, and the 300-yard medley relay events. Jack Maguire, red-haired Drake star and the outstanding performer of the evening, broke three of the records. He clipped three-tenths of a second from the 50-yard swim time with a mark of 25 2-10 seconds. He took a second from the existing mark in the 220-yard event by finishing in 2:37 7-10 minutes and his time of 57.8 seconds in the 100-yard free style replaced the mark of 59 4-10 seconds that had been standing for four years.

Heideman Sets Record.

In the 150-yard back stroke, Capt. Homer Heideman set a new record of 1:52 2-10 minutes by an excellent performance that enabled him to win by almost half the length of the pool. The old record was 1:58 8-10, set by Baer of Washington three years ago. Heideman gave the Washington team in the medley relay a good lead by another fine effort and continued speed of his teammates enabled the Bears to break the record in that event also.

The 200-yard breast stroke event resulted in another new record but the crowd was surprised to see Squires of Drake make it instead of Bob Brenner, the Washington ace. Brenner, favored to win, finished in third place behind Curtis, another Washington man. Brenner pressed Squires during the early laps but he tired at the finish.

The time in each event was better than those made in the Big Six meet held recently.

Nauert of Washington won the fancy diving championship with a good exhibition but his margin over Strong of Drake was only slight.

200-YARD RELAY—Drake, first; Grinnell, second. (Washington disqualified for steal.) Unofficial time—1:47 4-10 seconds.

200-YARD BREAST STROKE—Squires, Drake, first; Curtis, Washington, second; Brenner, Washington, third; Friedman, Washington, fourth. Time 2:44 minutes. (New record.)

50-YARD FREE STYLE—McGuire, Drake, first; Billick, Drake, second; Sample, Washington, third; Strong, Drake, fourth. Time—24 9-10 seconds (New record.)

400-YARD FREE STYLE—Skinner, Washington, first; Gillespie Grinnell, second; Burford, Washington third; Dickens, Oklahoma A. & M. fourth. Time—5:59 4-10 minutes.

150-YARD BREAST STROKE—Heideman, Washington, first; McClelland, Drake, second; Barngrove, Washington, third; Howell, Oklahoma A. & M., fourth. Time—1:52 2-10 minutes. (New record.)

100-YARD FREE STYLE — McQuire, Drake, first; Billick, Drake, second; Sample, Washington, third; Curtis Washington, fourth. Time—57.8 seconds. (New record.)

220-YARD FREE STYLE—McQuire, Drake, first; Skinner Washington, second; Dickens, Oklahoma A. & M., third; Gillespie, Grinnell, fourth. Time—2:37 7-10 minutes. (New Record.)

FANCY DIVING — Naeurt, Washington first; Strong, Drake, second; Wolff, Washington, third; DeLong, Grinnell, fourth.

300-YARD MEDLEY RELAY—Washington, first; Drake, second; Grinnell, third. Time—3:27 2-10 minutes. (New record.)

New Brownie Infield Will Get First Test In Action Tomorrow

By John E. Wray,

Sports Editor of the Post-Dispatch.

WEST PALM BEACH, March 9.—The Browns are probably unique in baseball annals in that they have not played any kind of a baseball game, although the major part of the squad has been in camp for almost two weeks, whereas many baseball team managers favor getting into pratice games as quickly as possible. Manager Dan Howley of the Browns has persisted throughout the stay here, in his "slow and careful" theory of spring workouts.

Manager Dan believes that more arms and legs are damaged than helped by rushing ball players into severe early workouts. As a consequence Howley tonight is smiling, pleased with the sound condition of practically the entire squad, and with the proof of his theories.

After 12 continuous days of work there is not a sore arm or leg in camp that was brought on by practice work. Everyone of the pitchers tonight reported their "wings" in great shape and the legs sound. The hospital list is hardly worth mentioning. It includes Rip Collins who has a "stitch" in his back, although his arm is o. k.; Leonard Dondero, the snappy infielder whose finger is sore, Oscar Estrada, Cuban hurler, who suffered a slight fracture of a finger of his pitching hand and Eddie Grimes, who is not permitted to throw hard because of a slight soreness.

Only Two Miss Workout.

As a result of this hospital squad only two men were absent from today's workout, which was held

Blue at Camp; Manush Is Due Next Wednesday

WEST PALM BEACH, Fla., March 9.

THE number of absentees at the Browns' camp tonight was reduced to two, when Lu Blue, first baseman, arrived here from New York. Blue has been overdue for several days, but reported in seemingly good condition. Heine Manush, another of the missing men advised Vice President McEvoy tonight that he would arrive here next Wednesday. No word has been received from the only other missing player, Frank McGowan.

Krenz of Stanford Sets New World Record of 163 Feet in the Discus

STANFORD UNIVERSITY, Cal., March 9.—Eric Krenz, blonde giant of the Stanford track and field team, broke the world's record in the discus throw today with a heave of 163 feet 8¾ inches. The throw was witnessed and checked by Amateur Athletic Union and Pacific Athletic Association officials.

The throw today was made during the meet with the San Francisco Olympic Club, which Stanford won, 84½ to 46½.

The old mark was 158 feet 1¾ inches, held by Clarence "Bud" Houser and make by the former University of Southern California star in this same stadium three years ago.

John Elliott, representing the A. A. U., declared the mark probably would be accepted. He measured the distance and weighed the discus. The platter weighed 4 pounds and 8 ounces, slightly more than the standard weight.

Krenz's remarkable performance was made under adverse conditions as the field was soggy and he had a wind against him.

The Stanford youngster, who was deleloped last year by Coach R. L. "Dink" Templeton, also holds the I. C. A. A. A. A. records in the shotput and discus, having made both last year. He was a member of the American Olympic team last year, making the team as a shot-putter after having failed to qualify in the discus.

Last Spring Krenz startled the track and field circus when he sent the discus 160 feet but the mark was not acceptable as it was made in practice.

VICTORS PLAY STEADILY TO DEFEAT WEBSTER IN FINAL OF TOURNEY, 21-12

By Harold Tuthill.

The McBride High is the basketball champion of the St. Louis High School District "A" Division since it defeated Webster, 21 to 12, last night in the final round of the District tournament at St. Louis University Gymnasium. Nearly 1500 people saw the winners run rough-shod over Webster. McBride's defense, which was the feature of the meet which began on Tuesday, again functioned perfectly and Webster was held to five points until the last two minutes of play. At that time Carl Yeckel went on a scoring spree against McBride's second team and tallied three field goals and a free throw to bring the Webster total up to 12 points.

Bob Weil started the scoring for McBride when he counted a free throw on Westrup's foul. Gorman sank a field goal from outside the foul line and Webster called for time out. When time began, "Tooky" Durbin sank a field goal and free throw to make the score 6 to 0 in McBride's favor. Yeckel's free throw on Gorman's foul was the only point Webster made in the initial period.

Quick Scoring.

When Gorman scored twice and Durbin once in rapid succession after three minutes of play in the second quarter the game was practically conceded to McBride, since Webster found no satisfactory solution to the champions' fast moving defense. There was no further scoring for either team in this session.

Max Tyrrell dribbled down the floor to score Webster's first field goal at the start of the second half. McBride's slow-breaking offense functioned and Durbin and Stephens scored from scrimmage to make the score, McBride 16; Webster 3; as the third period ended.

Two free throws by Ruff, one by Weil and a field goal by Gorman constituted the scoring efforts of McBride in the final quarter. The score was 21 to 5, when Coach Carl "Toddy" Kamp removed the five regulars and sent in the McBride second team. It was against this quintet that Yeckel scored seven of his eight points.

There was an uninteresting game for the Class B championship, Ferguson High winning from Hancock by a 12—8 score. Hancock scored but one field goal, Schmidt caging it. E. Zimmerman with four successful free throws and Ing, with two, were the only other Hancock players to score. For Ferguson, two players were in the scoring limelight. Burgess was high for the game with seven points made from three field goals and one free throw, while the team's remaining five points were accounted for by Hall, with two field goals and a single free throw.

Both McBride and Webster will be eligible to participate in the State High School tournament at Columbia, March 14 to 16. The finalists in both divisions were awarded cups after the concluding game last night. The respective champions were awarded basketballs which were used during the meet.

The Tournament Paid.

According to H. F. Bannen, chairman of the Tournament Committee the expenses were assured after the games Friday night. The profits will be put in a reserve fund that will be used to hold the annual track and field meet.

HALL DEFEATS JOHNNY LAYTON IN ANGLE MATCH

By the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, March 9.—Allan Hall of St. Louis, defeated Johnny Layton, world's three-cushion billiards champion, 600 to 583 in their special match concluded here tonight. The match went 580 innings with Layton taking seven of the 12 blocks. Hall's victory was due in great part to the big lead he piled up in the first four blocks.

Layton won this afternoon's block, 79 to 50, in 60 innings. He had two runs of 10 and Hall one of five. Tonight Hall closed out the match by winning the last block, 50 to 39 in 41 innings. He had runs of nine and eight. Layton's best effort was a cluster of six.

The two three-cushion stars have been rematched for another 600-point contest starting next Monday.

KID CHOCOLATE PUTS PHIL O'DOWD OUT IN THE FIRST ROUND

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

NEW YORK, March 9.—Kid Chocolate, crack Cuban featherweight, began his second American invasion with a one-round knockout victory tonight over Phil O'Dowd of Columbus, O.

The Ohioan did not have a chance with the dusky battler from Havana. Chocolate hit O'Dowd only three times and knocked him down every time. O'Dowd took two counts of five before he went down to stay. He failed to land a single blow on the Cuban during the two minutes and eight seconds the bout lasted.

Chocolate, at 123½ pounds, seems definitely to have left the bantamweight ranks. O'Dowd weighed 123 pounds.

HOLLEY TEAM OF DETROIT MEETS MADISONS IN SOCCER CUP GAME

VICTOR WILL PLAY CHICAGO SPARTA CLUB IN WESTERN FINAL

FACTS CONCERNING SOCCER CUP GAME

TEAMS—Madisons of St. Louis and Holleys of Detroit.

PLACE—Sportsman's Park, Grand boulevard and Dodier street.

TIME—Kickoff, 3 o'clock.

REFEREE—Jack Johnston of Chicago.

LINESMEN—Oscar Mossmann, St. Louis, and Len Zeuschel, St. Louis.

ADMISSION CHARGE—One dollar.

Winning team will advance to Western final of the National Soccer championship competition.

By Dent McSkimming

Led by Gerrit Visser, the robust Dutch center forward, the Holley team of Detroit will invade St. Louis this afternoon intent upon eliminating the Madison club of this city from the national soccer cup competition. Only three teams remain in the Western division of the national championship tournament, the Spartas of Chicago, the Holleys of Detroit and the Madisons of St. Louis. The victor in today's game will oppose Sparta next Sunday in the Western final.

Last Sunday, in defeating the Goodyear club of Akron, the Holleys ran up a total of 10 goals, Visser scoring four times. This prolific scorer is a native of Holland. He came to the United States three years ago to join the Bethlehem Steel team. His natural position is center forward, but Bethlehem has one of the greatest centers in the soccer world in Archie Stark, and since the preference at Bethlehem is with Scotchmen, Vesser passed on to Detroit. Here he caught on immediately and took Holley all the way to the national final two years ago. In Holland he was a national sport figure, playing on the Dutch team in many international matches. He is said to be a brilliant field general as well as a goal getter.

A Flashy Wing Man.

Anticipating a rough journey in the cup series, the Holley management has recently bolstered its team. Among the new men is a flashy outside right, John O'Shea, who was an outstanding performer against Akron. It is reported, however, that the Detroit fullbacks are not quite on a par with the rest of the team, which fact should give some comfort to St. Louis fans and players.

This will Be Holley's first visit to St. Louis. Several Detroit clubs have appeared here, both in exhibition and cup games, but thus far they have been unsuccessful. The Caledonian Club engaged in a memorable match with the Scullins about five years ago and went back home defeated. Two years ago an all-star team was sent down for a couple of exhibition games and made a very favorable impression. There is no doubt that if things break in their favor the Detroit players might give the Madisons or any other St. Louis team a very bad afternoon.

Remember the Hungarians!

Lest the St. Louis football followers take too much for granted, it may be well to recall the terrific struggle of last spring when the American-Hungarian team of Cleveland forced the Ben Millers to extra periods to win a 4—3 game. Few fans here realized that the Cleveland-Detroit district was developing such forceful soccer. Now, the Holleys have eliminated Goodyear and the latter club was good enough to beat the Cleveland Hungarians, the Magyars and the Slavia teams in cup matches. That means they must be a good football club.

In their cup games thus far, the Holleys have defeated the Wood Hydraulics of Detroit and the Goodyears. The Madisons have won over the Ben Millers of St. Louis and the Thistles of Chicago.

With all regular players available and in good physical condition, the Madisons are hopeful of victory. Weather and field conditions will not greatly affect their chances of victory since they have played equally well on dry or muddy turf. Their surprising 5-to-1 conquest of the Thistles was accomplished on a field ankle deep in mud.

Soccer War Has Cost Money, But Has Proved Beneficial To the Game, Cahill Asserts

By Herman Wecke.

Although the soccer war in the East has hit the pocketbooks of the magnates hard, Thomas W. Cahill, secretary of the United States Football Association, here for the Western semifinals between the Madisons and Holleys, thinks that some good has come out of the battling. According to Cahill, the "war" has brought a closer working agreement with the foreign countries, especially with Great Britain.

The U. S. F. A. through its affiliation with the Federation Internationale de Football, had worked in harmony with this organization since the U. S. F. A. was organized in 1913. However there never has been a true working agreement with Great Britain, an ally of the F. I. F. A., until this season. Great Britain withdrew from the international body because of difference of opinion regarding the amateur rule.

"This present war has cost money," said Cahill, "but it has proved beneficial to the U. S. F. A. in that it has brought about a perfect understanding with Great Britain, working whole-heartedly with the United States to suppress the 'outlaw' circuits."

Will Decide on Final.

The war in the kicking game came about when the American League suspended and fined three member clubs $1000 each for entering the national cup competition. These clubs were Bethlehem, the New York Giants and Newark. Following this move the U. S. F. A. notified the American League officials to rescind the action or drastic action would be taken, within 48 hours. The American League resigned from the national body and since then it has been war to the hilt—a war which has cost both sides plenty of cold-cash, what with athletes jumping back and forth.

Aside from this announcement, Cahill is here on other business besides the witnessing of the Western semifinal, today. There will be a meeting of the Western Committee, immediately following the contest, when arrangements for the playing of the division final will be made with the winner of the local battle facing the Sparta club of the Chicago for the right to tackle the Eastern winner. There is also a possibility that something will be decided regarding the playing of the three-game championship series.

To Hear McCarthy Case.

Then the case of Jim McCarthy, center forward of the Tablers of the St. Louis league, will come up for a hearing. In this, President Armstrong Patterson and Cahill will act as an Emergency Committee. The local circuit, acting on a protest by the Madisons recently, decided to put the case before the national body. The case cropped out of the banishment of McCarthy from a cup tie with the Bricklayers at Chicago, Feb. 17. He thereafter played against the Madisons, Feb. 24, in a game which the Tablers won, and incidentally dethroned the Madisons as league leaders.

The local circuit wants the national officials to decide whether McCarthy stood suspended immediately he was banished or whether the suspension dated from the time he received notice from the U. S. F. A. Rules of the national cup series cover the case. Rule 6, paragraph 2, reads as follows:

A player removed by the referee from the field in a cup tie for misconduct shall stand suspended until his case has been dealt with by the committee or its emergency committee, but any player so removed shall have the privilege of presenting his side of the case to the committee.

Those who will act on the Western final will be Patterson, Cahill, Tom Healey of Detroit and Winton Barker of this city.

United States to Enter Eleven in World Title Meet

THE United States will enter a team in the world chamship soccer tournament to be held in 1930, it was announced by Tom Cahill. The event, which will be decided abroad, is expected to draw elevens from all countries and is open to both professional and amateur clubs.

The competition will be held under the jurisdiction of the Federation Internationale de Football from May 15 to June 15, 1930.

Entries close Jan. 1 and must be accompanied by an entry fee of $100.

The eleven to represent the United States, whether it will be a regularly organized team or one composed of all-stars, will be decided at a later date.

bit .363 which will win a place on any man's club.

A Young Club.

WITH all its veterans the Brownies of 1929 are what may be called a young club. The entire squad has an average of 27. The pitching average counting in all the rookies, is 26½. That means that the average expectation of efficiency for the team would be at least seven or eight years.

Not many first division major league clubs have enough youngsters to bring the grand average of years as low as that.

Takes Nerve to Pitch.

"I LIKE to see Walter Stewart pitch against Babe Ruth," remarked one member of the Browns' strategy board yesterday.

"I remember one day Stewart was facing the Bambino and Babe started kidding Walter. Stewart is cold as ice in a ball game and he sent one over that forced Babe to fall to the ground to avoid it. Babe got up, bat in hand and made as if to walk out toward Stewart.

"Down you go again, just for that" Stewart shouted, and another one fanned Babe's whiskers. Sure enough down went Ruth madder than ever. His conversation wasn't pleasing so Stewart made him hit the dirt at third strike. After that Stewart pitched over three straight strikes, to fan Ruth.

"Babe grinned and as he passed Stewart on his way to the outfield he patted him on the back and complimented him.

"Just for that, Stewart, who felt that the Babe was trying to mollify him, made Ruth hit the ground twice more the very next time he came up. The Babe was white hot. But he couldn't do anything with Stewart.

"If you can get Babe mad and "pressing" his swings, he's easy. When he's normal he doesn't have to do much more than meet a fast ball to put it out of the park."

that every job was open to the one who best could fill it. So they're all hustling.

"Of course, we are not expecting anyone to show up better at first base than Jim Bottomley, the "most valuable player" in the league. It'll be a long time before we find a centerfielder to take Douthit's berth away from him.

"But there are places made vacant by the departure of others. At shortstop, Gelbert might be expected to get the first call. And the same for Selph at second. But we want the best we can get, and anyone who can beat the field will land a regular job.

"About the men's spirit: Last year there was no use of the batting cage in the Cards' spring training. This afternoon I went out there to get some practice. The fellows were crowding in so fast that I couldn't get a turn. And that's the way they all are working at everything."

Two Sore Arms in Camp.

There are only two sore arms in camp according to the pilot. The ailing athletes are Taylor, a young catcher, and Martin a pitcher. All the old timers are throwing the ball about without any pain. Old Pete Alexander said his arm felt loose and free after his two innings work against the Athletics in Friday's game at Fort Myers.

Southworth is so pleased with the work of the young players in camp that he is going to start a pony team in this afternoon's game against the Indianapolis (American Association) club at Sarasota.

Two players who have been called in to help out in the absence of Ernie Orsatti and Fred Haney will start the game. One is George Watkins, a slugging outfielder who has had some experience at first base, who will start at that position. The other is Wilson an infielder, who will give Carey Selph a "spell" at second base. The other infielders will be Delker at short and Dotterer at third.

Pepper to Start at Right.

Ray Pepper, the pinch hitting sensation, will play right field at the start, and if after five innings or so Southworth finds it advisable or desirable to send in his regular team, Pepper will move over to left field to give Wattie Holm a rest and Watkins will finish out in right field.

Gus Mancuso will be behind the plate, with Earl Smith at hand for relief. Six rookies will make up the hurling staff. They are Hal Brown, Lyle Ginther, Ed Wright, Paul Folliard, James Winford and Steve Bysco. The last named will be used only if needed. He has proved his ability in three innings against the Philadelphia Athletics, in which the Mackmen failed to hit the ball out of the infield.

Fred Frankhouse, who was confined to his room for 10 days with tonsilitis was out today. He went to the park and got a good sunning. He seems to have lost through illness all the extra weight that he had intended to work off in training.

Jimmy Wilson did not appear behind the bat in practice. He stopped a foul tip with the middle finger of his right hand in Friday's game but will not be laid up.

Sectional rivalry has put spice into the Municipal Soccer League final, this afternoon. The Angelicas team, champions of Group One at Fairground Park, are representing the north side of town, and the South Side Radios, champions of Carondelet Park No. 1 group, have the support of South St. Louis. Fairground and Carondelet parks have long been hot beds of soccer and the contending teams today are fair examples of the relative strength of the two sections.

Today's match was originally scheduled for last Sunday but the playing field was in bad shape and officials ordered a postponement. The final is a two-out-of-three series. It is probable that if the championship is decided in two straight games the winner will be pitted against the professional league flag winners in a city championship game, on Sunday, March 24.

In their league matches and in their elimination round games both the South Sides and Angelicas proved themselves good football clubs. Each has added strength by drafting two players from rival clubs. In the case of the Angelicas, Forwards Berger and Sullivan are the added stars, and for the South Sides Forward Dias and Halfback Rodriguez are the drafted men.

Both Strong on Defense.

There seems to be a preponderance of defensive strength in both teams, which would lead one to expect a low score. Neither forward line has shown anything sensational in co-ordinated passing although the work of some individuals is above the Muny League average.

Manager Andy Fredrick has been forced to make a last minute change in his forward line, replacing John "Bucket" Rice with Walter Hatchard at outside right. Rice has gone away to join the Tulsa club of the Western League in spring training. It looks to some observers as though the Angelicas gain by the change.

In the South Side lineup there will also be a change. Tom Heidenry, regular center halfback, did not play when his team beat the Finans in a first-round elimination game. Early last season Heidenry had a trial with the Ben Miller club in the professional league and he gave promise of becoming a star. He has many of the attributes of a great center half. Jose Rodriguez, who will be shifted to a wing halfback, may find it difficult to keep from cutting toward the center, for he has played in the middle of the line for several seasons. Manager Tom McHugh will make no other changes.

Clubs Evenly Balanced.

There is little to justify making one team an outstanding favorite. Both have had enough experience to forestall nervousness.

Dick Wall, who is regarded as the best referee in the Municipal League, will handle the game, assisted by side linesmen, goal linesmen and an official timekeeper.

An admission charge of 25 cents will be made to defray the expense of post-season attractions.

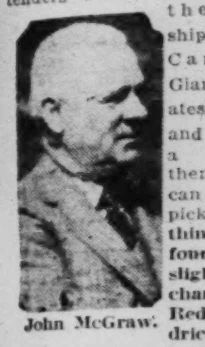
BROWNS

GIANTS' LEADER LOOKS FOR FOUR CLUBS TO FIGHT FOR N. L. FLAG

By John J. McGraw,
Manager, New York Giants
(Copyright, 1929.)

SAN ANTONIO, Tex., March 9.—The race in the National League this coming season is sure to be the toughest baseball has seen—at least, in my thirty-odd years. The American League will also present a hard fight because no single team any longer has a cinch like that enjoyed by the Yankees for the past two seasons.



John McGraw.

In all the years I have been in baseball there were never in the National League so many teams that can be classed as actual contenders with a real chance for the championship. Put the Cardinals, the Giants, the Pirates, the Cubs and the Reds in a bag, shake them up and you can take your pick. Frankly, I think the first four have a slightly better chance than the Reds, but Hendricks is putting together one of the best defensive clubs, aided by first-class pitching, in the league. If he acquires just a little more punch—which he is likely to do—Cincinnati will be right up there swinging with the others.

Right behind the Reds are the Phillies and the Robins, and right here let me say, those Phillies will be a tough team for anybody to beat. Burt Shotton has done a fine constructive job there. He has one of the best defensive clubs in the league and that boy Whitney is a powerful punch. Few of the fans realize that Whitney was one of the leaders in driving in runs last season. Shotton also has improved his pitching.

Robins Will Be Stronger.

The Robins are bound to be stronger with Wright in the infield and they have excellent pitching and a pretty fair punch. Brooklyn also has smart catching. Deberry has never been given full credit for being the smart backstop that he is.

The race is sure to be very close between Cubs, Giants, Pirates and Cardinals. All have improved this season. I know that the Giants are stronger, due to the development of able youngsters and the addition of several good pitchers. Men like Frank Hogan and Carl Hubbell will be better for their year's experience.

The Cubs have acquired what they lacked—another good punch—in Hornsby. They will be dangerous all year. The Pirates have improved their pitching. They already had the speed and the punch.

The Cardinals, pennant winners last year, cannot be taken lightly at any time and more strength has been added.

The Braves are making every possible effort to strengthen the club and it is difficult to say right now just what they have done. They had several streaks of making trouble for the contenders last season and are likely to do it again.

Yanks Face Hard Task.

In the American League the Yankees are up against a hard proposition in trying to win a fourth pennant. This season will be doubly hard for Huggins and his players because everybody will be rooting against them, just as they did against us when we won the fourth time in succession. It is a difficult task. A lot will depend on how Lazzeri has recovered from his injury.

The opposition of the Yanks will also be harder because of the strength developed by the Athletics and the St. Louis Browns. I expect to see those Browns one of the outstanding clubs of the year. They now have the feel of winning.

The Detroit Tigers will surely cause trouble. They have practically a new ball club. If the combination isn't right, Bucky Harris is the kind of leader who will make it right. He is a thorough builder.

Cleveland will add a lot of interest to the race with almost a brand new ball club. It would be a great thing for the game if Cleveland came through with a real good team. The whole outfit is new and full of ambition. The Bradleys are great men for baseball. They are keen business men and financially able to put over any plan that they may develop. Of course, they are helped immeasurably by Billy Evans who knows what baseball is all about.

Will Be Interesting Teams.

Washington and the White Sox will also be interesting to watch. Either of them may step out and tangle up the race. We are all watching to see how Walter Johnson starts off as a big league manager and I believe everybody in the country is pulling for him.

The season in both big leagues is bound to be unusually interesting to the fans on account of the large number of new players in the game.

Yes, I sincerely believe we are in for two great fights. It would be difficult to pick a set up in either league.

ELDER EQUALS 60-YARD RECORD FOR 15TH TIME

By the Associated Press.

NOTRE DAME, Ind., March 9.—Piling points in almost every event on the program, and scoring enough first places to assume a commanding lead, the University of Notre Dame track team won its third consecutive victory in the annual central conference championships, here this afternoon with a total of 44½ points. Michigan State which had been to defeat the Irish in the annual event, was second with 33 points and the other teams finished in the following order: Ohio Wesleyan 13; Miami and Grinnell 7; Marquette and Butler 6; Western State 4½; Detroit University 5; Detroit City College 4; De Paul 3; Drake, Depauw, Kalamazoo and Lincoln 2 each.

Meet records were broken and tied and one worlds record was equalled three times when more than 200 athletes led the assault on the marks. Capt. Jack Elder of Notre Dame, equalled the world's 60-yard dash record for the thirteenth, fourteenth and fifteenth times in his college career when he ran the distance in .06 1-5.

Earl McAtee of the Michigan State team vaulted 12 feet 10⅝ inches to break the conference record for the pole vault. Capt. Dwight Kane of Ohio Wesleyan repeated his brilliant efforts of a year ago when he won both high and low hurdles events. Kane tied the conference records held by himself in each case. Bob Walsh of Notre Dame barely missed beating the old shot put mark when he hurled the iron ball 46 feet.

Notre Dame got off to an auspicious start when Elder and Bogni placed first and second in the 60-yard dash.

Bill Brown of Notre Dame took a second in the mile run a moment later and his teammate Bob Brennan scored a fourth. Off to this commanding lead, Notre Dame was able to keep in the van the rest of the afternoon. Michigan State scored heavily in the pole vault and 2-mile run to threaten the Irish in the late stages of the meet, but Notre Dame won a first in the mile relay to cinch the affari. Twenty-five hundred people watched the events.

ST. MICHAEL LEADS PAROCHIAL LEAGUE

With an unblemished record of six games won and none lost, the St. Michael quintet leads the East division of the Parochial Grade School Basketball League in the standings released today. In so doing, the St. Michael players have rolled up a total of 155 points against their opponents' 31.

St. Lawrence is second, with two games won and four lost. St. John's is third with five defeats and one victory.

HILLCREST TO HOLD BANKERS' TOURNEY

Pre-season arrangements are being made for a South Side Bankers' golf tourney at Hillcrest Country Club to start about June 1. Seven banks have already entered teams of four men each. This tournament will be conducted on a match play handicap basis, and a trophy will be awarded to the winning bank. The cup must be won three times before it is kept permanently.

New Brownie Infield to Get Its First Test Tomorrow

under a burning sun and a temperature conductive to perspiration. The absentees were Rip Collins who was ordered back to the hotel, after a club house inspection; and Dondero, who also was ordered to quit work, after a run around the park. Dondero will rest until Monday, but Collins probably will work with the batterymen, early tomorrow morning, no regular Sunday workout being scheduled.

Dondero typifies the enthusiasm displayed by this bunch of young men. Although told not to use his hands Dondero began going through his paces with the rest of the squad, this morning. Manager Howley shouted at him and then ordered him off the field.

Can You Imagine?

"I thought I told you not to use that hand," Howley said.

"Gee, I can't be out here in uniform and not work," Dondero complained. "It's torture. I just have to cut in."

"Well, run around the park twice and take off your uniform, and that will keep you from working, I guess. Don't you show up here again until Monday morning," Daniel added.

"It's the hardest thing in the world to hold them down," Dan explained. "I pretend to be sore, but I'm tickled with the spirit they show. This Dondero, like most of my boys, just can't be still. He loves to play. And that sort makes baseball players."

Practice Game Tomorrow.

The squad went through its usual practice with plenty of pep, and will be ready for the game Monday. Howley declares that he will put on a five-ining contest Monday, whether the missing regulars are on hand or not. He is particularly anxious to settle his infield problem, but the injuries to Dondero and Grimes have thus far prevented an adequate test of these two men at third base.

Howley's first plan contemplates, as told, the playing of O'Rourke at second base and either Grimes or Dondero at third. If both of these men fail, the infield of last year will be available. Kress and Blue are the infield fixtures, as is O'Rourke, although there is a question whether Frank will be at second or third.

O'Rourke is the allround champion of the club. In addition to being a star at second, third or shortstop, he will also be the substitute first baseman, if anything keeps Blue out of the game. That's covering some territory.

Progress Satisfactory.

"I'm satisfied with the progress made in two weeks," Howley said today. "It's condition I'm after, and you can see for yourself that my boys are in fine shape. I will begin to speed them up next week, and by the time our exhibition games start, my pitchers will be going well and there will be sound legs and arms in camp. I've never yet failed to take a team North from spring training in good condition and I don't expect to begin this year.

"This week I'll give all hands more running to strengthen their legs and wind, and also I'll start teaching plays to the boys and for that reason I want my infield fit. I doubt if there is a major league club that has done as much work or is better advanced than the Browns, although we have not even had a practice game among ourselves. The fact is that a ball club can do more work of a helpful kind by continuous practice than by playing early games. In this way, all of the men get plenty of work doing all sorts of things, whereas, in a game they only get a few chances.

"We will begin to show results after March 16, when we open against Columbus."

Three-Hour Workout.

Today the men were kept at it for three hours and went through the gamut of training stunts, starting with knockabout limbering up and continuing on through bunting, covering first by pitchers, batting practice, outfielding by the pitchers and infield defensive work. It is a hard grind and the fact that the men go through to the end with plenty of pep proves their endurance.

In the hitting workout today, Tom Jenkins met his first Waterloo. Tom has been batting everyone's slants to all corners; but today he faced Walter Stewart and was vanquished. Stewart was cutting loose a bit and the powerful swings of Jenkins could not do better than a foul. Jenkins did not connect solidly, even for a fly, with Stewart's hooks. Apparently Jenkins is not so strong against southpaws. But he surely has smacked the right hand deliveries.

All of the hurlers tried out their stuff today, showing that the pitching of the squad is well advanced. The batters were not doing so well and Schulte and Wallie Schang were about the only ones who had consistent good fortune. Manion is meeting the ball well and is full of pep and action when catching. There is no doubt that Manion will be one of the main stays of the receiving department, this season. Rick Ferrell is not permitted to throw much. Howley wants him to come along gradually. He fills the eye pleasingly in practice, but more will have to be seen of his work to get a true line on him.

Interest attaches to the work of Wally Schang and Sam Gray, both of whom were put out about three weeks before the close of last season by broken bones. Sam Gray suffered a fractured finger when a batted ball put it out of commission. That hurt Sam's season record for he was going good and probably would have pitched five games and won at least three of them. Schang, soon after, broke an ankle sliding into base. It was feared both men might be handicapped, this year. On the contrary, both have worked out at top speed and neither has shown the slightest inconvenience outwardly It seems certain that both will again be able to do their normal stuff.

Kress' hitting still interests onlookers. He is swinging powerfully but is not hitting the ball safely with regularity. Howley thinks Kress is a natural hitter and sure to recover from the late season slump that ruined his average. Kress, like Dondero, loves to play. That helps make ball players great.

Big Schulte fills the eye, this this year. He hits the ball better than anyone in camp, at this time and he is as fleet as a deer on the bases. It probably is not generally known that Schulte holds two medals for sprint races, both of which he won in ten seconds flat for the hundred yards.

The first exhibition game in which members of the team will take part will be held March 12, when the Patio Lamaze team, captained by George Lamaze, will play a picked team of Brownies for the benefit of the children's fund. The event is an annual affair for the Browns and several hundred dollars were raised last year in this way.

TULSA DEFEATS FLYERS, 13-3, IN SEASON'S FINAL

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

TULSA, Ok., March 9. — The league leading Tulsa Oilers made a clean sweep of the season's eight games with the St. Louis Flyers by burying the tailenders under an avalanche of goals tonight, 13 to 3.

In adidtion to scoring almost at will, the Tulsa team played a vicious back checking game and had the Flyers shooting from center ice or the blue line most of the time. The first St. Louis score came on a peculiar break. In the second period Headley's shot was caught by McCusker in his hand and when the goalie dropped the puck it scooted into the net.

Duke Keats was the scoring star, he made three goals himself and got an assist on another.

Mora nand Boileau came near mixing in the second period and were put off for roughing.

Tonight's game closed a disastrous season for the Flyers, who won 10 games, lost 28 and tied two.

KANSAS CITY SCORES FIRST GOAL IN 8 GAMES AND TIES ST. PAUL, 1-1

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

ST. PAUL, Minn., March 9.—Kansas City scored its first goal in eight games here tonight and managed to hold the St. Paul hockey team to a 1 to 1 overtime tie here tonight.

It was the final game of the season for the Kansas City, while St. Paul has two games remaining at Tulsa.

Paavo Nurmi Is Reinstated by A. A. U.; Wins

By the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, Mar. 9. — Paavo Nurmi, greatest of Finland's many great runners, was reinstated to good standing by the Registration Committee of the Metropolitan Association, A. A. U., late today and celebrated his return to competition by winning, with his countryman, Ove Anderson, a two-mile two-team race at the Seventh Regiment games tonight.

The Finn, under A. A. U. ban since he failed to appear for the National A. A. U. championships, Feb. 23, was restored to good standing at a special meeting of the Registration Committee late this afternoon.

Although little could be learned as to the reason for the sudden reinstatement it was announced that the committee finally had been convinced that Nurmi really was ill, as he has claimed, on the night of the national championships. Doctors' certificates to that effect have been investigated and found to be bona fide, it was announced. Nurmi's reinstatement followed as a matter of course.

Informed of the committee's action, Nurmi, who has been anxious to get back into competition, immediately went to the Seventh Regiment games and asked permission to run in the two-mile race with Anderson as his partner. Permission was granted and the Finns, although having trouble in passing the baton, won by 15 yards in 3 minutes, 17 seconds.

The race was a 20-lap affair, with each man running a lap and then passing the baton to his partner. Nurmi grabbed the stick without trouble, but Anderson didn't get the hang of it until the race was half over.

Second place went to the Swedish-American A. C. team of Eugene Venzke and Staggenborg. The Brooklyn Central Y. M. C. A. team of Pell and Jones was third.

BASS AND ABAD WILL BOX HERE AGAIN, MARCH 19

Benny Bass of Philadelphia and Davey Abad of Panama have accepted terms for a return battle of 10 rounds on the Coliseum fight program for Tuesday night, March 19, according to Matchmaker Jack Tippett of the Fred W. Stockham American Legion Post.

In a 10-round bout on the last Coliseum card, Feb. 28, Bass won o popular decision over Abad.

Bass previously had earned a referee's decision over Abad in a 10-round battle at Philadelphia where the elusive Panama featherweight qualified for the match by decisively outpointing Pete Nebo, after that fighter won a decision over Bass, and by fighting Eddie Shea 10 rounds to a draw. Abad also holds a 10-round decision over Tony Canzoneri, the New Orleans scrapper who won the title from Bass in a 15-round bout at New York a year ago.

Abad is now training at Hot Springs, Ark., but his handlers plan to bring him to St. Louis within the next day or two to finish his preparatory work at the National Gymnasium. Bass has been taking a rest at Atlantic City since his departure from St. Louis. He plans to resume training in Philadelphia on Tuesday and to report here next Sunday.

Ruth Says Confidence and Correct Timing Make Great Batsmen

By Babe Ruth.
(Copyright, 1929.)

WHEN Al Simmons first broke into the American League a lot of the wise boys predicted that he wouldn't last out his first season.

"He steps in the bucket" they said—meaning that when he takes his stride his left foot (Al is a right hand hitter) pulls away from the plate.

"A sucker for a curve ball" the pitchers told each other. And then tried him out. Al promptly knocked their curves to all corners of the lot—and he's still doing it. And stepping in the bucket just the same.

BABE RUTH.

Which just goes to show that there's no rule governing the good hitter. I don't think there's another man in either league who could stand at the plate the way Al does, and still hit the size of his hat. But stepping in the bucket is Al's natural hitting form—and what is natural is generally best in baseball.

Al overcomes that back step by using an exceptionally long bat—the longest in the league I think, and just as long as the baseball law will allow. The result is that he can reach the outside corner for a curve if he has to, and at the same time he's far enough away that the inside stuff doesn't bother him.

The most important thing about hitting is to be natural, and be easy.

George Burns, the Cleveland first baseman, is another hitter whose stance at the plate is entirely off form. George stands perfectly straight, with his feet right together. There's no other man in either league who stands that way. Even if they tried it the chances are they would be a complete bust. Yet George hits—and hits well. And what is more, he hits most any sort of pitching.

Sewell Hard to Fan.

JOEY SEWELL has always appealed to me as about the ideal type of left handed hitter. Sewell stands up there flat footed, feet fairly far apart and firm set in the box. He takes his swing from the shoulder, putting his body into the pivot only at the last minute. The result is that he's a hard man to fool. The strikeout record proves that. For the past three or four seasons Joey has struck out less than any man in the league. One season he went through 154 ball games and struck out only three times. A fellow like that is a real hitter.

Tony Lazzeri is another chap who gets most of his drives from the wrist. Tony used to be a boilermaker, and constant use of the heavy boilermaker tools plus the arm exercise has developed his forearm and wrist mscles to the limit. Tony really is built slight and to look at his hands you'd never dream of their power. His fingers are long and tapering, his palms are narrow and almost girllike. But he has a wrist and forearm like steel. That's what gives him his driving power at the bat and his snap throw from second.

No ball player ever made good either as a hitter or a fielder unless he had well developed wrist and forearm muscles. There are a lot of exercises that can be used to get that development.

Many Hitters Make Mistake of Using Bats Too Heavy for Them

ONE of the common faults of kid hitters particularly, is that they don't use the proper bat. Most of them try to swing bats that are too heavy, figuring of course that the heavier the bat, the more distance they can get. That's wrong. Any time a player uses a bat that feels heavy in his hands, he's making a mistake. The ideal bat is one that balances perfectly, one that can be swung with the same easy, smooth motion with which you swing your arms. A too heavy bat requires a jerk to start on it's way, and once under way it requires additional effort to direct its course. Naturally that makes a jerky, choppy swing. Not so good.

The Longer Bat.

THE longest bat in the big leagues is swung by Al Simmons. I've already told about that. The shortest bat I ever saw in my day was used by Whitey Witt—a stubby club with a thick handle. The reason for that was, that as a lead off man Whitey's business was to get on base. He bunted a lot, and a thick handled bat gave him a chance to get hold of balls thrown inside.

I don't know who uses the lightest bat today, but Wally Schang, the old Yankee catcher, uses one of the lightest. Alongside my bat, Schang's looks like a toothpick. Earl Combs uses a light bat, too. Rogers Hornsby is another chap who uses a fairly light model. So does Sam Rice of the Senators.

Now and then some player will come along with a freak bat of some sort. Like the old bottle bat that Heine Groh used to use. So far as I can see there's nothing to that sort of thing—except perhaps in the mind of the man using the bat. If some freak stick will give him confidence, why it's a good thing. After all, confidence is one of the biggest things in hitting.

A few years ago Sam Crawford, the old Detroit outfielder and slugger, sent me a sample bat from the Coast. It was one of those trick things made out of four separate sections, pasted and fitted together. Sam wanted me to try it out and see how it worked.

The first time up I hit the ball over the fence for a home run and during the entire game I got myself two doubles and a single in addition to the home run. Naturally I was tickled pink. In the clubhouse that night I had Woodie send Sam an order for six of the bats.

They came along a few days later, and Col. Ruppert happened to be in the clubhouse when they arrived. He took a peek at the bill and threw his hands in the air. Those bats were listed at $6 each.

"Well, Ruth," the Colonel commented, "I guess we keep these bats in the safe, eh, with the mortgages and family jewels."

The funny part of it all is, that a few days later some manager protested that the bats were illegal—since they were made of four separate pieces of wood. As a result, the umpires ruled them out, and so far as I know the good Colonel still has those six bats stored away "in the safe with the mortgages and the family jewels."

The best woods for bats is either ash or hickory. Both are tough hard woods, with plenty of "spring" (elasticity). The hickory is a little heavier than the ash. For myself I usually use hickory, but most of the boys prefer ash. In buying a bat, the chief thing to look for is a smooth, even grain.

As to Confidence.

BUT when all is said and done, confidence is the biggest thing in hitting. Fellows who go up there to the plate with a lot of confidence are pretty apt to hit.

Fellows get queer notions in hitting. They have superstitions about their bats, they have superstitions about certain pitchers. Hitters will tell you in all seriousness that certain pitchers have their number, or that certain other pitchers are always easy.

Late last season I started a stunt which gave the boys quite a laugh for a time. I started "potching" my bat for home runs, like the old gunmen used to notch their guns when they killed a man. Every time I would hit a home run I would cut a notch in the bat handle of the club I had used. At first the boys began laughing, but as September came around and I started hitting all sorts of pitching for home runs they changed their tune.

I have one bat in the clubhouse that has seven notches in the handle, and another one that has 11. Eleven is about as many as a bat will hold, for the minute you start notching the hitting surface the umpires will throw the bat out. The whole thing started as a sort of "kid," and, as a matter of fact, I wasn't superstitious about those notches at all. But most of the gang throught I was. And I did accomplish one thing. By putting those notches in the bat I identified my own clubs and the other fellows would leave my bats strictly alone.

One other thing while we're on the subject of hitting. All hitters have different styles. Some swing flatfooted, others take a long stride. Some choke and some swing. But there are certain features in which all hitters—if they're good ones—act alike.

They have to have perfect balance, perfect timing and a good eye. Balance and timing are much the same. It is timing which enables a man to meet the ball at the exact instant when all his body is thrown into the swing. It's timing which enables a man to hit fast and slow balls with equal ease. It is timing which, more than any one thing, is the secret of real hitting.

And the unfortunate thing about it is that timing is one thing which you can't teach. It's born into a man. You either have it or you haven't. Little kids, starting to go to singing school, are the same way. Either they have a musical sense or they haven't—and if they haven't they never acquire it.

Proper Timing.

All forms of athletics depend on timing. It's the secret of golf and handball and tennis. It's the secret of boxing, and it's the secret of football offense. A few years ago I saw Red Grange run for three touchdowns against the University of Pennsylvania eleven. And the thing that impressed me most was not his speed, or his power. It was his timing. It was so perfect that he could avoid tackles by the split part of an inch. His timing was so perfect that in going through the line he always managed to reach his hole at the very instant when it was open widest. And that is timing developed to the last degree.

RECORDS FALL AS IOWA WINS BIG TEN TITLE

By the Associated Press.

IOWA CITY, Ia., March 9.—Three records including a new American mark were established and two were equaled as Iowa scored a surprising triumph in defeating Illinois, defending champion, in the Western Conference indoor track and field championship meet here tonight.

The Hawkeyes, scoring in seven of the 10 events, amassed a total of 29 2-3 points. Illinois, making a courageous but losing fight was the runner-up with 20 5-6. Wisconsin was third with 15 5-6 and Chicago fourth with 13 5-6.

The balance of the points were divided as follows: Michigan 7 5-6; Ohio State 7, Indiana 6, Purdue 5, Northwestern 3 and Minnesota 1.

The new American record established was in the pole vault, which Henry Canby, a 21-year-old lad of Mt. Pleasant, Iowa, won with a leap of 13 feet, 7½ inches. Canby made this record-breaking performance off a dirt take-off and eclipsed the former record of 13 feet, 6 3-16 inches made by Tom Warne of Northwestern in a dual meet this year.

Carr's Record Stands.

The record established by the Iowa youngster is distinct from the mark of 14 feet, 1 inch, made by Sabin Carr of Yale, who achieved his record off a board floor.

The other records established were in the one-mile run, and 70-yard high hurdles. Orval Martin of Purdue ran a sparkling race in the mile, coming from behind in the last 250 yards and breasting the tape in a burst of speed in 4:22 9-10, clipping a half-second off the record set by Kennedy of Ohio State in 1926.

Harold Haydon of Chicago won the 70-yard high hurdles in :08 7-10, setting a new record. His performance took one-tenth of a second off the former record held by Frank Cuhel of Iowa.

George Simpson, the seasoned sprinter from Ohio State equaled the conference indoor record of :06 2-10 in the 60-yard dash. He broke the tape a scant foot ahead of Eddie Tolan, Michigan sophomore Negro star. Judd Timm of Illinois, who established the record last night in his trial heat, finished fourth in the final tonight almost a foot behind Root of Chicago.

David Abbot of Illinois, in equaling the two-mile record of 9:26 4-10 made a gallant attempt to better the mark. Abbott finished better than a half lap ahead of the field. He was clocked in 4:37 for the first mile.

Stevenson Is Iowa's Hero.

Illinois' doom was sealed when it was shut out in the mile relay, finishing a poor fourth in the second section of this event. Iowa won it in 3:25 6-10, chiefly through the efforts of Vaughn Stevenson, the Hawkeye anchor man, who picked up 10 yards in the greatest exhibition of grit and determination displayed in the meet. Stevenson overtook the Ohio State anchor man close to the tape, winning by a scant yard. Three sophomores, Thomas, Ferguson and Depping ran with Stevenson.

The Illini, overwhelmingly favored to retain the championship, began to lose heavily after going into the lead when Abbott won the two-mile, and Orlovich and White finished in a dead heat in the 880-yard run. Thereafter Illinois was losing ground with Iowa picking up points and steadily increasing its winning total.

The summaries:

ONE-MILE RUN—Won by Martin of Purdue; Letts, Chicago, second; Stine, Illinois, third; Clapham, Indiana, fourth. Time—4:22 9-10. (New Western Conference record. Former record of 4:23 4-10 made by H. W. Kennedy of Ohio state in 1926.)

60-YARD DASH—Won by Simpson, Ohio State; Tolan, Michigan, second; Root, Chicago, third; Timm, Illinois, fourth. Time—:06 2-10. (Ties conference record made last night by Timm; also ties the American indoor record.)

440-YARD RUN — Won by Stevenson, Iowa; Davidson, Wisconsin; second; Abramson, Indiana, third; Henke, Wisconsin, fourth. Time—:51 2-10.

TWO-MILE RUN—Won by Abbott, Illinois; Fields, Indiana, second; Dilley, Wisconsin, third; Anderson, Minesota, fourth. Time, 9:26.4. (Ties conference record made by Chapman of Wisconsin in 1926.

880-YARD RUN—Dead heat between White and Orlovich, Illinois; Moulton, Iowa, third; Gunn, Iowa, fourth. Time, 1:56.9.

SHOT PUT—Won by Behr, Wisconsin, distance 45 ft. 7⅛ in.; Forwald, Iowa, second, distance 45 ft. 6 in.; Weaver, Chicago, third, distance 44 ft. 2¾ in.; Poorman, Michigan, fourth, distance 42 ft. 6⅛ in.

King Tut Scores Kayo.

By the Associated Press.

MILWAUKEE, Wis., March 9.—King Tut, Milwaukee welterweight, knocked out Augie Pisano, of Brooklyn, in the eighth round of a ten round boxing contest here tonight. It was Tut's fight all the way.

UPSET LAD, FAVORITE, WINS $10,000 FLORIDA DERBY; BORIS SECOND

STAND BY SETS EARLY PACE BUT WEAKENS IN HOME STRETCH

MIAMI, Fla., March 9.—Upset Lad, owned by the Belle Isle Stable, today won the first $10,000 added Florida Derby at Hialeah Park. Boris, owned by Harned Brothers, was second and Stand By, belonging to Frank Bray, finished third.

Upset Lad won by a head with Boris two lengths ahead of Stand By.

Upset Lad ran the mile and an eighth in 1:53 2-5 over a fast track with J. Burke in the saddle. Upset Lad was the favorite, paying 7 to 5. He earned $8600 for his owner by coming in first. Boris won $2000, Stand By $1000 and John B., the fourth horse, $500.

The start was good with Boris breaking in front, closely followed by Stand By and Virado. Stand By took the lead at the quarter when Jockey P. Walls took Boris behind the pace. Stand By held a length advantage over Virado at the quarter. At the half mile, Upset Lad came up to take second place with Boris a length ahead of Virado. Stand By held the lead until the stretch turn where Burke sent Upset Lad along at a fast pace. In a thrilling stretch duel, Upset Lad, under Burke's whip, to beat Boris, which was closing fast, by a head for first money.

Boris raced prominently under slight restraint the first six furlongs and responded gamely under punishment when the final issue came. He would have won in another stride. Stand By set a fast pace and saved ground on the turns but tired during the latter part of the trip. He beat John B. by three lengths for the show. John B. ran an even race.

WAR HAWK, RIDDEN BY WATSON, VICTOR IN NEW ORLEANS RACE

NEW ORLEANS, March 9. —War Hawk, running in the silks of E. Grace and ridden by K. Watson scored in a sensational finish here in winning the Grand Coteau Handicap, a mile and one-sixteenth gallop here today. Genial Host was second with Wildrose Stable's Crossco third. McGonigle, a promising candidate for the Louisiana derby performed in this race and received a public tryout and his efforts was a real good one despite the poor judged ride. McGonigle got the best of a bad start and Jones instead of taking advantage of the lead began to ease back his mount with the result that McGonigle was third going around the lower turn on the inside and in close quarters. This move allowed all the other horses which were away poorly to race up close. Shasta Klan cut out the running, with War Hawk second and McGonigle third. Shasta Klan tired around the upper turn and then War Hawk took the lead. Jones tried to get McGonigle up but the colt just could not close the ground. Jones whipped him hard but of no avail. War Hawk and Genial Host drew away with the final furlong with War Hawk winning in a drive by a nose. Genial Host took the place by three lengths from Crossco with McGonigle fourth. The winner paid $21 30.

PRINCIPIA SWIMMERS TO COMPETE IN MEET AGAINST KEMPER M. A.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

BOONVILLE, Mo., March 9.—The Principia swimmers of St. Louis, the only team in four years to defeat Kemper Military School, will come here March 16, it was announced today, to engage in a meet that will end the deadlock of their one-up tie in victories. In contests of the past two years, the two schools have shared victories.

Illness of several of the Yellow Jacket stars recently has set the cadets back in their preparations for the pending meet, although Lieut. D. O. Allison is daily putting his men through a rigorous training program.

Callander, recovering from a sinus operation, recently broke the Kemper tank record in the 100-yard free event, covering the distance in 60.6 seconds, and knocking off three seconds from the best previous time. Blackman, a relay man, may also be out of the pending meet.

The probable lineup given out by Coach Allison includes the pair tentatively placed in the 40-yard and 100-yard free style events. Upham and Twitchell are slated for the 100-yard back stroke; Helm and Sleeper in the 220-yard free; Leggat and Litt in the diving; Johannes, Dent, Blackman and Sleeper in the 160-yard relay.

St. Louis Amateur Billiard Stars and Their Sponsor

IN recent western amateur championship tournaments, Agniel, a three-cushion player, and Schaap, a balkline star, finished second. Both are products of Peterson's room and the expense of sending them to Minneapolis and Detroit for the tournament play was shouldered by "Pete."

Agniel, in his first intercity tournament, surprised three-cushion followers by carrying Shimon, the Milwaukee expert to the final match before being stopped. His game average indicates that he must henceforth be regarded as one of the strongest amateur three-cushion players in the country.

Schaap earned the right to represent St. Louis in the Midwestern balkline championship by winning the city title from Ed Gibbons. He went through his first five games at Detroit in sensational fashion, but was finally tied for the lead by Ray Fessenden, of Madison, Wis., who then beat the St. Louisan in the playoff. Schaap's game average was the best of the tournament and he has been invited to compete in the National Amateur championship tournament at Milwaukee, April 18. He intends to accept the invitation.

GORDON IN FINALS OF RACQUETS AND SQUASH MEETS

Jack Gordon came a bit closer to duplicating his feat of last season when he won city championships in racquets and squash tennis by advancing to the final of the racquets tournament yesterday afternoon with a straight-game victory over Paul Goessling. The scores were 18-17, 15-11, 15-12.

Gordon, having advanced to the squash tennis final earlier in the week, is now in position to defend both of his titles. He will face the survivor of the Goessling-Hoerr match in the final squash match next Saturday, and on the same day he will play the winner of the racquets semifinal between E. R. Joslyn and Truman Walker. Both of the remaining semifinal matches will be played on Tuesday.

Winner in Form.

Gordon was in fine form against Goessling in the semifinal racquets match. Although his opponent was a match for him in excellent court coverage, the defending champion had a margin in his soft corner shots. Gordon overlooked few opportunities in catching Goessling off balance with a fast straight ball.

Goessling is favored to defeat Roland Hoerr in the squash tennis semifinal for another chance to take a championship from Gordon. Goessling is conceded a better chance of deposing the champion at tennis.

All Finals Saturday.

All final matches will be contested next Saturday, the day of the annual Red and Blue competition at the University Club in which all of the players participate.

Yesterday's results:

Championship recquets semifinal—Jack Gordon defeated Paul Goessling, 18-17, 15-11, 15-12.

Class B racquets semifinal—W. M. Martin defeated R. B. Smith, 15-7, 15-7.

Third round Class B squash—W. Muckerman defeated C. R. McGinley, 15-3, 15-6, 16-18, 15-12. G. F. Newhard defeated Ellis Fischel, 15-8, 18-17, 15-0.

Boris raced prominently under slight restraint the first six furlongs. He responded gamely under punishment, when the final issue came, would have won in another stride. Stand By rated in front and saved ground the entire trip. John B. secured clear passage the entire trip and had no excuse.

St. Louis Golf Clubs Prepare for Big Season; Two New Courses to Open

By W. J. McGoogan.

Anticipating the greatest season of golf this city has experienced, 19 clubs in St. Louis and vicinity, municipal, public fee and private, are grooming their courses, refurbishing the fairways, improving the greens, and in other ways getting ready for the army of club swingers which is expected to advance over the links within a short time.

At present the courses are still under winter wraps but those who have observed the opening of many seasons here forecast that active playing will commence about March 15.

Two brand new courses of low initiation fee with a nominal charge for each round of golf will be opened soon. These are the Lake Hill and the Hill Crest.

Among the private clubs where the greatest changes have been made are Triple A and North Hills. At Triple A nine reconstructed greens will be opened about April 1. Work on them started late last summer when they were sodded with new bent grass and Benny Richter, club professional, thinks they will rank among the finest greens in the district.

Southpaw Professional.

Richter is a lefthanded professional, the only one in this district. He recently returned from a trip through the far West during which he participated in many of the winter tournaments with success. For 21 rounds played in and around Los Angeles, Richter shot an average of 75 for each 18 holes.

At North Hills the new $150,000 club house was recently opened. It is a very attractive building of Spanish design and provides all comforts for men and women golfers.

A dormitory will be available for golfers who desire to stay at the club overnight in order to get an early start on a morning's game. The men's locker rooms are complete in every detail, while the women's rooms are said to be attractively decorated and furnished.

The huge lounge and dining room accommodated 600 persons at the opening function without undue crowding.

There has been a great increase in the club's membership due to the admission of associate members at a low charge. These members are permitted every privilege of the club, but are required to pay a fee for each round of golf and are restricted to play on the east course, the west course being reserved for bondholding members.

Few changes are to be made in either the west or the east course, according to Joe Henry, the club professional. The greens have always been satisfactory and are regarded as among the best in the district. A new water hazard is being constructed at No. 6 hole on the west course.

Two New Members.

Elliott Whitbread and Bryan Winter, two of the leading amateur players of the city, have become members of North Hills.

At Glen Echo the course which was reconstructed last year should be in much better shape for play this season. The No. 1 fairway, which provides an interesting test of skill with its dog leg to the left with a banked turn, should give golfers plenty of pleasure this summer, for it probably will be much smoother, as will No. 18 fairway, which also was new last season.

Francis Schwartz, former caddie master, has taken over the position of club professional at Midland Valley, formerly held by Wyndham Munroe, who has moved to the Lake Hill course.

Aside from the usual spring grooming there will be no change in the course at Midland Valley for the fairways and greens have always been satisfactory, providing splendid golfing facilities but affording plenty of trouble for the player who doesn't hit 'em straight.

No Changes Needed.

Algonquin and Sunset, two of the finest courses in the district will stand pat. They will be in their usual splendid condition under the watchful eyes of the Harrison boys at Algonquin and Johnny Manion at Sunset.

The 18-hole municipal course in Forest Park is expected to be about as usual but the greens are likely to be closed a great deal in order to keep them in good condition for the National Municipal Tournament which is to be held here this year.

Creve Coeur, the only out-and-out public fee course in the vicinity since North Hills changed the manner of operating its east course, will be about as usual with greens among the finest hereabouts.

Westborough will present a new professional in the person of Clarence Coff, formerly assistant to Benny Richter at Triple A and Richter's companion on his western journey.

PLANS MADE TO SEND U. S. NET STARS ABROAD

By the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, March 9.—The master minds behind the international tennis activities of American players today announced detailed plans for sending them abroad this season in two waves, the ladies first.

Announcing that Miss Helen Wills and Miss Edith Cross, the redoubtable Californians, who rank first and third, respectively, among the women players of the country, will sail for European conquest about the middle of April, the International Play Committee of the United States Lawn Tennis Association officially sanctioned the trip and described its features.

Seek Two Titles.

Miss Wills, the acknowledged queen of the world's courts, and Miss Cross, the San Francisco working girl, who gained prestige by her showing in the last national championship, are to participate in the French and English title tournaments and in one or more women's team matches if they can be arranged.

America's Davis Cup team, consisting of the pick of the country's men players, probably will be sailing for Europe on or about June 5, it was further announced, in the light of dates definitely set by the Davis Cup Committee for the playing of the various American zone ties.

According to the schedule prepared by the chairman, Joseph W. Wear of Philadelphia, and approved at a meeitng here, the first round tie between the United States and Canada will be played at Montreal on May 16, 17 and 18.

Japan will meet the winner of the United States-Canada encounter on May 23, 24 and 25 at a place yet to be selected.

Under the authorization of the French Lawn Tennis Federation representing the nation holding the cup, Cuba and Mexico have been requested to complete their match not later than May 19 and it is understood that this round will be played in Mexio City early in May. Such an arrangement is deemed necessary in order that the winner may be able to come to either the United States or Canada to play the final round scheduled for May 31, June 1 and 2.

Davis Cup Plans.

Assuming that the United States, true to form, wins the American zone championship, the team will be able to sail in time to participate in the English championships, as it did last year, and, after further practice, to proceed to Paris for the interzone final. If victorious the Americans then will meet the French holders in the challenge round set for July 26, 27 and 28.

ST. TERESA'S SOCCER TEAM TO OPPOSE ST. MATTHEWS TODAY

Soccer players representing St. Matthew's and St. Teresa's parishes renew their annual feud today. The match will be played at Fairground Park on Grounds 4, starting at 10:30 a. m. Richard Brannigan, former star center forward of the St. Leos, will referee.

TWO AMERICANS TO PLAY FOR CANADIAN RACQUETS CHAMPIONSHIP

MONTREAL, March 9.—Two stars from the United States, Herbert N. Rawlings of New York and R. A. Powers of Boston, will meet here tomorrow in the final of the Canadian racquets championship. Rawlings scored an easy victory in the semi-final, defeating J. H. Chapman of Montreal, 15—10, 15—8, 15—7. Powers reached the final only after a severe struggle with W. M. Vickers of Toronto, winning by scores of 1—15, 15—17, 15—12, 15—9, 18—17.

NEW BODIES in 24 hours

HAVE you ever watched a magician pick wriggling rabbits out of a high hat?

A wonderful trick, you say. Well, I'm a magician of a different sort—a magician that builds health and strength into your body in 24 hours. And it is no trick. It took me 19 years of tireless planning and experimenting to be able to do it.

People call me "The Muscle-Builder," because I take weak, run-down bodies and transform them into strong, handsome, virile bodies in double-quick time. And I actually do it in 24 hours.

In the Privacy of Your Own Room

By this I do not mean that you must exercise 24 hours continuously. My scientific short-cut to healthy, handsome, broad-shouldered bodies must be taken in short 15-minute doses. Because, if you exercise more than that in my high-pressure, quick-development way, you will tear down more than I can build up. So all I ask of you is 15 minutes of your spare time each day for 90 days (actually only 22½ hours' time) doing simple, easy exercises with the apparatus I send you. You can do them in the privacy of your own room, if you wish, or wherever you may be.

And What Results!

In the first 30 days I guarantee to add one whole inch of real, live muscle to each of your arms, and two whole inches of the same revitalizing strength across your chest. I'll take the kinks out your back, strengthen and broaden your shoulders, give you a grip of steel, build legs and arms that are pillars of strength, and turn you into a fighting, peppy personality that just yells youth, vigor and vitality all over.

I Work Inside as Well as Out

Your heart, your liver, your kidneys, your lungs—all your internal organs will get the surprise of their young lives when I start to work on them. For my methods produce speedy results inside as well as out. And your body will settle down to an orderly, well-mannered existence that means a new kind of happiness for you—a joy of living that only a healthy, virile body can give you. And the headaches, constipation, troubles, pains and worries that are always caused by weakened, flabby bodies somehow miraculously disappear.

You'll See It in Their Eyes!

And what a difference it will make among your friends! Just watch the girls open their eyes, and fight to hold your attention. Your handsome, husky figure will always be the center of admiring glances.

And you'll be a real leader among the men in your crowd. Instinctively they worship strength and the leadership that must go with strength. But let me tell you all about it in my latest book. How you can become the man you've always dreamed of being in a few short weeks. All you have to do is fill out the coupon below, and mail it to me today.

Approved
The Earle Liederman System of Physical Education has been approved as a Correspondence School under the laws of the State of New York.

What I Have Done For Thousands
I Can Do for You

I'll make you strong—I'll put one whole inch of real, live muscle on each arm, and two whole inches across your chest in the first 30 days. I'll take the kinks out of your back and spine and add many happy healthy years to your life . . . I'll build your body into a lithe, athletic, handsome figure, and sports will be easy for you . . . I'll make you the idol of your crowd . . . the center of admiration, sought after by everyone.

It makes no difference whether you are overstout or underweight. I will transform your body and mould you into the true form of perfect manhood. Mr. Smith and Mr. Furches are by no means exceptional cases. They are only fair examples of what I have done for thousands. What I have done for them I am now ready to do for you. In fact, I guarantee it. I await your command to prove it.

Author of "Secrets of Strength," "Muscle Building," "Here's Health," "Science of Wrestling," "Endurance," etc., etc.

Rank with the Best at Your Favorite Sport

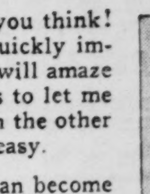
IT'S not as difficult as you think! I've found a way to quickly improve your game that will amaze you. The first step is to let me give you more strength than the other fellow has, and the rest is easy.

Without strength no man can become a champion. And I build strength. In just 90 days I turn puny weaklings into most promising athletes.

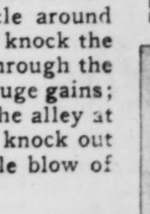
In just 90 days I will build an armorplate of lithe, steely muscle around you that will enable you to knock the cover off a baseball; dive through the toughest football team for huge gains; send a bowling ball down the alley at a mile-a-minute speed, and knock out your opponent with a single blow of your fist.

Over 100,000 men have improved their game under my guidance. They are living testimonials of my ability. What I have done for them, I guarantee to do for you.

Let me show you how you can rank with the best at your favorite sport. It will not cost you a single penny to find out how I do it. Just fill out and mail the coupon below.



Have the punch of an army mule in both those fists. When I get through with your shoulders and back muscles, even the best will fear you.



With the wrists and forearms I give you, 50 yards more on your drives is a simple matter.

Among my pupils are many professional ball-players. You, too, can have the enormous strength in your arms and shoulders so essential to all good hitters and fielders.

Want the speed of a bullet in your serve and drives? Let me work for 30 days on your arms, wrists and shoulders, and you'll gasp at the improvement.

BLUE LARKSPUR, AT 6 TO 1, FAVORED TO WIN DERBY

CLYDE VAN DUSEN AND TWINK EQUAL SECOND CHOICES QUOTED AT 8 TO 1

By Clement Glaub.

Colonel E. R. Bradley's well bred colt Blue Larkspur continues to rule the favorite in Thomas M. Kearney's future book on the Kentucky Derby, to be run at Churchill Downs May 18. Blue Larkspur is held at 6 to 1, 3 to 1 to place and 3 to 2 to show. Loma Stable's imported Twink and H. P. Gardner's Clyde Van Dusen are equal second choices at 8 to 1. Roguish Eye, second to High Strung in the Belmont Futurity, is quoted at 10 to 1. He is owned by Alderman John J. Coughlin of Chicago. Three of the four favorites are owned by Western horseman.

Sun Shadow, brother to the $75,000 colt Sun Edwin, and Neddie, Current and Dr. Freeland are each quoted at 20 to 1. Current is a filly which won numerous purses in Kentucky and Illinois as a 2-year-old. Dr. Freeland was one of the East's leading juveniles.

Windy City, Beacon Hill, Vermajo, Xylophone and Naishapur can be had for 30 to 1 while Voltear, which closed fast in the Tijuana Derby, is quoted at 40 to 1.

Some Long Shots.

Five racers are held at 1000 to 1 while eight can be had at 500 to 1. Alto, Bonoby, Host, Lynn Barkley and Yorktown are 1000 to 1 shots.

Ervast, Baron Long's sensational 3-year-old, recently withdrawn from the Coffroth Handicap, is marked a doubtful starter in Kearney's book. High Strung is also classed as doubtful.

With High Strung out, the East would not have a strong representation in the Derby. High Strung led the juvenile money winners last year and was counted on as Blue Larkspur's chief rival for the 3-year-old championship. Dr. Freeland and Twink are now the East's leading candidates.

Blue Larkspur and Roguish Eye wintered well in Kentucky and will soon be put in training for the Derby. Roguish Eye is a big colt and can stand intensive work. The Bradley colt was retired shortly after the running of the Belmont Futurity and spent the latter part of the 1928 season at Bradley's farm near Lexington. He has been galloping in the barn there for the past two weeks and is due for light workouts over the private track on the Bradley estate.

Clyde Van Dusen, son of Man O' War, is not as sturdy as either Blue Larkspur or Roguish Eye, but will take his training with the other Derby candidates as soon as the weather becomes a bit warmer.

Emil Herz, Kentucky future book operator also quotes Blue Larkspur at 6 to 1. Clyde Van Dusen, Roguish Eye and Twink are 10 to 1 in his book while Karl Eitel, which is 40 to 1 in Kearney's book, is only 20 to 1 on the Herz list. Yorktown is quoted at 5000 to 1 by Herz.

The odds against Genie and Golden Prince cut to 4 to 1 in Kearney's book on the Coffroth Handicap, scheduled for next Sunday at Tijuana. Last week they were equal favorites at 5 to 1. Genie has not shown much in his races to Tijuana this winter, winning one race in three starts. Golden Prince holds a sprint record at the border track.

Alexander Pantages, Hydromel, Naishapur, Voltear and Valkyr are quoted at 10 to 1 with Soother, Dr. Wilson, Vermajo and Healy held at 15 to 1 each. Xylophone and Longridge are 20 to 1 shots. All others are quoted at from 30 to 1000 to 1.

All bets in future books are on the play or pay plan.

Bethlehem Is Beaten in Cup Game by Giants

PHILADELPHIA, March 9.

THE New York Giants soccer team defeated Bethlehem Steel, 6 to 3, today in a National Challenge Cup semifinal replay in the Eastern division. The last game ended in a tie and today's game was played on neutral grounds.

McAuliffe Will Oppose Knost in Bout Here Friday

Jack McAuliffe, the Detroit heavyweight who made two indifferent showings in St. Louis against Pierre Charles, the Belgian heavy, and the ancient Battling Levinsky, is being depended upon as chief drawing card for the Hatzfeld American Legion Post's professional boxing card at the Armory, Friday night. McAuliffe will meet Dave Knost, local heavyweight, in the main event of 10 rounds.

McAuliffe gave considerable promise several years ago, but just as he appeared on the verge of going somewhere he got mixed up in legal red tape with his managers and retired from the game for more than a year. Since returning he has failed to show any quality that would stamp him above the mine run of the heavyweight crop. His bouts here were marked with much holding and glove grabbing.

However, his name still may carry a certain amount of prestige, and Knost, who has knocked out about a half-dozen opponents since turning pro, will try to add another knockout to his record.

The eight-round semifinal, between Joe Ghnouly and the Denver Kid of Kansas City, probably will furnish much of the action of the card. Both are willing mixers.

Three six-round bouts are on the card. Eddie Goldberg will meet Tut Seymour, Al Stillman goes against Mike Clayton, and Pete White meets Willie Davis.

MRS. KELLY GETS 713 TOTAL FOR NEW PIN RECORD

Mrs. M. Kelly Jr., president of the St. Louis Women's Ten-Pin Bowling Association, and captain of the leading Associated Grocers five in the Major City Women's League, rolled what is probably the highest three-game total ever rolled by a woman in the matches on the Washington Alleys last week when she hung up games of 189, 266 and 258 for a total of 713. Mrs. Kelly's record breaking score was rolled with but one open frame. She missed the No. 10 pin miss in the fourth frame of the first game. Mrs. Kelly's total should stand as a record for a long time to come.

The Associated Grocers, aided by their captain's record count, rolled games of 948, 948, and 896 for a total of 2792 pins, a new record for the league. Miss Schlenk scored 554, Mrs. Lohmueller 547, Mrs. Schulte 500 and Mrs. Meyer 478. The five won three games from the Dorr & Zellers.

Mrs. Al Werder and Miss Ann Uhlen featured for the losers with 576 and 547, respectively.

In the other matches, the Mid-City Recreation won three from the Martin & Breitts. The Hartmanns took three from the Washington five, and the Stein Juniors won the odd from the Greelys.

Other select shooters were Mrs. Coibon 554, Miss Keating 552, Mrs. Berghaus 537, Mrs. Carroll 525, Mrs. Smith 522, Miss Collins 512, Mrs. Brummell 508, Mrs. Bostleman 507, Mrs. Kalafatich 506, Mrs. Pingel 504, and Mrs. Howard 500.

Doubles Matches Tonight.

The Greater St. Louis Two-Man League, and a choose your partner mixed doubles sweepstakes, are the features on tonight's program at the Washington alleys. The Two-Man League will roll a double-header at 7 and 8 p. m., while there will be two squads in the mixed doubles, at 9 and 10 p. m.

Skinner-McElheney vs. Wilson-Stein Jr.
Summers-Martin vs. Stanley-Hager.
Foss-Nelson vs. Ludwig-Gromacki.

Second Match.

Wilson-Stein Jr. vs. Jabby-Pop Stein.
Roth-Sottrell vs. Skinner-McElheney.

The winner of the event, besides taking his share of the prize fund, will receive a gold medal. The entry fee is $2 a man, with bowling extra. The tournament will be run best three out of five games, excepting the final match, which will be four out of seven. Any bowler desiring to enter can call Otto Stein Jr. at the Washington alleys, GArfield 9166.

MISS VAN WIE WINS GOLF FINAL FROM MISS HICKS

By the Associated Press.

ST. AUGUSTINE, Fla., March 9.—Miss Virginia Van Wie today won the Florida East Coast women's golf championship, defeating Miss Helen Hicks of Long Island, 3 and 2.

Miss Hicks lacked consistently with her irons while the Chicago girl seemed to have regained all her old power on the second shots. Junior League Will Give Dance for Charity April 19.

Fashion Show to Be Part of Annual Affair at Hotel Jefferson; Plans for Little Season.

MID-LENT finds society preparing to emerge from comparative quietude to plan the activities of the Little Season which will continue until the late spring exodus for summer resorts. In the making are arrangements for the Junior League Easter ball, an interesting prelude to spring, which is set for Friday evening, April 19, at Hotel Jefferson.

Lenten days, usually quiet socially, have been filled with hours of strenuous effort for those in active charge of the ball, especially a class of 30 young women who have been rehearsing at frequent intervals since January, each with the hope of being chosen for the Junior League Chorus of Sixteen, the ballet feature of the evening.

Invitations to the party, which, at variance with last year's plan, will be a dinner dance instead of a late supper dance, are to be sent out soon, and the remuneration will cover the entire evening's entertainment. The proceeds will accrue to the various charities supported by the League.

Last year the initial Easter ball was given with such success that they have become a permanent part of the Junior League program, and they serve as a substitute for the Junior League Follies of former years.

The decorative motif of this year's decorations is crystal, and promise is given of much elaboration, so that the affair will be known as the League's Crystal Ball.

Dinner will be served in the gold ball room at 8 o'clock, and the entertainment at 9:30 will include a fashion parade of Junior League members wearing gowns and accessories from fashionable West End shops, incorporated into a skit to be shown from the stage at the North end of the ballroom. Music for the parade and dancing numbers by the chorus of sixteen, wil be furnished by one of two orchestras. A second will play in the crystal room of the hotel where there will be general dancing by the guests.

Mrs. Clarence Hopkins King is chairman of the entire ball; Mrs. Garneau Weld is chairman of the entertainment committee; Mrs. O. P. J. Falk is in charge of tickets and invitations and is treasurer of the ball; Mrs. Kenneth Bitting is chairman of the reservations committee; Miss Helen Heissler of publicity; Mrs. Ralph Foster Bixby, assisted by Mrs. Donaldson Lambert and Mrs. Asa Brookings Wallace, is in charge of the fashion show; and Mrs. Samuel Fitzhugh Gordon and Mrs. Mahlon Brookings Wallace Jr., are planning special features for the evening. Miss Ruth Cornet and Miss Beatrice Kroeger are designing the elaborate costumes and decorations, and Mrs. David Randolph Calhoun is assembling the chorus. The young women chosen will be trained by Robert Alton of St. Louis.

Mildred Petring Weds H. P. Duncker

Members of the Families of the Pair and a Few Friends Witness Ceremony at 6 Washington Terrace.

AN interesting informal wedding of the mid-lenten season was solemnized at 3 o'clock yesterday afternoon when Miss Mildred Petring, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Walter H. Petring of 6 Washington terrace, became the bride of Henry Philip Duncker, son of Mr. and Mrs. Charles H. Duncker of 12 Brentmoor. The marriage service took place at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Petring and was read by the Rev. Dr. Charles Wing of the Church of the Messiah, in the presence of the immediate families and a few close friends. No announcement had been made of the engagement, and the wedding will be a surprise to society.

The home was decorated in bouquets and baskets of spring blossoms against a background of palms, asparagus fern and smilax. The bride and bridegroom were unattended, and stood before the mantel in the living room which was banked with briarcliffe roses, pink snapdragon and clusters of white lilacs.

Following the service a small reception was held. The bridal table was decorated in an attractive arrangement of white roses, lilies of the valley and freesia and was lighted by white tapers in silver holders adorned with bows of white tulle.

The bride was becomingly gowned in flesh tinted chiffon. The sleeveless bodice was trimmed in a deep bertha of cream lace terminating in a cape and the circular skirt of uneven hemline fell to the floor at the back. She carried orchids and lilies of the valley.

Mrs. Duncker attended Mary Institute and Miss Bennett's School, Milbrook, N. Y., and was graduated from Washington University. She did not make a formal debut but served as maid of honor at the Veiled Prophet ball several seasons ago. Mr. Duncker was graduated from Washington University.

Mr. Duncker and his bride have gone to Florida and Havana for the honeymoon.

New Yorkers Back In Sidesaddles

NEW YORK, March 9.

By the Associated Press.

MOST of the fashionables who didn't go South are deserting the dull sidewalks of New York for the brighter highways of the country.

Mr. and Mrs. Julian Ripley, whose hobby is blooded cattle, and Mr. and Mrs. Jeremiah Milbank, whose chief outdoor interest lies in speedboats, were among the first to turn to the country. An impressive procession has followed their example. Spirals of blue smoke curl up from chimneys of Long Island country houses, smart folk desert tea tables to watch the spring planting, and thoroughbreds canter up and down the bridle paths.

With the renewed interest in horsemanship, an innovation has taken place. The side saddle—favorite of the gay nineties—has returned to vogue. Milady may still ride astride if she insists but if she wishes to be really smart she dons a derby and a skirted habit of dark blue or black cravenette and hooks her knee over the horn of a side saddle. Mrs. William Goadby Loew is among the members of society who have favored the return of this custom. Mrs. Loew even adds the formality of a nose-veil to her habit.

Many of the smart folk now in the country are using their speed boats to commute back and forth to town, and the East River resounds with the putt-putt of their motors as they speed up and down. Otto Kahn usually travels in this fashion, as does Jeremiah Milbank and a number of others.

All of this outdoor life has increased the vogue for sun-tanned skins. The sunburn rage has created more of a furore than any vogue since the first bobbed hair; white skins are passe; and fashionable women regard a sunburn as a necessity which must be acquired artificially if it doesn't come naturally. Expensive oils are used, hours are spent sitting under strong lights, and the result is a deep tropical tan. Sun-tan powder and corresponding cosmetics complete an effect which blends harmoniously with sports clothes.

Jewelry, too, is designed to harmonize with a brown skin. Chokers of sunburnt pearls and bronze rondells are among the most popular ornaments of the mode.

Even in town the interest in affairs of the out-of-doors is evident. The younger crowd is turning with interest to plans for the international flower show, which will be held next week in Grand Central Palace. A cottage garden lined with rose trellises and tulip beds and filled with gayly decorated tables and umbrellas, will provide the setting where debutantes and young matrons serve tea to the visitors.

Others will have charge of booths where sandwiches, ice cream and lavender bags will be sold in aid of the New York League of Girls' Clubs. Miss Virginia Potter, Mrs. Courtlandt Barnes and Mrs. William H. Hamilton are among those serving on the Tea Garden Committee.

Other members of New York Society lent their support to the benefit performance of "Faust," given at the Metropolitan Opera House Friday afternoon for the benefit of the Grenfell Colony in Labrador, established by Sir William Grenfell. An interesting feature of the benefit was an exhibit of ivory carvings, hooked rugs and native woven clothing, executed by men and women of Labrador.

The proceeds of the affair are to be used in the construction of an orphanage in the colony to replace the one destroyed last year by fire. Mrs. August Belmont and Mrs. Charles Dana Gibson were among patronesses of the benefit.

The invitation concert of the People's Chorus of New York attracted many listeners to Town Hall last Saturday evening. Chorales by Bach and Handel were complemented by a program from Beethoven, Chopin and Liszt given by Miss Stell Andersen, pianist. Two songs for women's voices only and two for men's voices only were features of the entertainment.

Dr. John Erskine, president of the Juilliard Foundation Music School, who was the guest of honor, spoke during the evening on "Music and Its Influence." Dr. Erskine and Mrs. Erskine were entertained at dinner before the concert by Mr. and Mrs. Alter Ewing Hope and later were guests in their box.

Society lent its art treasures in the interest of charity this week and then trooped into the Knoedler galleries to see them on display. The exhibit, which was held to obtain funds for the Carroll Club's vacation resort in Pawling, N. Y., included works by many old Italian masters.

Giovanni Bellini's "Madonna and Child," "Lorenzo di Credi's "Portrait of a Florentine Lady," and Andrea Mantegna's "Adoration of the Shepherds" were among the paintings hung in the galleries.

Washington Social Season Extended

By the Associated Press.
WASHINGTON, March 9.

SOCIALLY speaking the new administration is finding its bearings without the slightest difficulty as both the President and Mrs. Hoover are being well versed in the intricacies of official etiquette. The diplomatic corps will meet the new President and his wife at a White House reception at 4 o'clock Monday afternoon. Officials of the State Department and the full complement of White House aids will be present. The Marine Band will add a lively note. The diplomats will be in full court dress.

For the first time since becoming the First Lady of the Land, Mrs. Hoover occupied the White House box in a local theater, hearing the Boston Symphony orchestra program. She wore a gown of black velvet, very simple in design, a black velvet hat, brimless and close fitting, and long white gloves. The coat was the same she wore at the inaugural ceremonies, of black broadtail, conservative in length, a broad collar of sable and a deep band of the fur reached the bottom of the coat and the cuffs of sable were deep.

With Mrs. Hoover was her uncle, Mr. W. D. Henry of Wahpeton, N. D.; her sister, Mrs. Jean Henry Large, Mrs. May Leavitt, the sister of the President, and Mrs. Mark Requa of California.

The brick residence of the President and Mrs. Hoover on S street will be occupied the first of next month by Senator Frederick C. Walcott of Connecticut and Mrs. Walcott. Their two sons, William Welch Walcott, and Alexander Guthrie Walcott, are students at Yale.

The extra session of Congress will cause a continuation of social events up to its very close. Wealthy society folk who come here from all sections of the country have no idea of deserting the capital while there are important officials and diplomats to entertain.

Mrs. Hoover's retention of Miss Mary Randolph as head of the social secretary staff of the White House is generally approved. Miss Randolph is the daughter of the late Gen. Randolph, and since her early girlhood has known Washington society. Her elder sister, Miss Anne Randolph, is social secretary to Secretary of the Treasury Mellon.

Mrs. Coolidge selected Miss Mary Randolph as her secretary about the second year of her residence here, as the wife of the Vice President, and when her husband became President took her to the White House to occupy a secondary place under Miss Laura Harlan, who had been secretary to Mrs. Harding. Later she succeeded to the first place. Serving with Miss Randolph as secretary are Miss Ruth Fessler, who not only served Mrs. Hoover, but Mr. Hoover as well, and Miss Mildred Hall, who has been with Mrs. Hoover for a lesser time.

While many congressional families are rushing to their respective homes for a few weeks, others, and especially those with children in Washington schools, are remaining and assisting in the social excitement that follows in the wake of a new administration. The large house party entertained by Vice President Curtis and his sister, Mrs. Gann, over March 4, is almost entirely disbanded, Mrs. Charles P. George, wife of Maj. George, alone remaining until Monday. The Vice President's son and daughter-in-law, Mr. and Mrs. Harry King Curtis, and Mr. and Mrs. Webster Knight II, returned to their home early in the week, and Mrs. Jerome Colvin, the Vice President's sister, returned to Topeka, Kan., in midweek. During the recess of Congress the Vice President and his sister are accepting many invitations, and it is expected that Mrs. Gann and all of the new Cabinet women now in town will receive informally Wednesday, the regular Cabinet day at home.

Mrs. H. L. Stimson, wife of the new Secretary of State, knows the ways of Washington Cabinet life. So does Mrs. William Dewitt Mitchell, whose husband is the new Attorney-General. As the wife of the Solicitor-General, Mrs. Mitchell figured constantly in society. The new Secretary of War and Mrs. Good have been living in Washington most of the time since 1921. Because Good was in the lower house of Congress before he retired to enter the practice of law in Chicago, Mrs. Good is a member of the Congressional Club and has kept up all of her Congressional social connections. Both the Secretary and Mrs. Good have taken particular interest in the Iowa State Society here, their former home being at Cedar Rapids. Mrs. Brown, wife of the new Postmaster General spent three years in Washington while her husband was Assistant Secretary of Commerce, and Mrs. Ray L. Wilbur, wife of the Secretary of Interior has so frequently been a guest here during the incumbency of office of her brother-in-law as Secretary of the Navy, that no part of Capital life is strange to her.

Nothing has pleased Washington society more than that James J. Davis remains in the Cabinet. His handsome blonde wife is a particular favorite. She was never daunted at entertaining three or four hundred guests at a time during inaugural week.

On each occasion when these large delegations arrived, they found her waiting with the Secretary of Labor just within the front door to greet them, and ranged along in the great entrance hall of their home of walking wonderingly through the drawing rooms were the four little girls, Jane, Jean, June and Jewel, dressed exactly alike in yellow crepe frocks. The son of the house and the eldest of the five children, took especial interest in assisting in entertaining the guests.

Don't Show Your Age!

Don't let wrinkles tell the world you're getting older. Remove them instantly—look years younger! Simple, safe, scientific formula erases every one. Get two ounces of eptol at druggist, mix at home with water and teaspoon of glycerine. Spread lightly over face, neck and around eyes. The starved tissues absorb it rapidly as you work into pores until gone. Then see the instant transformation! — wrinkles, frowns, age lines, crow's-feet—gone! Leaves the skin smooth, firm, lovely as a flower. You can depend on sure results with genuine eptol—be sure you get it.

If blackheads trouble—remove them this easy way. Never squeeze — large pores will result. Safest way to dissolve them all at one time. Ask your druggist for two ounces powdered calonite, sprinkle on hot, wet towel, apply and presto!—they're gone! You've never seen anything like it. Results positively marvelous—even in worst cases.

MAJ. LAMBERT PAYS CALL ON SALISBURY

Also Writes Note Saying "Airport Proposition Is Sufficiently Threshed Out."

Maj. Albert Bond Lambert, who recently resigned as head of the Technical Committee of the Municipal Airport Commission because of the city's failure to hire experts to draw plans, called on Director of Public Welfare Salisbury yesterday for a friendly conversation about airport plans.

Shortly before he appeared at Salisbury's office a letter from him was received. "I am calling on you personally this morning," he wrote, "to say that as far as I am concerned the controversial points concerning the airport are closed.

"I also want to extend my best wishes and will call on Mayor Miller to say that I think the airport proposition has been sufficiently threshed out and hope to keep it out of the forthcoming campaign. In this respect, you have my assurances of support."

Following Lambert's resignation from the Technical Committee, the commission, with the indorsement of Mayor Miller, recommended the employment of two firms of experts. During the primary campaign, Lambert called on all mayoralty candidates to announce a policy with regard to the airport.

SCHOOL BOARD CANDIDATES TO ADDRESS VOTERS' LEAGUE

Four Indorsed by Woman's Organization to Speak Tuesday at Mass Meeting.

A mass meeting in Vandervoort's auditorium at 3 p. m. Tuesday, called by the League of Women Voters, will be addressed by the four candidates indorsed by the league for the four places on the Board of Education to be filled in the April election.

The candidates and topics of their speeches are: Edgar R. Rombauer, "A Consistent Program of School Development"; Howard G. Cook, "Harmonious Direction of School Affairs"; Boaz B. Watkins, "Intelligent Co-operation Between Departments"; Mrs. Ernest R. Kroeger, "Equal School Opportunity for Every Child."

Two members of the Citizens' Selection Committee, which invited recommendations for candidates for the Board of Education several months ago, will speak. They are Luther Ely Smith, attorney, and Jacob M. Lashly, president of the St. Louis Bar Association. Smith will describe the committee's work and Lashly will talk on "Women's Interest in the School Board a Healthy Sign."

The four candidates have been indorsed by the Wednesday Club, the College Club, the Board of Religious Organizations, the Council of Jewish Women and the St. Louis Dental Society, as well as the league.

Recipe to Darken Gray Hair

You Can Make a Better Gray Hair Remedy Than You Can Buy

Gray, streaked or faded hair is not only unbecoming, but unnecessary.

Anyone can prepare a simple mixture at home that will darken gray hair, and make it soft and glossy. To a half-pint of water add 1 ounce of bay rum, a small box of Barbo Compound and ¼ oz. of glycerine.

These ingredients can be bought at any drug store at very little cost, or the druggist will put it up for you. Apply to the hair twice a week until the desired shade is obtained. This will make a gray-haired person look twenty years younger. It is easy to use, does not color the scalp, is not sticky or greasy and does not rub off

"INSPIRATION flies away when shoes hurt."

An interview with HELEN DRYDEN, one of America's foremost fashion artists

"ALTHOUGH most people may not think so, painting is really hard work. I mean not only work of the mind, but actually physical work. Often I stand before my easel for hours and hours without a rest, without a pause.

"That is why comfortable shoes are indispensable to me. Inspiration flies away quick enough when shoes hurt!

"I wear Cantilevers. They are marvelously comfortable, caressing, pleasing to one's eye and pleasing to one's style sense. Cantilever shoes have become almost as much a part of my tools as my brushes and my palette."

Cantilever Shoes are so comfortable because they are perfectly proportioned to fit the foot. With every step you take they yield gracefully and support the foot naturally.

The new styles are particularly attractive—charmingly fashioned and designed for the gentlewoman's taste. Be sure to see these styles on your next shopping tour.

Among the prominent women who are enthusiastic wearers of Cantilever Shoes are—
Helen Dryden, noted fashion artist
Marguerite D'Alvarez, famous concert singer
Helen Ufford, Associate Editor, Delineator

AUTOS AVIATION AUTOS

PART FIVE. ST. LOUIS, SUNDAY MORNING, MARCH 10, 1929. PAGES 1—14.

Aero Output In 1928 Was 140 Pct. More Than in 1927

Total Value of 5000 Airplanes and 3500 Engines Was $75,000,000—Missouri Ranked Fourth in Production.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

NEW YORK, March 9.—Commercial aircraft production in 1928 was 140 per cent greater than in 1927, according to Aircraft Year Book figures released today by the Aeronautical Chamber of Commerce which shows that approximately 5000 airplanes and 3500 aircraft motors with a valuation in excess of $75,000,000 were built in the United States during the last year. Three thousand seven hundred and eighty-one were commercial ships while 1219 were military planes. Two thousand eighty-seven motors built were commercial while 1413 were military.

"The retail market value of commercial planes and motors built in 1928," the statement says, "was in excess of $27,000,000; to which should be added $8,000,000 to $10,000,000 for the manufacture of spares and for experimental work. Military production and experimentation, it is estimated, accounts for $35,000,000 more, bringing the total for the industry for 1928 to more than $75,000,000.

"Analysis of the commercial aircraft figures for 1928 reveals some interesting trends," the Chamber statement says. "Biplanes outnumbered monoplanes two to one, there being 2422 of the former produced and 1079 of the latter. Of the biplanes, the great majority were of the small open cockpit variety and of the monoplanes closed cabin jobs predominated. Twelve times as many multi-en-

Motorists Advised to Shun Bennett Spring State Park

Road Impassable, Inspection Tour Reveals—Garages at Lebanon on U. S. 66 Filled with Cars Broken Down on Trip.

By ROBERT H. HALL,
Automobile Editor.

A disgruntled group of motorists gathered at Lebanon, Mo., 176 miles southwest of St. Louis on U. S. 66, last Saturday afternoon nursing grievances against the State Highway Department, the State Game and Fish Department and anybody else who had suggested the trip to Bennett Spring State Park for the opening of the trout fishing season, Friday, March 1.

A number of the fishermen bemoaned the fact that their cars were laid up in local garages for repairs. On the 13-mile mud stretch between Lebanon and the State park it is possible to break anything from a rear axle to puncturing the oil pan. Others, who had stored their cars in garages at Lebanon and hired vehicles in which to make the trip, were soured because the wily trout wouldn't bite. There was at least 20 fishermen at the park for every trout in the spring branch, or so it seemed, and, excepting a few anglers with extraordinary luck, creels were brought back empty.

The writer's excursion cost a pretty penny. The park road, as observed in these columns last Sunday, was bottomless, with ruts a foot deep in places. Aside from being bogged down three times, sliding into a ditch once, puncturing the oil pan of the car, and sustaining two punctured tires, very little luck was had with the trout. Do not get the idea that the writer's bad luck was due to using an old car. As a matter of fact, the car used was a big, powerful automobile less than a month old.

Undoubtedly there are trout at Bennett Spring. Lots of them. But last Saturday was an off day and they weren't biting. The writer had little success, the few he caught being taken on wet flies, and a small gold spinner. Dry flies wouldn't do the work. Neither would liver, a favorite trout delicacy. A few natives had fair luck using worms and doughballs. But fishing is like that. Good one day, bad the next.

The roads, however, are bad all the time, and unless fishing is no longer a hobby but has become a passion, anglers are frankly advised to shun the park until the roads are travelable.

Albertson to Enter Memorial Day Race

Bill Albertson, better known on the Eastern dirt tracks as "Wild Bill," has filed an entry in the Indianapolis 500-mile classic May 30. It will be his first start in the "American Grand Prize" and while he is not unfamiliar with speedways, it will be his first shot at real fame and glory. Bill comes from Penn Yan, a small town in upstate New York.

Ford Plans Development Of Factories In England

Plant at Manchester Now Employing 3700 Men—To Hire 5000 to Operate New Factory at Cork, Ireland.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

LONDON, March 9.—The success achieved by Henry Ford at his motorcar and commercial motor vehicle works in Old Trafford, Manchester, has astonished the British industry. The business only commenced in October, 1919, when the car was introduced to the British public by a small branch of the Ford Motor Co., but since then half a million or more cars, lorries and vans have been manufactured in Manchester and sold.

Today 3700 employes are engaged at Trafford Park Works, and by their united efforts 160 to 169 vehicles of all descriptions are daily manufactured and distributed to the four quarters of Great Britain. It is hoped that before the motor season proper arrives the output of new models will exceed 200 per day. At any rate, arrangements have been made for building 40,000 cars and commercial vehicles before the year.

In addition more than a hundred engines a day are being built, tested and consigned to the continent for disposal by the various European branches of Fords.

Beginning this year a new selling policy has been adopted that is certain to have a marked effect upon the market, and to increase interest in motor vehicles and accessories. Unlike the past, when it was incumbent upon automobile agents to deal exclusively in Ford products, the door has been opened to the general trader. He has seized the opportunity in an astounding manner and daily hundreds of dealers from all parts are seeking to be registered as accredited representatives.

These agents have been divided

UNDERWOOD & UNDERWOOD

JUST 28 years ago this month, this vehicle, the first to be built by Packard, created a sensation when driven down the streets of Detroit. It was much more modern than anything automotive ever built. It even had pneumatic tires! This week it is again the subject of much comment, but as a curiosity on display in the Los Angeles pageant of transportation.

Federal Aid Road Melon of $75,000,000 of Be Cut in 1929

If All Bills Before Congress Had Been Passed, U. S. Would Spend Two Billions in Next Three Years.

WASHINGTON, March 9.—If all the bills submitted to the House and Senate during the present short term had been passed by Congress, the Federal Government would have to pay more than $2,000,000,000 for highway construction and related improvements the next three years.

This sum is exclusive of the amount that has already been set aside as an annual appropriation for the construction and maintenance of Federal aid highways. This is almost $75,000,000.

To date the roads bills in the House number 54; in the Senate 28.

The Brown-Watson bill would take the greatest slice out of this $2,000,000,000 total by the creation of a special highway fund of $407,000,000 from the proceeds to be gained from the sale of leftover highway war material to France.

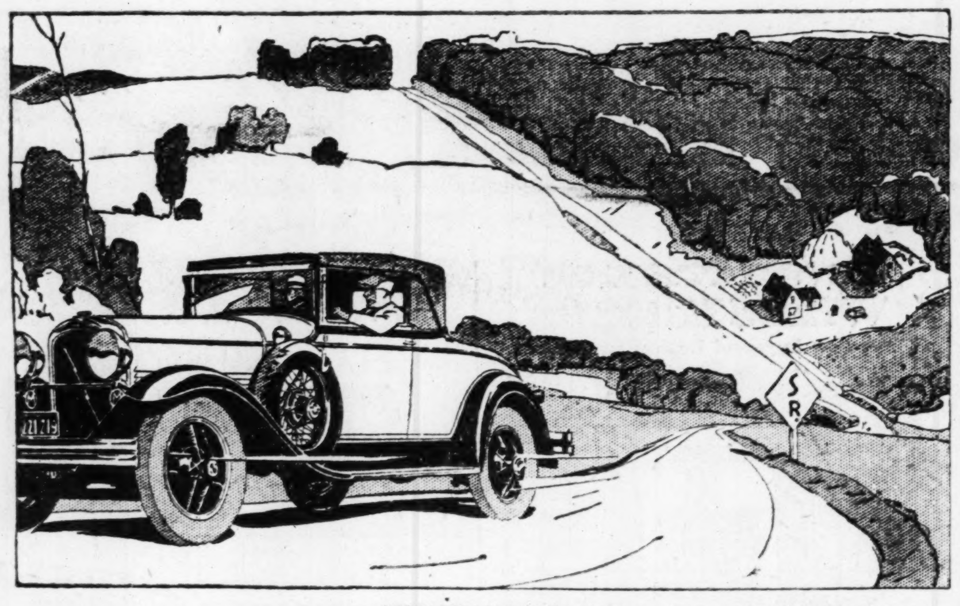
G. M. Williams, President Marmon Motor Car Company, who predicts for 1929 a new high peak of Straight-Eight popularity among all classes of buyers.



MARMON "68" Collapsible Coupe. Warm and snug in winter; open and sunny in summer. Powered by a Marmon-built straight-eight motor

Why your next car should be a STRAIGHT-EIGHT

1929 will witness thousands of owners changing over to the Straight-Eight, many of them to Marmons, because of the two great cars which are now offered at moderate prices

MOST everyone has seen or felt the second change coming. Your first car was probably a four. Your next two or three were likely sixes. And you, like thousands of others, are thinking that the next will be a straight-eight. The straight-eight now is more than a tendency or a trend. It's a reality. It's definite. It's real in the improvement which it offers. The straight-eight, as built by Marmon, takes the dependability of the four, the power of the six, and to these adds smoothness and effortless operation. It's the third really great development of the automobile.

Whether or not your next car is a straight-eight depends solely on one point; that is whether or not you drive a straight-eight before buying. If we can get you to try either the Marmon "68" or "78" for just one half an hour, the differences will be so marked, the improvements so definite, that your decision from the performance standpoint will be almost self-evident. Then we will ask you to consider another important advantage: that the straight-eight you buy today is not likely to be obsoleted this year or for several years to come. Straight-eight popularity is now so fully registered with the public that it is looked upon as the preferred type of car.

When all of these facts are considered, when once you have seen and driven the car, we stop selling. That is left to you. We have a Marmon "68" or "78" always ready to place at your disposal.

Marmon now builds: the "78," $1965; the "68," $1465. Prices at the factory. Deluxe equipment extra.

ESSEX DRIVEN 1061 MILES IN 25 HOURS

In Another Run Car Is Sent 568 Miles in 560 Minutes.

A brilliant endurance performance was completed the past week with a stock Essex coach, when Frank Herrick, an officer of the Jackson (Mich.) Hudson-Essex dealership of Herrick & Devlin, drove the 1061.8 miles from Jackson to St. Louis and return in 25 hours elapsed driving time.

Herrick, accompanied by Devlin as a passenger, left Jackson Sunday evening at 7:30 o'clock, was checked in here by officials of the Hudson-Frampton Motor Car Co. at 5 a. m. Monday, and arrived at Jackson the same evening at 8:30 o'clock.

Despite the fact that on the trip down heavy fog the 150 miles between Fort Wayne, Ind., and St. Louis necessitated driving at 20 and 25 m. p. h., an average of 55.4 m. p. h. was maintained for the trip, Herrick telegraphed S. E. Hanes, general manager of the Hudson-Frampton Motor Car Co., upon his return to Jackson. Herrick also reported that an average of 17.8 miles per gallon of gasoline was recorded. Only one quart of water was added and two quarts of oil consumed, he reported.

Coincident with this run, another interesting run was made by T. W. Clay, president of the Clay Motor Co. of Independence, Mo., Essex-Hudson dealer, who Tuesday, accompanied by a newspaper man, drove a standard Essex coach the 568 miles from Independence to St. Louis and return in 560 minutes, an average of almost 60 m. p. h. To do this, Clay reported, it was necessary to drive 70 m. p. h. most of the time.

Chevrolet Output Schedules Undergo Upward Revision

Production of 1,350,000 Instead of 1,250,000 Units Planned in 1929.

DETROIT, Mich., March 9.—That there will be an upward revision of Chevrolet 1929 production schedule, calling for an output of 1,350,000 units instead of the 1,250,000 quota originally established, was indicated today by R. H. Grant, the company's vice president in charge of sales, who has just returned here after six weeks spent conducting dealer meetings in the northern and western sections of the country.

This alteration in production plans, Grant explained, was considered only after very thorough surveys of business conditions undertaken by him and other Chevrolet officials. In the course of this year's dealer meetings, officials divided into three groups and visited 37 metropolitan centers. Exhaustive studies of sectional conditions were made possible by the co-operation of thousands of dealers, bankers and business men.

"At the time the new 6-cylinder car was announced, we predicted a volume of 1,250,000 units for 1929," Grant said. "As a result of my visit to 13 widely scattered sections and similar visits to other sections by my associates I feel that we are warranted in raising that figure to 1,350,000. Beyond that mark we cannot go with our present facilities but these can be quickly increased if the demand justifies.

"While we feel that there will be a ready market for this huge volume of cars and trucks they will be produced only if they can be absorbed in a natural way. We do not want in any way to crowd dealers or overload them. The dealers, however, seem to feel that this great volume will not be difficult to handle."

Grant seemed highly enthusiastic in his forecast for continued prosperity. Everywhere he traveled, he said, indications pointed to a year of unusual promise.

WORK on the new Trans-Continental Air Transport and Curtiss Flying Service Airport, near East St. Louis, was started last week under the direction of "Pres" Sultan and Phil Love, air consultants for Trans-Continental Air Transport.

The airport, comprising 500 acres, is owned by the St. Louis Air Terminals Corporation, headed by Mark Steinberg, St. Louis broker. The field has been leased to the two operating companies and the cost of improvements will be prorated between the operating concerns and the holding company. Plans for an administration building, hangars, runways and roads, costing a total of $500,000, are being prepared by Love-Sultan, Inc. The airport will be opened in about three months. It will be a step on the Trans-Continental Air Transport Co.'s coast-to-coast route, and will be used by Curtiss Flying Service for aviation school and aerial taxi purposes. An East Side location was selected by Col. Lindbergh and other experts employed by Trans-Continental Air Transport instead of Lambert-St. Louis Field because of the proximity of the East Side to downtown St. Louis by way of Illinois Highway No. 3 and the Municipal Bridge.

City Hires Airport Experts.

The Airport Commission did not have to look beyond its own membership to find qualified experts to advise city engineers in the construction of the $2,000,000 municipal airport.

The Commission voted to employ the firms of Love-Sultan, Inc., and B. Russell Shaw & Co. Phil Love, former flying partner of Col. Lindbergh and graduate of the army flying school at Kelly Field, has, next to Lindbergh, been in and out of more airports than any other pilot in the country and is well qualified to decide important questions from a pilot's viewpoint.

Love's partner, T. Preston Sultan, is an architect and was a Captain in the Army Air Service in France. He assisted in designing the American air headquarters at Issoupun and shot down several German planes in 260 hours' flying over the lines. Love-Sultan, Inc., have offices in University City and are air consultants for Transcontinental Air Transport, Inc., with which Col. Lindbergh is connected.

B. Russell Shaw is an architect specializing in airport construction. He has interested himself in the local airport development for several years and has designed flying fields for other cities.

Robin Factory Anniversary.

Last Tuesday, exactly a year after ground for the Curtiss-Robertson plant was broken, the two hundredth Curtiss-Robin was turned out by the plant. The first Robin was tested last August by Dan Robertson, now in Mexico. The efficiency with which the plant has functioned is due largely to the organizing ability of Ralph Damon, factory manager, formerly with the Curtiss Co. of Long Island. The output of the plant for the next four years has been contracted for by Curtiss Flying Service and each of the 200 Robins so far produced is in the hands of a purchaser.

Cardinal to Be Shown at Detroit.

The second Cardinal, two-place monoplane, is under construction at the plant of the St. Louis Car Co. and will be exhibited at the Detroit Aero Show next month. The Cardinal has met with the approval of pilots who tested it, and plans for establishing distributors for the ship are being made.

Lighting System Nearly Ready.

The temporary lighting system at Lambert-St. Louis Field will be completed this week with the erection of a lighted wind cone on one of the National Guard hangars. The flood lights, arranged in two groups, one on the west side of the field and the second about a quarter of a mile distant on the north side, provide plenty of light, tests show. But whether the illumination will meet with the approval of pilots is still to be determined.

Addition to Parks Factory.

Construction of an addition to the factory of Parks Aircraft, Inc., at Parks Airport, has been started. The building will be 100 feet by 80 feet and will cost $30,000. A hotel and a mechanics' school building are also under construction at the airport.

Von Hoffmann Barracks.

The concrete foundations for the new student barracks of the Von Hoffmann Flying School have been poured and the structure will be ready for occupancy in 30 days according to the contractor. Work on an administration building, 2 feet by 100 feet, and a hangar, 8 feet by 120 feet, will be started immediately. The new buildings represent an investment of $40,00

It will be a step on the Trans-Continental Air Transport Co.'s coast-to-coast route, and will be used by Curtiss Flying Service for aviation school and aerial taxi purposes. An East Side location was selected by Col. Lindbergh and other experts employed by Trans-Continental Air Transport instead of Lambert-St. Louis Field because of the proximity of the East Side to downtown St. Louis by way of Illinois Highway No. 3 and the Municipal Bridge.

City Hires Airport Experts.

The Airport Commission did not have to look beyond its own membership to find qualified experts to advise city engineers in the construction of the $2,000,000 municipal airport.

The Commission voted to employ the firms of Love-Sultan, Inc., and B. Russell Shaw & Co. Phil Love, former flying partner of Col. Lindbergh and graduate of the army flying school at Kelly Field, has, next to Lindbergh, been in and out of more airports than any other pilot in the country and is well qualified to decide important questions from a pilot's viewpoint.

Love's partner, T. Preston Sultan, is an architect and was a Captain in the Army Air Service in France. He assisted in designing the American air headquarters at Issoupun and shot down several German planes in 260 hours' flying over the lines. Love-Sultan, Inc., have offices in University City and are air consultants for Transcontinental Air Transport, Inc., with which Col. Lindbergh is connected.

B. Russell Shaw is an architect specializing in airport construction. He has interested himself in the local airport development for several years and has designed flying fields for other cities.

Robin Factory Anniversary.

Last Tuesday, exactly a year after ground for the Curtiss-Robertson plant was broken, the two hundredth Curtis-Robin was turned out by the plant. The first Robin was tested last August by Dan Robertson, now in Mexico. The efficiency with which the plant has functioned is due largely to the organizing ability of Ralph Damon, factory manager, formerly with the Curtiss Co. of Long Island. The output of the plant for the next four years has been contracted for by Curtiss Flying Service and each of the 200 Robins so far produced is in the hands of a purchaser.

Cardinal to Be Shown at Detroit.

The second Cardinal, two-place monoplane, is under construction at the plant of the St. Louis Car Co. and will be exhibited at the Detroit Aero Show next month. The Cardinal has met with the approval of pilots who tested it and plans for establishing distributors for the ship are being made.

Lighting System Nearly Ready.

The temporary lighting system at Lambert-St. Louis Field will be completed this week with the erection of a lighted wind cone on one of the National Guard hangars. The flood lights, arranged in two groups, one on the west side of the field and the second about a quarter of a mile distant on the north side, provide plenty of light, tests show. But whether the illumination will meet with the approval of pilots is still to be determined.

Addition to Parks Factory.

Construction of an addition to the factory of Parks Aircraft, Inc., at Parks Airport, has been started. The building will be 100 feet by 80 feet and will cost $30,000. A hotel and a mechanics' school building are also under construction at the airport.

Von Hoffmann Barracks.

The concrete foundations for the new student barracks of the Von Hoffmann Flying School have been poured and the structure will be ready for occupancy in 30 days, according to the contractor. Work on an administration building, 20 feet by 100 feet, and a hangar, 80 feet by 120 feet, will be started immediately. The new buildings represent an investment of $40,000.

Gillespie Joins Robertson.

Lieutenant Commander Paul E. Gillespie, former naval flier, has been appointed vice president of the Robertson Aircraft Corporation, filling the vacancy caused by the promotion of Harry Perkins to the presidency of the company. Commander Gillespie, who flew in France during the World War, resigned from the navy two weeks ago to take charge of the Robertson Flying School. He was commander of the Naval Reserve Aviation Training Station at Great Lakes for the last three years.

Zeppelin Stowaway Would Be Pilot.

Clarence "Red" Terhune, Graf Zeppelin stowaway, is contemplating taking a flying course and entering the aviation business. Terhune filled his last vaudeville contract at Chicago last week. He says he is not cut out for an actor and is through with the stage. He spent Thursday at Lambert Field discussing the details of an aviation course with a representative of the Robertson School.

Joseph's Coat.

"Casey" Lambert's new Ryan brougham was tested Thursday. "Casey" wrote his own specifications covering decorative features, with colorful effect. In place of the customary blue cloth lining for the cabin, "Casey" specified "wine red" material, with leather upholstery and dashboard covering of the same hue. The wing is silver and the fuselage French gray, with red striping. The windows are fitted with red silk curtains. The ship cost $13,000 and has places for five passengers and the pilot.

Flying for Ideas.

Cornelius Vanderbilt Jr. was a passenger on a tri-motored Ford transport of the Maddux Air Lines of Los Angeles, which was refueled at Lambert Field Wednesday. Vanderbilt is making the trip from Detroit to Los Angeles to gather gather data for an aviation story.

Others in the party were: Harold O. McLean, head of the Maddux Co., and his wife; John A. Anderson, a broker; John Brodix and his son, Frank; and Pilots John Gugelehmottl and Frank King. The ship is the fifth trimotored Ford purchased by the Maddux Co. for passenger service on the Pacific coast.

Phil Ball Flies Home.

Phil DeC. Ball, head of the Mahoney-Ryan Co., and owner of the St. Louis Browns, and his pilot, Frank Dunn, returned home from an interesting trip of approximately 6000 miles in Ball's Ryan brougham. Their route lay through the Southwest to Los Angeles, then south to Sonora and Sinaloa, Mexico, where they made stops at several hunting preserves. The territory visited is wild. Following their return Dunn tore down the Whirlwind engine in the ship for an overhauling, preparatory to hopping off with Ball for the Browns' training camp in Florida today or tomorrow.

Gilley to Fly the Mail.

Stancil "Bud" Gilley, diminutive pilot, resigned as an instructor for the Robertson Flying School last week to become a mail pilot for Texas Air Transport, with headquarters at Fort Worth. Gilley and his wife drove to Texas in his colorful new roadster.

A. A. Yotz Chosen Instructor.

A. A. Yotz, formerly with Parks Air College, has been appointed ground school instructor for the new Guardian Flying School. Yotz is a former Army pilot and was associated with Richard Hardin and Darek White, organizers of the Guardian Co., at Parks Airport.

14 Finish Mechanics' Course.

Fourteen students completed the mechanics' course at the Von Hoffman School last week. Graduates from the Von Hoffman School are now employed in a dozen aircraft factories throughout the country.

Record Flight to Chicago.

Pilot Jewell, flying a six-place Hamilton monoplane with Hornet engine, made a trip to Chicago with passengers in an hour and 40 minutes last week. This is a new record for speed on the regular St. Louis-Chicago route.

Distributors Visit Plant.

O. L. Mosier and M. E. Oliphant, Mahoney-Ryan distributors in Colorado and Michigan, visited the Mahoney-Ryan plant at Lambert Field during the yeek. Mosier was flying home following a trip to Florida and the West Indies.

"Bud" Gurney Visits East.

"Bud" Gurney, chief pilot for the Robertson Aircraft Corporation, is in the East inspecting the Fokker plant in New Jersey and will also go to New York.

Guard Flyers' New Quarters.

The headquarters of the Thirty-fifth Division Air Service is now in the old police headquarters building, 208 North Twelfth street. The use of the former police garage, with excellent drill facilities, was promised to the air unit, but the Police Board is using the structure for storage purposes, so the other building was substituted. The headquarters furniture was moved in last Thursday, and the first meeting will be held in the new quarters this week.

Capt. Young Goes to Dayton.

Capt. Harry Young, regular army instructor for the air unit, departed Thursday for Dayton to turn in the last Falcon belonging to the unit. He will depart for Santa Monica, Cal., shortly to get a new Douglas O2H to replace the Falcon. Capt. Young planned to leave for Dayton Wednesday, but the Falcon got stuck in the mud at Lambert Field. A tractor that came to the rescue also became mired.

Lieut. Johannpeter Resigns.

Lieut. Julius Johannpeter, former mail pilot, has resigned from the air unit to devote more time to his contracting business.

Art Goebel a Visitor.

Art Goebel, winner of the Dole prize for the California to Honolulu flight, was a passenger in a tri-motored plane arriving at Lambert Fileld Friday. The plane, a trimotered Fokker, belonging to Western Air Express, was piloted over Washington at the inauguration of President Hoover. Other passengers besides Goebel were Mrs. A. H. Woods, wife of a New York theatrical producer; Mrs. Leo Fruhaus, William Lewis and Phil H. Philbin Jr., all of New York. After refueling, the plane resumed the trip to the Pacific Coast.

Old Hangars Torn Down.

Th first steel hangar at Lambert Field, which housed three ships, an old office building of the Robertson Aircraft Corporation, and Field Manager Scott's old office, are being torn down by way of cleaning up the airport.

On Sales Trip.

J. A. Van Loon, sales manager for Parks Aircraft, departed in the new Parks P-1, an OX-5 biplane, with Pilot Edgar Schmitt on a sales trip through the East.

Flying Country Clubs.

Darwin Adams of New York, representative of Aviation Country Clubs, Inc., was a passenger on the Robertson line from Chicago to Kansas City Thursday. Aviation Country Clubs, Inc., plan a series of flying clubs throughout the country, including one at St. Louis. Club houses and grounds at Long Island and Westchester, N. Y., and Philadelphia are nearing completion, according to Adams, who is on his way to Los Angeles to establish a club there. He will return to St. Louis to take up the question of a local club in several weeks.

Visitors During Week.

A party of tourists traveling from Detroit to Mexico City in a tri-motored Ford made a speedy change of plans at Parks Airport last week when news of the revolution in Mexico was received. The party included Mr. and Mrs. J. J. Fibiger of Detroit, Mich.; A. R. Lajous, Ford Motor Co. distributor at Mexico City; Blaine Newcom, W. J. Haddon and E. J. Snyder, pilots. The plane proceeded to Brownsville, Tex., to await developments before crossing into Mexico.

Other visitors at Parks Airport during the week included: Paul Meng, pilot of the Ford tri-motor of the Grey Goose Motor Bus Co., who was on his way from New Orleans to Chicago; Roy B. Keely in a Travel-Air on his way from Wichita, Kan., to Taunton, Mass.; Trow Gebsen in a Waco-Nine, traveling from Canton, O., to Los Angeles; Department of Commerce Inspector George A. Wiggs, who flew in from Kansas City in a Whirlwind Laird; Blaine Newcom in a Wasp Ford monoplane; Marion Sterline in a Lockheed-Vega, on his way from Detroit to Los Angeles; Ralph Stancliffe, who flew from Memphis to Parks Airport in a Waco-Ten, and "Shorty" Bicknell from Memphis in a Travel-Air.

INTER-AMERICA ROUTE BLAZED BY ITALIAN

Maj. Barone in New York After 20,000-Mile Auto Trip From Brazil.

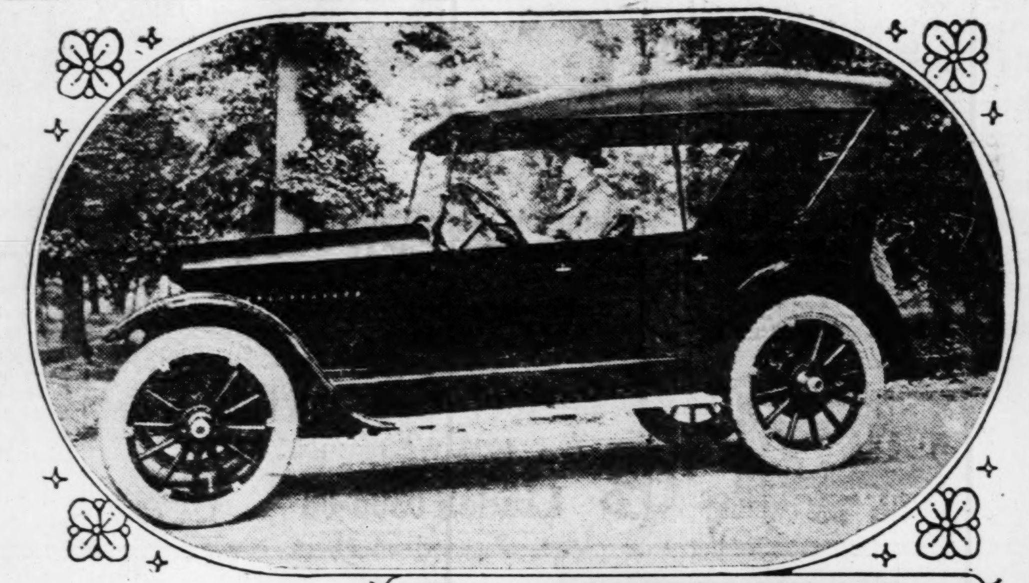
NEW YORK, March 9.—Completing the first inter-continent trip ever made in an automobile, Maj. Jose Mario Barone, Italian aviator, arrived in New York yesterday in the second-hand Studebaker in which he made his 20,000-mile trek through trackless jungles and swamps from Rio de Janeiro to New York City. He was officially welcomed to the city by Acting Mayor McKee, and a gathering of Italian diplomatic officers, Fascist representatives and city officials.

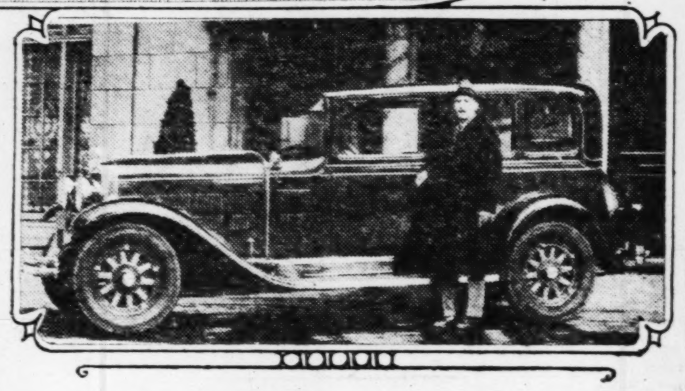
The log kept by Barone tells vividly of privations, hardships and adventure. Virtually all the money for expenses was made by races, stunt driving and grueling tests in the various cities passed through and a great collection of trophies bears witness to the Italian's successful competitions. The entire trip was made in the same car, a Studebaker which had 100,000 miles on its speedometer before Barone started from Rio.

The lack of any roads whatsoever during many stages of the trip through the jungles and swamp lands of South America and Central America, put the car to rigorous tests. Near Tres Cruces, high in the Andes, it was necessary to make a "leap of death" over a crevice too deep to be filled. Ramps were made and the chasm was leaped, the car landing with a crash on the other side.

In Ecuador four months were required to journey 300 miles because of recurring avalanches, one of which swept the car and its occupants down the mountain side. The car was dismantled and carried piece by piece into the nearest village, where Barone repaired the car and put it together again. Three mechanics died en route, bandits attacked them in Nicaragua, fever held him up 15 days in Lima. But in the end Barone and Studebaker have pioneered the route between the two Americas.

GARDNER 10 YEARS AGO—AND NOW





ABOVE is a four-cylinder Gardner phaeton built in 1919 and at that time announced as the most modern car of its type. Contrast it with the latest eight-cylinder sedan model pictured below. The driver of both cars is Russell E. Gardner Jr., president of the Gardner Motor Car Co

FIRST GARDNER AUTOS BUILT IN YEAR 1919

Four-Cylinder Cars Gave Way to Eights in 1924.

Back in 1919, ages ago as automobile history is reckoned, the Gardner car made its first appearance. It exemplified the very height of style, equipment and performance in automobiles of that day.

It is a far cry from this early touring car to the modern eight-in-line Gardner automobile of today. Harking back a decade, it is revealed that this 1919 car had a four-cylinder power plant, developing 35 horsepower, a wheelbase of 112 inches, mechanical brakes on the rear wheels only, and large wooden wheels that carried 30x3½ high pressure tires. It was priced at $1125 factory.

The body lines and contours of this 1919 car, while doubtless considered artistic in that day would not pass muster in the big parade of today's ultra smart and powerful motor cars. In 1919 the world was not as color conscious as it is today, so this early car was painted black and its fittings and upholstery were far more conservative than those in today's Gardner eight.

Today's Gardner eight-in-line embraces three distinct series—"120," "125," "130," as designated by the wheelbase lengths of the cars. In comparison with the first car produced by the company in 1919, these modern cars tell an interesting story of the progress made in the manufacture of personal means of transportation and of the rapidly changing panorama of events and causes leading up to the modern automobile of today.

In 1924, after engaging for five years in the successful manufacture of four-cylinder cars, Gardner engineers sensed the growing trend for larger, more powerful cars. As a result the company in 1924 brought out its first eight-in-line automobile. So encouraging was the public's response to this new car that the company almost immediately reorganized its entire facilities for the manufacture of eight-in-line cars. Gardner was the first manufacturer in the industry to take such a step—considered by many at the time a radical move — and today Gardner holds the distinction of being the pioneer company to engage in the exclusive manufacture of eight-in-line automobiles.

"The series '130' four-door sedan, typical of the modern Gardner line, is powered with an eight-in-line L-head engine, and has a horsepower rating of 125. It is equipped with two of the most advanced safety units—four-wheel hydraulic enclosed brakes, internally operating, with compensating cylinder, and cam-and-lever steering gear. The chassis is oiled by a new centralized system of automatic chassis lubrication that oils while you ride. The use of dual carburetion and duplex manifolding add much to the power of the engine. Another notable feature is the magnetic starter button located on the instrument board, which is both a convenience and a vital safety factor.

"The body lines and contours of the series '130' sedan are in keeping with the modern coach designers' conception of artistry and balance. Instead of the body decorative motifs being limited to a few conservative colors as in the 1919 cars, the 1929 Gardner cars come in 16 body styles and with over 50 striking color combinations. And there is a price range from $1295 to $2395, factory."

Used Car Sales Show Increase Over Last Year

Better Autos, Lower Prices Bigger Stocks Are Contributing Factors.

By a Special Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch.

DETROIT, Mich., March 9.—Despite fairly high stocks which are almost universal, and an inactive market which has come to be regarded as a natural state of affairs at this season of the year, the used car situation of the country as a whole appears to be in a much more satisfactory condition than it was this time last year.

On the whole, there is evident an almost general feeling of optimism that used car sales will improve with the weather. Dealers appear to be doing everything possible to sell all the used cars they can now and they are meeting with considerable success in a number of markets.

There seem to be very few automobile dealers in the frame of mind so conspicuously evident last year who could see and talk nothing but the used car problem and who were willing to unload everything at any price.

For one thing the dealer has a greater stock. On the whole, the used cars in the dealers' showrooms are better merchandise, comparatively speaking, than those of a year ago.

Prices are lower. Last fall saw less reckless trading than did the fall of 1927. With interest in new cars well sustained throughout the latter part of the year, there was little need of it. And a great many of those who traded without regard to the outcome in 1927 and in previous years apparently paid some attention to the costly lessons they had learned.

Studebaker Coliseum Salon To Open Tomorrow Morning

Elaborate Display of 41 DeLuxe Models of 1929 Line and Movietone Production Featuring Famous Stage and Radio Stars Offered Free to Public.

One of the most elaborate passenger car exhibits ever staged in St. Louis will be held for the week beginning tomorrow at the Coliseum under the auspices of the Lurie Motor Car Co., Studebaker distributer here. The exhibit, which in reality will be a salon since all de luxe creations will be on display, is being held in order that the entire line of 41 models for Studebaker cars for 1929 can be displayed on one floor. This is not possible at the distributer's showroom at Grand and Lindell, although it is one of the largest in St. Louis. The public is to be admitted free. Doors will be open daily from 10 a. m. to 10 p. m.

Every model of the Studebaker Dictator, Commander, President and Erskine lines will be on display with as many as three distinct color combinations offered for each model. The variety of its color combinations is one of the high lights of the Studebaker line for 1929.

The salon will be featured by a Studebaker produced Movietone, entitled "The Champion," which will be shown three times daily. The Movietone tells the story of the development of Studebaker cars which have earned world championship honors by their performance in winning 11 world and 23 international records for speed and endurance, in addition to every official American record for fully equipped stock cars.

Reigning dramatic stars and favorites appearing in the most popular musical revues now "packing them in" on Broadway have contributed to the interest of the film. Among these are Eva LeGallienne, Ann Pennington and Florenz Ziegfeld and a group of his "glorified American girls."

Other members of the all-star cast included Knute Rockne and his Notre Dame football stars, Quin Ryan, famous radio announcer at Station WGN, an artist's model whose face has charmed millions of Americans from billboards, A. R. Erskine, president of the Studebaker Corp., and a group of ravishing beauties who take part in an elaborate fashion show, as well as other national stage and society celebrities.

Ab. Jenkins and Ralph Hepburn, internationally famous race pilots but probably best known for their speedway and road accomplishments with Studebaker cars, feature prominently in the "Champions" film, a large portion of which is devoted to showing the manufacturer's cars in thrilling action during last year's sensational 30,000-mile world record run on the Atlantic City Speedway.

Through the entire film runs an orchestral theme provided by the celebrated Roxy Theater Symphony Orchestra, familiar to all America's radio listeners.

Wizard Storage Battery Improved

Two years ago the Western Auto Supply Co. made a complete investigation into the action of automobile storage batteries during cold weather and found that all batteries, regardless of name or make, showed a very considerable depreciation of electrical output during cold weather. The reason was that the cold acid solution in the battery did not react efficiently with the standard negative plate. Consequently the whole efficiency of the battery was reduced.

The chemists of the battery manufacturers who make Wizard batteries, immediately went into the matter of the efficiency of negative plates, and after a year and a half of investigation and experimentation have evolved a special mixture of lead that goes into the negative plate that reacts efficiently with even the coldest battery acid. There have been innumerable tests run, not only by the Western Auto Supply Co., distributer for Wizard batteries, but by various automobile manufacturers and in every test this new plate has shown that it gives some 25 per cent to 50 per cent more power, 25 per cent to 50 per cent longer life, higher voltage and develops a great deal less internal heat, officials declare.

Model 120 Phaeton Sedan

125 Horsepower
130 Wheelbase
Convertible
Phaeton Sedan
$2095

Custom-type! The smartest, most distinctive, convertible car in the world. Auburn introduced this Phaeton Sedan as a production model and made it available for the first time under $5000. So popular was this model on our 115 chassis last year that at no time could our utmost production efforts keep up with the demand. Yet, following Auburn's policy of making our owners the beneficiaries of Auburn's increasing success, we are introducing this new Model 120 with greater horsepower and even greater value for less cost. Again the demand for the rare combination of its power, stamina, comfort and convertible advantages will exceed the supply. The top can be easily lowered and fits snugly into a neat boot. All four door-glasses may be raised or lowered at will, whether the top is up or down. It is an entirely open touring car or a completely closed car, as you wish. Of course, it is a Straight Eight! We sincerely urge you to place your order early. Thousands who delayed had to have their deposits returned last year.

Hear the Radio Program of the "Hudson—Essex Challengers" every Friday Evening

KWK—9:00 to 9:30 P. M.

during Nation-wide CHALLENGER WEEK

Last week a stock Essex coach carrying driver and newspapermen was three times successfully driven up treacherous Calvary Hill in high. On the same day it proved itself capable of accelerating from a standing start to 60 M. P. H., in 28 seconds, and demonstrated that it has a speed of 72 M. P. H. It is economical, too, having been driven 20 miles on a gallon of gasoline.

Above we show some of the local records, officially observed by newspaper men, which Essex the Challenger established during Nationwide Challenger Week. Owners here, and owners by thousands all over the country, have duplicated these tests, or at least, verified the capacity of their own Essex the Challenger to reproduce any or all of these proofs.

IN FAST GET-AWAY—no car is excepted. IN SPEED—anything the road offers up to 70 miles an hour. IN HILL CLIMBING—against any car you choose. IN APPEARANCE—match it for smartness with costlier cars. IN EASE OF DRIVING—note smoothness of motor—ease of steering—roadability and effectiveness of brakes. IN ENDURANCE—60 miles an hour all day long is well within its range.

One million owners know the special advantages of the Super-Six. They are best qualified to compare the Essex the Challenger. To them we offer first opportunity to test the most powerful, the largest, roomiest, smoothest, easiest riding—most complete Essex ever built. But all motordom must be astounded that even with seventy-six notable improvements, the price is the lowest in Essex history—a price but little above the lowest-priced car on the market.

DURANT PLANT NOW VALUED AT $25,000,000

Employees Total 10,000—$80,000,000 Worth of Cars Sold in 1928.

With the completion in November, 1928, of important additions to its plants in Lansing, Mich., in which it is to concentrate its production of motor cars during 1929, Durant Motors, Inc., has what is said to be oneof the finest plants in the industry for economical quantity production of high grade motor cars. The present capacity, its is stated, greatly exceeds the 1928 Durant output, which totaled 117,200 units and was valued at $80,000,000.

The plants of Durant Motors, including subsidiary companies, are according to statistics released by the company, valued at $25,000,000 and provide a floor space of 5,000,000 square feet or 115 acres.

Employment in the Durant plants totals 10,000 persons. In subsidiary plants, and in plants of suppliers engaged in working on materials and parts for Durant cars, it is estimated, an additional 10,000 making a total of 20,000 employed in producing Durant motor cars.

Any estimate of the number of men in the employ of dealers, the factory executives state, would be largely a matter of guess work. The total number of Durant dealers and distributors, domestic and foreign, their records show, is over 2300.

Olds Sales Show Tremendous Gains

An increase of 95 per cent in the production and shipment of Oldsmobiles during February as compared to the same month last year is reported today by Oldsmobile officials. During the month just closed—the shortest in the year—10,200 Oldsmobiles were manufactured, according to A. C. Williams, branch manager here.

A further increase of more than 40 per cent over this record February production is scheduled for March, factory officials announce. During the present month approximately 14,500 Oldsmobiles will be produced to fill domestic and export requirements.

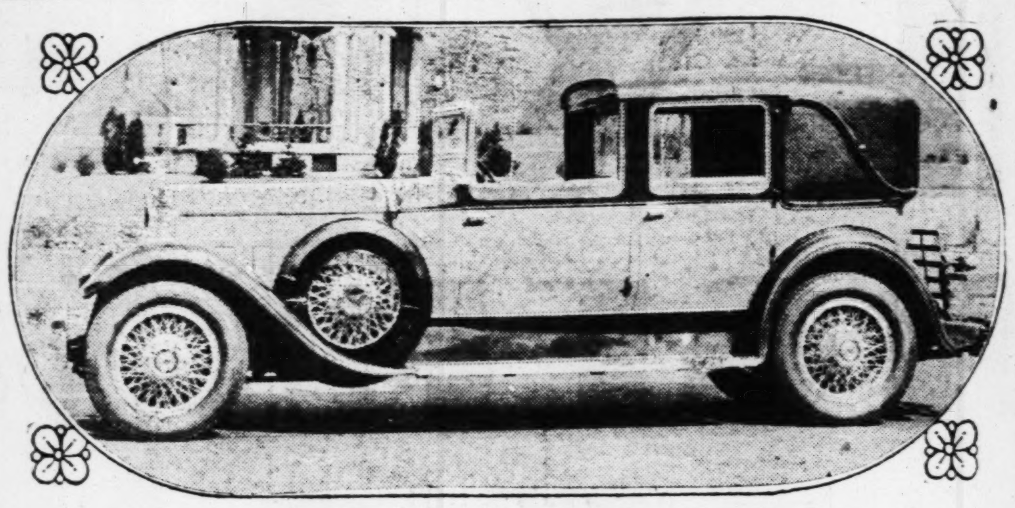
Retail sales are keeping pace with the greatly increased production, Williams reports. During February these showed an increase of more than 90 per cent. While domestic sales registered the greatest gains, exports showed an increase of 40 per cent over those of last February. This improvement in exports is in direct line with the great strides being made in the export field by the General Motors Corporation, of which Oldsmobile is a division. Last year General Motors exported double the number of automobiles it shipped abroad during the previous year.

Lee to Speak

Representatives of St. Louis automobile distributers and of St. Louis accessory and parts houses will attend by invitation the annual meeting of the Jefferson City Missouri Automobile Dealers Association to be held at the Central Hotel in Jefferson City Tuesday evening, March 12. Dealers from Columbia, Fulton and nearby points also will be present.

The principal speaker at the meeting will be Maj. Robert E. Lee, manager of the St. Louis Automobile Dealers Association.

HIGHEST PRICED CAR IN PACKARD LINE



THIS LeBaron all-weather cabriolet, mounted on the 145-inch wheelbase Packard chassis and powered by an eight-cylinder 105 h. p. engine, is now on display at the Berry Motor Car Co. It is the highest priced car on the line delivering here for $7495.

Airplane Propellers Generate Power

Four big airplane propellers send blasts of air into a giant water cooler on the roof of the power house of the Packard Motor Car Co. factory at Detroit. They save several thousand dollars a year in power generation.

The cooler will handle 72,000 pounds of water per minute and lowers its temperature 15 degrees. To use this water once only and then waste it would be most uneconomical.

With its fans, the cooler is similar to the radiator on an automobile in that it continually dissipates the waste heat and loses only a small total quantity of water through evaporation. It handles the water from the condensers on the plant's new steam turbine generators.

With the new cooling plant the water is sprayed through the giant box-like structure as large as a three-story building. The water collects in a large basin on the roof and thence returns to the system.

This conservation of water is one of many phases in the program of the company's power plant improvements that have been going on for the last year and which when completed will have cost nearly $2,000,000.

Six Plane Engines Passed Tests in 1928

WASHINGTON.—Six out of 21 aircraft engines submitted to the Bureau of Standards last year were granted approved type certificates for use in approved type airplanes.

The results show that the average manufacturer should do more development work before going into production and indicates the importance of testing as a protection to the public, the bureau says in a bulletin.

Four engines were withdrawn after they were submitted for tests, and 11 failed to pass the requirements. The bureau began testing new commercial airplane engines as a protection to the public March 1 last year.

High Luster on Manifolds.

A vitreous enamel finish of high luster is used on Graham-Paige manifolds. This practice avoids the use of paint, which burns off in the first few days of the car's use, and causes that familiar new car odor. The enamel finish, with the glassy coating baked on at extremely high temperatures, is permanent, and the manifolds never get rough and rusty.

Ford Plans Development Of Factories

into four groups; the main dealer and distributer, the retail dealer, the retail sub-dealer and the limited dealer. The Ford Motor Co. (England), Ltd., will by this new arrangement provide a livelihood for at least 25,000 British workers and find maintenance for about 100,000 people.

The automobile works at Trafford Park from which this industry radiates in 1926 occupied an area of 316,924 square feet; today it is 475,000 square feet. It maintains its own fire department, complete with up-to-date firefighting equipment; medical department, laboratory, telephone exchange, educational department, cinema, dining rooms, and monthly publishes its own newspaper, The Ford Times.

The conditions of labor at the Ford factory provide for an eight-hour day and five days a week. The minimum wage is 2 shillings an hour, or £4 a week, for probationers, with a maximum rise to 4 shillings per hour, or £8 per week. Beyond this figure an employe is put on full salary.

At the Ford factory at Cork, Ireland, very shortly, between four and five thousand Irishmen will be enrolled under the Ford banner. Hundreds are already engaged in the erection of machinery for the manufacture of the Fordson tractor. This type of vehicle will be manufactured in Cork exclusively. The whole of the plant has been brought from the Ford factory at Dearborn, Mich., and shipped in the Ford fleet of vessels direct to Cork.

The factories have been scheduled for completion by the end of March, and the work of manufacturing tractors will begin immediately. Contracts have been made, delivery of 30,000 vehicles by the end of the year.

The greatest development of the Ford enterprise in England will be found at Dagenham, Essex, in the course of a year or two. A site measuring 308 acres has been acquired there for the erection of one of the largest motor manufacturing factories in the world. Dagenham will be pivot on which Ford business with Europe and many other parts of the Eastern hemisphere will turn.

Where Manchester can produce one car Dagenham will produce five; it will be able to produce double the present output of the whole manufacturing industry in this country.

The Degenham works, it is confidently anticipated, will be able to find employment for 15,000 men. The new factories will have to be fed with huge quantities of fuel, and their appetite for raw materials of every kind will be insatiable.

Supplies will be drawn largely from British sources and help to bring relief to industries that are now hard pressed. With exports running into six figures, the employment produced for this country's shipping will mean no small contribution to national prosperity. Dagenham is not only destined to supply the world's markets, but it is the intention of Ford to improve the proportion of cars to the world's population, which stands at 1 to 125.

Dagenham, it is stated, will turn out every year about 2,000,000 Ford cars and trucks. The site for the factory is on the Essex bank of the Thames, some 10 miles from London. There is a half-mile frontage to the Thames which affords splendid dock and wharfage facilities for ocean-going vessels, on which cars and parts for export can be shipped direct from the finishing shops. Much of the tremendous supply of raw material and fuel that the new factory will consume can be brought by sea and unloaded at its very door. Inland equally convenient transport facilities are ready to be utilized.

It will take three years to complete this scheme, but before then cars and other vehicles will be manufactured. This new factory will in no way affect Manchester, for big improvements and extensions are to be carried out also in that city.

Another Ford development is the establishment of show rooms in the heart of the west end of London. An important site has been acquired in Regent street, a stone throw from Piccadilly Circus, and the show rooms, complete with offices, are to be on the most lavish and up-to-date principle.

Japanese Know Olds Car.

Japanese workmen have been trained to service Oldsmobiles exported to that country. The Nipponese are reported to quickly grasp mechanical problems.

Would License Race Tracks in Indiana

A bill has been introduced into the Indiana Legislature by State Senator Ralph Adams of Shelbyville, providing for the appointment by the Governor of an inspector, and for the licensing of automobile dirt-tracks and speedways one mile or less in length. The provisions of the bill parallel the safety requirements of the AAA contest board, the governing body of automobile racing in the United States.

Aero Conference To Be Held in Cleveland, May 16

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

NEW YORK, March 9.—The first airport convention ever held will be staged in Cleveland, O., May 16, 17, 18, it was announced today by Capt. Clarence M. Knox, vice president in charge of the airport section of the Aeronautical Chamber of Commerce. Capt. Knox, who is commissioner of airports of Connecticut with headquarters at Hartford, said the airport convention would be an annual affair.

Chromium Gabriels Attract Attention

Use of chromium plating, the finish that is revolutionizing automobile body work, on the new Gabriel "Triple-Hydraulic" shock absorber is attracting much attention among motorists of this city, according to H. C. Merry of H. C. Merry, Inc.

Aside from the brilliant luster and tarnish-proof qualities of the finish of this sturdy shock absorber, the adoption of chromium plating by the Gabriel company has another significance, Merry says.

"The other significance is that the new type shock absorber is being taken definitely from the category of an automobile accessory and is now to have proper recognition as an integral and component part of the modern automobile."

Special Race Tires For Front Drives

Some special racing tires are being built up in the Firestone experimental department particularly to withstand the driving stresses of front drive cars at Indiaanpolis. As soon as weather permits, Tommy Milton, long a speedway "ace," has agreed to test them and determine whether the right combination has been obtained.

MONTE CARLO RACE WON BY GRAHAM-PAIGE

Swedish Owner Drives 1840 Miles in 74 Hours to Win.

(By Mail.)

PARIS, March 1.—Snow, ice, rain and, most treacherous of all, fog, made this year's Monte Carlo Rally, held the last week in February, perhaps the most difficult in the history of this annual internationally famous touring competition.

Snow and ice covered mountain roads, blankets of thick fog, and abysmal darkness frayed the nerves of some of the contestants to such an extent that innocuous obstacles suddenly looming on the fog shrouded roads brought shouts of alarm from the passengers, who feared they were going to crash into a cyclist or a cart.

One driver starting from Riga became hopelessly snowbound while a woman driver who started from Berlin had to sleep all night in her car which was buried in the snow. In the morning the engine was a solid mass of ice and so injured by the frost as to be useless.

Such were some of the harrowing experiences of drivers over the tortuous trails that lead from various parts of Europe to the famous capital of Monaco.

The unique Monte Carlo Rally is one of the world's severest automobile competitions. Contestants start from the capitals of their respective countries, timing themselves to arrive at Monte Carlo at approximately the same hour. They must maintain an average for the entire distance as near to 25 miles per hour as possible, and not less than 20 miles. Upon arrival at Monte Carlo the machines must drive difficult mountainous courses and participate in other endurance contests.

An American stock car, a Graham-Paige, equipped with the AC fue pump, won the contest, receiving the $10,000 prize award and in addition a special trophy for traversing the greatest distance.

Only 24 of the 64 starters reached Monte Carlo within the time limit. The winning driver was J. J. Stringer van Eijck, who left Stockholm, Sweden, and arrived at Monte Carlo, 1840 miles away, in 74 hours and 17 minutes after his start. He won a prize of 40,000 francs and a trophy cup awarded by the French newspaper Le Journal.

Bulgarian Prince Visits Willys Plant

TOLEDO, O., March 9.—American "mass production" of automobiles, which best typifies the highest development of quantity output at lower costs in all the industrial world, is so fascinating to Prince Cyril of Bulgaria that he made two trips through the Willys-Overland plants at Toledo to complete his impressions and ideas.

Prince Cyril, who is the younger brother of King Boris III of Bulgaria, is the second son of the late King Ferdinand and is related to the royal families of Great Britain, Belgium, Denmark, and the former imperial families of Germany and Austria, and is a direct descendant of Charlemagne.

In his trip, which covers many of the larger cities of the United States, Prince Cyril is seriously studying the industrial system and methods, while the automotive industry has appealed to him more strongly than any other, he indicated. In his trip through the Willys-Overland factory, Prince Cyril showed his greatest interest in the production lines where crews of men work rapidly assembling the Willys-Knights and Whippets as they more forward slowly on the lines.

Accompanying Prince Cyril were: Prof. Dr. Max Rabes of Charlottenburg, Germany, celebrated continental painter; William, Baron von Einen and Baroness von Einen.

Schulz in the past years has been used-car manager for several prominent direct factory branches here.

Aero Output In 1928 More Than in 1927

gined monoplanes were built as there were multi-engined biplanes. Because of the latter ratio, the total retail value of monoplanes, less engines, was over $8,500,000 as contrasted with $7,500,000 for biplanes. Multi-engined transports account, also, for the greater part of the value close to $1,000,000, exclusive of engines, placed on seaplanes, flying boats and amphibians.

"Wichita, Kan., the figures show, is unquestionably the leader in production with 927 planes. New York is second with 857 units, but first with an estimated gross airplane value of $7,5000,000, as against $3,000,000 for Wichita.

"In the rank of aircraft manufacturing states, Ohio comes third, showing a production of 816 planes; Missouri fourth with 736; Colorado fifth with 341; Illinois sixth with 248; Michigan seventh with 181, and California eighth with 140. In estimated gross value of aircraft only, after New York, the leader, come the following states: Missouri, second with $3,500,000, Kansas and Michigan tying for third with $3,000,000 each; Ohio, fourth, with $2,500,000; California fifth with $1,500,000; Colorado sixth with $750,000, and Illinois seventh with $500,000. In engine production, New Jersey and Connecticut were predominant with Michigan second, New York third and California fourth. The chamber's statement follows:

"Reports covering 53 companies are embraced in the production figures for 1928 which show approximately 5000 aircraft and 3500 aircraft motors were built in the United States in 1928. This is in striking contrast to the year 1921 when not a single strictly commercial aircraft was constructed and military production, then the sole source of income of the industry, reached the low level of 302 planes. The total value of aircraft and motors produced in that year is estimated as $5,000,000. In 1927, 1565 commercial aircraft were built and in 1928 commercial aircraft production increased 140 per cent.

"Of the 53 companies reporting, 45 manufacture aircraft and 12 make engines, four being in both the plane and engine class. The output of these 53 plants represents all but a fraction—not more than 300 at most—of the total plane production. There are, perhaps, as many more plants identifying themselves as aircraft factories, but which are either only on the verge of production or have built but one or two experimental planes. Aircraft year book figures for 1927 show that only 30 plants reported were in production then, indicating that there has been a three-fold increase during the last year."

Whippet Steering Is Redesigned

A marked engineering advancement is seen in the new Whippet Fours and Sixes, with the adoption of a completely redesigned steering gear.

The new steering gear on the Whippet models materially increases the ease in steering, a feature which has a decided appeal, especially to women drivers. The design of the wheel itself makes for more comfort, since the oval section of the rim is inclined and not parallel to the steering post. As a result, the hands rest in a naturally or slightly in-curved position. On long drives especially one is not conscious of any strain in keeping the hands on the wheel.

The redesigned steering gear has a worm and gear reduction of 11 to 1, as against 8½ to 1 employed in the former Whippet, with the result that the resistance to turning is consequently reduced in that proportion. The grooving of the king pins so that a greater amount of grease is stored in the bearings proper than has before been possible, is an additional improvement that adds to the ease of steering. However, the adjusting features of the steering post have been retained, these being desirable for people of sub or abnormal stature.

Archer-Mann Gets Many New Dealers

The dealer organization of the Archer-Mann Motor Car Co., Marmon distributer in the St. Louis metropolitan area is being rapidly expanded, and there are few franchises remaining to be had, according to Richard Mann, vice president in charge of sales. The popularity of the present Marmon line and the fact recent announcement that Marmon is soon to sponsor an eight-cylinder car at less than $1000, are contributing factors according to Mann. The Archer-Mann Motor Car Co., also will distribute the new car, which is to be known as the Roosevelt.

Thoughtful Car Owner Reads Instruction Book

Experienced Motorists Understand Value of Information Contained in Manuals Which are Constantly Being Improved by Manufacturers.

Lost, strayed or stolen, condemned, praised and sometimes laughed at, the automobile instruction book never was more secure in its position as a necessary adjunct to car ownership.

This is the conclusion reached by sales and service departments of the automobile concerns, from the largest producers to the smallest.

However, efforts are being made to popularize instruction books by making them more readable as well as more understandable. Much of the criticism raised has proved helpful, judging from the newer books as they are going into the hands of owners.

Manufacturers also are commencing to realize that perhaps the service men themselves need instructions, too, and so the better books are directed to the man who is in overalls as well as to the man at the wheel.

This does not necessitate a more technical book. While a mechanic by trade, the workman is not necessarily a technician. He demands simple terms and plain English. Since the car owner's demands are identical, the modern reference manual is more specific than ever, yet more easily comprehended.

Recognition is made of the fact that with so many model changes, and so many popular cars on the market, it is not possible for even an automobile service expert to be entirely familiar with every problem that is put to him. The instruction book is his guide and the car owner who does not keep one handy is slipping into an expensive rut.

It is significant that one of the companies that advertises the very low percentage of replacements parts demanded by its owners is the one that is proud of its carefully prepared instruction book. This manual is divided into three sections. One is devoted entirely to the operation of the car and is intended for the use of those motorists who are not mechanically inclined but who appreciate that the most vital thing about any car is the person at the wheel.

The second part is directed to the owner who takes care of his own car or who has the work done under his own directions. It covers all the daily service points, including lubrication, adjustments of a more simple nature, care of the tires, battery and cooling system, and engine operations.

The third division of the book concentrates on repairs and adjustments.

Many a Roman aqueduct still stands, after 2,000 years, the epitome of strength and beauty. That same charm of line and trustworthiness of construction are reflected in the "arched-window" silhouette of the Chrysler today.

CHRYSLER "75" Royal Sedan, $1535

Beauty—ages old—
yet new as the dawn of today

In producing a motor car equally matchless in appearance as it is in performance, Chrysler designers substituted basic Style for fleeting styles by going back to the ancients who established the changeless principles of art—the age-old laws of beauty, of balance and of symmetry.

Such is the kinship between the beautiful and the useful that strength and grace, power and charm, sturdiness and loveliness are combined naturally; scientific and efficient engineering conforming to the time-proved standards of proportion and balance.

Thus the studied canons of ancient art have been translated into terms consistent with modernity, and epitomized in the Chrysler so that its appearance is now only rivaled by its performance, and it is as pleasing to observe as it is satisfying to drive.

New Chrysler "65"—Six body styles, $1040 to $1145. New Chrysler "75"—Nine body styles, $1535 to $2345. New Chrysler Imperial —Five custom body styles, $2675 to $3855. All prices f. o. b. factory.

Amended Oil-Gas Trade Code Needed To Protect Public

A. A. A. Urges Federal Commission to Probe Into Marketing Ethics.

WASHINGTON, March 9.—The code of practices proposed by the petroleum industry and which the Federal Trade Commission is now considering must be radically amended if adequate protection is to be afforded to the purchasers of gasoline, oil and allied products, according to officers of the American Automobile Association.

The national motoring body has filed a brief on behalf of the organized car owners of the country with Commissioner Edgar A. McCulloch, who presided at a conference of the oil industry in St. Louis recently when the code proposed by the oil interests was discussed.

At the same time that this brief was filed, the A. A. A. served notice that eevry available means would be used to give a thorough airing to the case for the purchasing public before the stamp of Federal approval is definitely placed on the selling program of the petroleum industry.

An analysis of the proposed code, according to the A. A. A. brief, discloses that its adoption would accomplish little or nothing to eliminate the undesirable practices and conditions that have militated against the interests of the purchasing public and which have culminated in a large volume of national resentment.

Particular attention is called to the fact that the code does not propose any remedial measures for the prevention of the short sales of gas and oil which now amount to a levy of more than $20,000,000 a year on the car owners; to the stabilization of prices which now vary like a kaleidoscope in areas where basic conditions are the same; the excessive number of stations and pumps which tend to increase the cost of doing business and the price to the consumers.

Announcement
Eagle Motor Truck Corporation

TO enable us to offer the public a motor truck to meet practically every requirement from the small, fast delivery vehicle, to the large heavy duty 5-ton model we have consummated a contract with the Stewart Motor Corporation, Buffalo, N. Y., makers of the world famous light and medium trucks, in the St. Louis territory, in conjunction with Eagle Heavy Duty, manufactured by us.

There has been no merger of the financial interest of the Stewart or Eagle Corporations and none is contemplated. The arrangement is simply a joint sales and servicing combination for Stewart and Eagle trucks in the St. Louis territorry.

With the wide range of models necessary today to meet all trucking requirements, it is practically impossible for one truck maker to manufacture an entire line; hence our arrangement with the Stewart Motor Corporation enables us to offer a model for almost every trucking requirement.

Before making selection of the Stewart line, we made a searching investigation of the entire truck field for a suitable line of light and medium duty trucks, moderately priced, which would uphold our reputation and the Stewart was our choice.

During the past 16 years, Stewart has built up a world-wide reputation in the light and medium duty field for quality trucks moderately priced. Stewarts are now in service in over 600 American cities and 56 foreign countries.

We found that Stewart owners do not figure depreciation on a two or three year basis. They know by experience that the average life of a Stewart is five years or more. Many Stewarts have given their owners 8, 10, and even 12 years of constant service. Hundreds of Stewart fleets have grown from a single truck. They have made a remarkable reputation for low repair bills and dependable service.

The 1929 model Stewarts now on exhibition in our sales rooms, have all the latest-known, worthwhile mechanical improvements, plus the time-tested and proven Stewart features.

You are cordially invited to call and inspect the new Stewarts, also our new line of Eagle Highway Freighters.

Federal Aid Road Melon to Be Cut in 1929

This sum is due to be paid by next August.

The fund would be of a general nature, for Federal highway development. It has been favored by the American Automobile Association and other leading automotive organizations.

Several of the new highway bills in Congress have sought more funds for Federal aid road construction besides the $75,000,000 annually already appropriated. These funds, ranging from $50,000,000 to $100,000,000 a year, would be paid for the fiscal years of 1929, 1930 and 1931, if the bills became law.

Eight states would be benefited by special flood relief bills for the repair of highways damaged by the disastrous Mississippi and New England overflows. These bills call for a total of more than $14,500,000 and would be divided among New Hampshire, Vermont, Oklahoma, Missouri, Mississippi, Louisiana, Arkansas and Kentucky.

New highways and parts of existing main routes were specified in several additional appropriation bills, and one bill asked for $3,500,000 for the construction of roads in states having more than 5 per cent of public-owned land.

Eight bills wanted the construction of the long-awaited Pan-American highway running from the Canadian border to almost the tip of South America. Along with these went the bill, at first sponsored by former Senator duPont, for the construction of a new transcontinental highway of wider proportions than any now in existence.

Most important, outside the bills offered for adoption in the present Congress, was the resolution introduced by Senator Oddie of Nevada, calling for the appointment of a special congressional commission to investigate the toll bridge situation in the United States.

The American Automobile Association, with the silent backing of the U. S. Bureau of Public Roads, has been hammering at the evils that have arisen from private administration of toll bridges for some time. The number of such bridges has been increasing, despite all its efforts, and it is now waging a more bitter fight than ever against their continuance.

"A survey by the Bureau of Public Roads, made a short time ago," says the A. A. A., "revealed that there were 233 toll bridges in operation in the United States at the beginning of this year, 86 of which were built within the last 10 years. This means that the number of such bridges in operation has been increased nearly 60 per cent in 10 years."

The A. A. A. is not opposed to toll bridges operated by Government agencies for a limited period of time on a toll basis where they are to be ultimately free. It cites instances where the net operating income of privately owned toll bridges in one year exceeded the original cost.

"Predatory interests have selected strategic points on the important highways of the country and reaped great financial returns from bridges built under congressional franchises," it adds. "The move to expose the resultant conditions will be welcomed and supported by organized motordom."

1907 Packard Goes 420 Miles in 9'34

Two record breaking trips, either one of which might severely test the stamina of a modern motor car, have just been completed with a 1907 Packard in California. The ancient vehicle first was driven from Oakland to Los Angeles, a distance of 420 miles, without a stop, in nine hours and 34 minutes. Just a few days later with no repairs or adjustments the same car was driven from Los Angeles to Oakland and return, by a route which took it 1000 miles, without either the motor or car stopping once.

Gasoline was furnished the car while it was traveling at high speed, through an ingenious refueling device carried in another car, a Packard eight sedan. The refueling car, each time gasoline was transferred from one car to the other, made a flying coupling with a device much the same as the couplings used on railway cars. While the two cars were thus locked together fuel was pumped from one to the other.

The old Packard, a roadster and one of the famous Packard thirties, had been used for exposition purposes by Earle C. Anthony, California distributer for the Packard Motor Car Co. Considerable speculation had been indulged in about the ability of the 22-year-old vehicle on the open road.

Triplex non-shatterable glass will be standard equipment in all windshields, windows and division lights in the new Blackhawk and Stutz cars.

With this action, Stutz becomes the first car to make such glass standard equipment throughout the car. In the three years since non-shatterable glass was first manufactured in America, several different makes of cars have made it either optional equipment at added cost or standard equipment in windshields only. Stutz, which was the first car to use any type of safety glass, pioneers in making it completely standard.

ARDMORE, Pa., March 9.—The board of directors of the Autocar Co. truck manufacturer has declared a quarterly dividend at the rate of 8 per cent per annum on the preferred stock of the company, issued and outstanding, payable March 15, 1929 to stockholders of record as at the close of business March 5, 1929.

Olds Made 10,200 Cars in February

LANSING, Mich., March 9.—An increase of 95 per cent in the production and shipment of Oldsmobiles during February as compared to the same month last year is reported today by Oldsmobile officials. During the month just closed—the shortest in the year—10,200 Oldsmobiles were manufactured.

A further increase of more than 40 per cent over this record February production is scheduled for March, factory officials announce. During the present month approximately 14,500 Oldsmobiles will be produced to fill domestic and export requirements.

Retail sales are keeping pace with the greatly increased production, Oldsmobile officials report. During February these showed an increase of more than 90 per cent While domestic sales registered the greatest gains, exports showed an increase of 40 per cent over those of last February. This improvement in exports is in direct line with the great strides being made in the export field by the General Motors Corporation, of which Oldsmobile is a division. Last year General Motors exported double the number of automobiles it shipped abroad during the previous year.

Colleges Use Olds Cars.

Four universities use an Oldsmobile cut-away chassis in their technical courses for educational and demonstration purposes. They are the University of Michigan, Purdue, Massachusetts Institute of Technology and Ohio State University. The first Oldsmobile built 30 years ago is a permanent exhibit at the Smithsonian Institute at Washington, D. C.

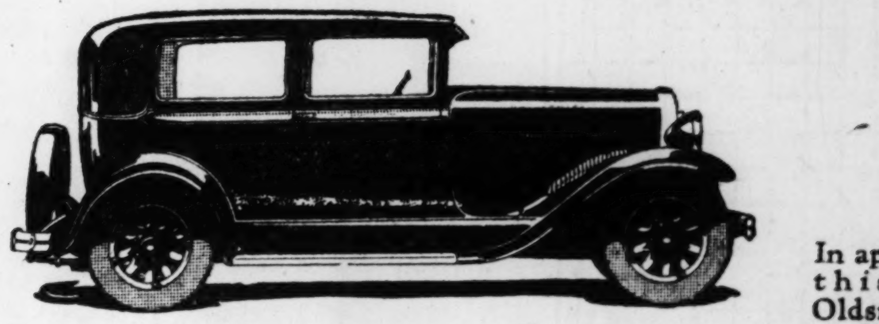
DESIGNED TO DO ALL THINGS WELL



It is a relatively simple engineering task to design an automobile that emphasizes only a few special qualities at the sacrifice of others. It is an engineering achievement, however, to combine all desirable qualities to an outstanding degree in a balanced whole. Yet that is exactly what Oldsmobile engineers have accomplished in the new 1929 Oldsmobile.

You have only to drive it to realize what brilliant all-round performance it provides. Its big high-compression engine now delivers 62 horsepower. And the piston pins are pressure-lubricated, a feature formerly characteristic of high-priced cars.

ART IN ADVERTISING $1000 PRIZE CONTEST

Entries for Missouri Pacific Competition Will Close on Afternoon of April 8.

A $1000 prize contest, for art in advertising, has been announced by the Missouri Pacific Lines. Contestants will submit their work at the Artists' Guild galleries the afternoon of April 8.

Five prizes are offered, the first $500, second $275, third $100, fourth $75 and fifth $50. The competition is open to all artists regardless of residence. The railroad's announcement states:

"The Missouri Pacific Lines have in mind stimulating interest among artists in St. Louis and vicinity in the production of better art suitable for railroad advertising. It is not the intention to seek a series of landscapes. While the artists are free to use landscapes in any way they see fit in this competition, it is the desire to foster the production of new and distintive art of any description that may be suitable for use in railroad advertising.

"Artists should keep in mind that most of the subject matter will need to blend itself into white and black reproduction in order to be of greatest value.

"Any medium may be used such as oil, water color, pen and ink, crayon, charcoal or pencil sketches. Only original drawings are eligible. The size is optional with the artist, but should not exceed 25 by 30 inches, except in the case of posters and similar subject matter, which cannot be treated on smaller canvases or paper.

"For the convenience of exhibition in the Guild gallery, all drawlings should be mounted on card board or other material, but must not be framed.

"Artists are not limited in the number of drawings, sketches or other work they care to enter. The artist's name and address should be on the back of each entry.

"All work submitted must be delivered at the St. Louis Artists' Guild, 812 North Union boulevard, on April 8, between 1 and 5 o'clock p. m.

Awards will be made by a jury selected under the auspices of the Guild and will be announced within two weeks after the exhibition opens.

"All work in competition must remain on public view in the Guild galleries for the period of the exhibition, which will be from April 13 to May 13. All non-prize winning picture ssent to the Guild will be returned to the artists at the close of the exhibition.

"The Missouri Pacific Lines will have the right to purchase before the same is offered to any other purchaser any piece of work entered in the contest, regardless of whether that work wins a prize or not.

"The two pieces of work winning first and second prize will become the property of the Missouri Pacific Lines, and the railroad also reserves the right to purchase, at a price to be agreed upon with the artist, any of the other prize winning subjects."

BRITISH BUSINESS FOR NAVAL PACT WITH U. S.

Financiers Want a Hand in Agreement on Freedom of the Seas.

By the Associated Press.

LONDON, March 9.—It is firmly believed in Lombard street, the financial heart of London, that President Hoover will favor a conference of maritime Powers to settle the century-old freedom-of-the seas problem.

Whether this assumption is right or wrong, it is a fact that leading British bankers, industrialists and economists are preparing for such a conference and are already giving considerable thought and discussion to the various ramifications of the question which has existed between the United States and Great Britain since before 1812. The consensus of this section of the British public undoubtedly will have large bearing on any policy ultimately adopted by Downing street.

No clew to official thought on the matter has been forthcoming in the press or in political speeches of Government officials and it is unlikely that the British attitude, beyond the Government's historic policy, will be declared until after a new Parliament has been elected.

Business Men Interested.

However, the financial and business men, who represent the section of of the public most vitally concerned in any international agreement regarding the rights of neutral vessels at sea during a naval war, is taking up the problem seriously. The Financial Times, in editorializing on the possibility of a conference on the subject of sea freedom, gives graphic proof of this.

"There is still time to ponder the situation," it says, "but too much stress cannot be laid upon the need that we should, without delay, begin to apply our minds to the question how we shall deal with a development which will be one of the consequences of the Kellogg pact."

A school of thought in the British financial world holds that the Kellogg pact renouncing war as an instrument of national policy means, that in any future naval war a neutral power might be forced into a position of considering whether or not one or more of the belligerent powers had broken the pact. The respective rights of neutrals and belligerents as to trading or interference with trade might depend on whether the war was unlawful or was, perhaps, concerted police action against a recalcitrant nation. This school holds that the Kellogg pact has introduced a new factor into the neutral trade question.

Wants Financiers to Help.

In the Financial Times editorial is a trenchant sentence which students of foreign affairs will probably ponder. "We cannot afford, even in a business view, to allow naval experts to deal solely with, and certainly not to settle, this matter."

Coming from an organ of such high standing as the London Financial Times, and representing such a large section of British finance and business, that sentence seems to be a declaration of the rights of the British business man to have a hand in settling the old problem between the United States and Great Britain rather than let the diplomats and naval experts handle the matter exclusively. It might be construed as a feather which shows which way the wind of public opinion is blowing.

The school of thought to which this article refers holds that it is the business of the naval experts only to know how to handle affairs when a war has actually broken out. This body of opinion feels that in the meantime it is the business and financial men of Great Britain who should have the largest say in the matter. And even they are not unanimous in their ideas on the most difficult of international problems.

All scouts with applications for any of these badges on file at headquarters should appear at these boards to be certified to receive their awards at the next Courts of Honor.

The Spring City Court of Honor, to award Eagle, Eagle Palm, Life, and Star badges to Boy Scouts throughout the St. Louis Council district, will be held at the Scottish Rite Temple, April 18. This court may also award other badges, usually presented at the district courts, if a suggestion to that effect is approved at a preliminary meeting of the court to be held next Friday.

Candidates for any of the above badges must have their applications on file at headquarters by April 1, headquarters announced, to allow the awards to be ready by the time of the court.

Troop 206 of the Ames School has organized an orchestra under the direction of Assistant Scoutmaster George Tubbesing, director of the troop drum and bugle corps. This corps is one of the leading scout drum corps in the city. Two scouts were awarded 10 points each for neatness at an inspection held at the last meeting, and every other scout in uniform was given five points. A talk on the Scout Oath and Law was given five new recruits by Deputy Commissioner J. P. Simons, who then presented them with their Tenderfoot cards. Troop 206 was one of the troops receiving a President's streamer at the recent Scout Circus.

North District.

Two new recruits joined Troop 3 of the Grace Holy Cross Church last week, 20 scouts, three officers and one visitor participating in a ceremony of welcome. The Bob White patrol was judged best in appearance in an inspection. A cooking contest, in which the entire troop will take part, is planned for the next meeting.

Scout Russell Carrow was awarded a bugle at the meeting of Troop 88 last week as a prize for selling more tickets to the Scout Circus than any other scout of the troop. The first hike of the season is being held today to a farm near Wentzville, to pass outdoor tests. The troop now has a membership of 57 scouts. Scout Arnold is now troop reporter.

An inter-patrol contest, in which the winning patrol will be awarded a pennant, has been started at Troop 149 of St. Paul's M. E. Church. The competition rules were explained by Scoutmaster Gus Weymann at the last meeting. A check-up of scouts, who are working on tests, was also made. Committeeman Alfred Pauley was a visitor at the meeting.

West District.

The interpatrol contest that has been running in Troop 30 of the Y. M. H. A. for some time came to a close last week, but the winning patrol has not as yet been announced. The contest was scored by awarding points for tests passed, attendance, winning games, patrol stunts and tickets to the scout circus sold. Fifty-five scouts were present at the meeting. An officers' council was held after the regular meeting.

A special Boy Scout program will be conducted by Troop 21 of the Ethical Society before the Sunday school of that institution this morning, both to demonstrate the inspirational side of scouting and to stimulate interest in the troop. An exhibition of scout work was held by the troop at the last meeting. In the assembly hall, which was decorated with patrol pennants, signal flags and scouting posters, were ranged displays of fire-by-friction sets, bird houses, knot boards and other handicraft articles. A scout ceremony was also held around an artificial campfire on the stage, set off by a lean-to shelter constructed from material used by the troop in the recent Scout Circus. Prof. Anton Hogstad of the St. Louis College of Pharmacy gave a talk on "The Indian Medicine Man."

South District.

A new scout, James Moody, joined Troop 57 of the J. M. Fournier American Legion Post No. 3, at the last meeting. Scout Moody introduced a new feature into the troop program by leading the scouts in group singing. Dr. Hawley of the Legion post gave a talk on first aid. The troop furnished several members as participants in the recent Scout Circus: Scout Jack O'Connor was one of the clowns, Scouts Smith, Stooky, Gerald McGuire, Bush, O'Connor and Werz took part in the First Aid to Animals event, and Scouts William Gold and Elgene Glaves were invested in the Tenderfoot ceremony.

A Campers' Saving Club contest between the patrols has been started at Troop 77 of the Tyler Place Presbyterian Church, by Scout Bernie Drumm, who has charge of the troop camping. To qualify for the contest, a patrol must have at least four scouts members of the Campers' Saving Club. The contest will end the week before the annual Patrol Leaders' Week-End Camp, and the leader whose patrol has the largest percentage of members of the club will be given $3 towards his fee to attend the camp. The leader of the patrol coming second will receive $2 toward the fee.

Troop 77 is also making plans for its annual banquet, which will be held March 15. The troop library, which was started only three weeks ago, now contains more than 100 books, and is still growing.

Four new patrol leaders have been elected at Troop 198 of the St. John's Church. They are A. Shorkey, Panthers, E. Brach, Beavers, D. Reynolds, Flying Eagles and G. Harrison, Wolves. Points will be awarded for attendance, attendance on time, bringing in new scouts, training new scouts, passing tests and merit badges, performing good turns, attendance at Sunday school or church, patrol projects and other activities. The largest number of points, 500, will be awarded for bringing in a new scout, while the smallest, 5, is for being present at a meeting, but coming late. The annual father and son banquet will be held April 10.

Events Leading to a Revolution

GRETTA PALMER

ON the passenger list of the new and resplendent liner Patrie was the name "M. E. Duval." M. Duval maintained a forbidding reserve during the entire trip; his meals were served in the salon of his suite de luxe, and his companion, an intelligent looking young man with a grim jaw, conveyed all necessary instructions to the stewards. Only the room steward ever came into direct contact with M. Duval, and the room steward immediately became a person of some importance for chubby, modest-looking M. Duval was not what he seemed. The chief purser had dropped a few remarks to certain intimates, and the reporters had not been quite discreet, so it was quite generally known that M. Duval was none other than the Prime Minister of one of the smaller Balkan countries.

The American papers had carried stories of his arrival in America a few weeks before, and his name had figured on the front page in interviews with various prominent American financiers. The country the so-called M. Duval represented was in a state of considerable unrest, and authorities on international finance would have it that the Prime Minster was attempting to revive the failing resources of the existent regime. Shortly afterwards, the Prime Minister was stricken with a fairly severe illness, and at about the same time, it became known that the aged King of his native land had died, leaving a minor heir. News of an imminent revolt in the capital soon followed, and the editorial writers of the Times suggested discreetly that the only possibility of avoiding a coup d'etat lay in the immediate return of the powerful Prime Minister to the scene of the rebellion. A day later the discreet M. Duval sailed on the Patrie.

M. Duval's suite was off the promenade deck, so his only public appearance during the voyage was when some lucky fellow-passenger had the good fortune to catch a glimpse of him crossing the small corridor that separated his cabin from the deck, leaning heavily on the arm of his constant companion, his secretary. To be sure, he would lie on deck for a few hours every day, but he was so swathed in blankets that only the tips of his walrus mustache were visible, and he generally seemed deep in slumber. He became a mysterious and rather thrilling figure to the other travelers on the Patrie. Certainly no one was more thrilled at the presence of such a notable than Molly Gage, not two months out of Miss Spence's School, and hailing originally from Cincinnati. Molly had been having a simply marvelous time on board, what with these divine Yale boys and that adorable man who looked exactly like John Gilbert. When her bosom friend, Jane Peters, suggested that the Balkan Minister was just the person to sign her autograph book, where the bright names of Jean Bororta, Madge Kennedy and Richard Halliburton already figured, Molly agreed that that was all that was need to make the trip a complete success.

However, M. Duval was distinctly unapproachable. To begin with, the forbidding looking secretary was always at his elbow. The last day out, Molly watched him like a hawk. Unfortunately he was already on deck when she came up at 8 o'clock, and the secretary was constantly with him, tucking him and leaning over to say a few words to him from time to time.

The boat was due to land at 4. Molly knew from her father who had it directly from the wireless operator that a stretcher had been engaged to meet the Prime Minister and carry him to the dock. It was most important, Mr Gage explained, for the Balkan statesman to proceed immediately home, no matter how serious his condition. Any news of his inability to deal with the situation would, ipso facto, ruin the chances of his party.

It was after noon already, and Molly noticed that the secretary had left the silent figure in the deck chair alone for a minute. He would probably be back very soon. When quite the cutest of the Yale boys actually dared her to go up to the old man and ask for an autograph, Molly felt that her honor was at stake, and amid an inordinate amount of giggling from the "crowd," she approached the formidable bundle of steamer blankets. Her friends saw her go up to "M. Duval" and speak to him. Then she leaned a little closer. As they watched she bent over and shook him. One of his arms fell out of his lap in a grotesque way and hung dangling. Molly looked at the half-hidden face again. Then she screamed.

"A-a-a-a-h!" cried Molly, "he's dead."

Several men rushed over. One deck steward hurried for the ship's surgeon, and another went for the secretary. The secretary appeared a minute later, and took in the scene at a glance. Before anyone could make a move, he pulled a revolver from his pocket, and shot himself through the temple.

Several people bent over his prostrate form, among them a little fat dark man, who unbuttoned the unfortunate secretary's waistcoat, loosened his collar and ministered to him in various ways, but all to no avail. The kindly little man finally left, shaking his head sadly. French detectives were rushed to meet the incoming liner, and a wire was sent to the authorities in the Balkan capital.

A hasty examination by the doctor sufficed to show that the Prime Minister had been dead for at least five or six hours, and that he had died of prussic acid poisoning.

The room steward, the only person on the liner besides the secretary, who had ever spoken to the Prime Minister, was hastily called and asked to tell what he knew. He deposed that the last time he had seen "M. Duval" had been when he had rung for him at about 11:30 the night before. The sea had been extremely rough, with a driving wind, so all the portholes on that side of the ship had been ordered fastened, and the iron covers battened down. M. Duval had complained of the stuffiness of the cabin, and the steward had explained that the ventilator system, although extremely modern, often failed to function properly. He had noticed that one of the two ventilators in M. Duval's cabin was not functioning at the time.

One thing had been unusual about the arrangements. The secretary usually slept in a cabin across the hall, but that night he had occupied the inside cabin between "M. Duval's" cabin and the corridor. A short hall led past this inside cabin to the Prime Minister's, and the secretary had slept with the door to the hall open, but the door to the Minister's cabin had been shut.

A telegram was found in one of the dead secretary's pockets, which was evidently in code. The translation was with it, however, and read:

"Imperative safeguard papers concerning loan. Believe revolutionary spy on board. Situation quiet now, but if opposition could produce loan papers in capital, revolution would ensue. Except under these circumstances, no danger."

The wire had been sent from the Balkan capital and had been received the afternoon before. The Balkan capital was communicated with, and the necessity of securing the papers continued. It seemed certain that the papers must be on the person of either the secretary or the Prime Minister, but a still more thorough search failed to reveal the papers, although it had been ascertained that they were fairly bulky. A complete search of the Prime Minister's suite was also fruitless. Someone immediately remembered the officious little short fat man who had bustled about the secretary's body before the police came.

A hasty inquiry revealed that he was a M. Georgesco who had occupied the suite de luxe, the grand state suite, which immediately adjoined the dead Prime Minister's suite which was of more modest size. The police burst into the suite de luxe which was a magnificent apartment, with elaborate modernistic wood panelling, a chandelier in the salon, and gorgeous modernistic hangings, but it was evident that the bird had flown. The boat had just docked, so the police hurried to the gangplank and intercepted their man just as he was stepping off. He faced them gaily enough claimed that he was a harmless exchange professor of chemistries who had come into money and absolutely denied any knowledge of the papers. The police searched him with a devastating thoroughness, for it had been made clear to them that the papers were of no use to the rival political party unless they were available at the capital, but they were not to be found. His luggage went through the same sort of inspection and with the same results. The papers were not there.

In the meantime a more complete autopsy of the Prime Minister had revealed that the unfortunate statesman had died not of direct prussic acid poisoning, but from inhaling the fumes of prussic acid. The police were distinctly puzzled to know how it had been administered to him. No one but the secretary had seen him from the time the steward left him alive at 11:30 until he was seen on deck. But if it were the secretary, why should he choose such a roundabout way as a poison gas? And why bring the body on deck?

The minister's cabin was subjected to another search. It was approached by a short corridor, to one side of which was the cabin where the secretary had slept the last night out. On one side of the cabin was the salon of the suite, which could also be entered only through the corridor which led past the room where the secretary had slept with his door open. On the other side was the suite de luxe, but there was no door in this wall, and no opening of any kind except the ventilators, which led only to a huge main pipe running along the ceiling, and connecting with a large number of cabins. The fourth side was pierced by a port hole, which was still fastened tight.

Georgesco was already a suspect, and under detention, so closer inquiries were made into his actions.

His steward was able to tell the police that he had brought on board with him a carefully packed box. It was about two feet by three, and when it was finally thrown out, one could see that it had contained several objects, evidently breakable, for it was full of excelsior. The objects were never seen. The box had been intact the night before the boat landed, and when the room was cleaned the day the boat docked, nothing was left but the box and the packings. The steward, being curious, had searched through the debris, and had finally been rewarded by finding a small glass tube.

No direct evidence was ever found against Mr. Georgesco, so he was finally released.

Some time later a certain noble compatriot of the murdered Prime Minister sailed for New York in the suite de luxe of the Patrie. A large delegation saw him off, for he was an important member of the revolutionary party. The personnel of the ship was a little nervous after its previous experience with Balkan statesmen, but nothing untoward occurred during the trip.

Curiously enough, however, the revolution finally broke out before the Patrie with her noble passenger reached New York.

"READ BIBLE IN YOUR BATH"

British Vicar Declares Tub Is Proper Place to Study.

By the Associated Press.

LONDON, March 9.—"Read your Bible in your bath." With these words the Rev. A. Wellesley Orr, vicar of St. Paul's Kingston Hill, opened an address at a conference on "Bible Criticism."

"The proper place to read the Bible is not in your study, but your bath," said Mr. Orr. "The best picture of last year was one of 'A Reading Girl'—a nude maiden reading a book. If it was the Old Testament the picture was a symbol, for the best way to read the Old Testament is in a metaphorically primitive state of nudity, when you have divested yourselves of the clothes of civilized knowledge and modern progress."

German on Radio for Alsatians.

STRASBURG, Alsace, March 9.—Radio fans will be forced to listen no longer to programs in a languafe not commonly understood. The French Government will set up a station to transmit programs in German and the local dialect as well as in French. Heretofore Alsatians have been limited to tuning in on German stations.

Orders Officials to Go to Church.

By the Associated Press.

BELGRADE, March 9.—King Alexander of Jugo-Slavia has decreed that all orthodox government employes must attend religious services regularly. The national ecclesiastic authorities have repeatedly lamented the scanty attendance at churches on Sundays and holidays, and recently appealed to the King to inspire his people to show more devotion toward the church.

To Save Janiculum Hill Oak.

By the Associated Press.

ROME, March 9.—The famous oak on the Janiculum hill overlooking Rome, under which the great poet Tasso dreamed and mused, and St. Philip Neri played with the children of the neighborhood, is about to be enclosed and protected by the park service of the Roman municipality. Stricken by lightning a short time ago, little remains of the tree so intimately associated with Italian literary and religious tradition.

TUBERCULOSIS DRIVE ON PROMPT DIAGNOSIS

"Early Discovery—Early Recovery" Is Slogan in Campaign Opening Friday.

Early diagnosis of tuberculosis as the hope of ultimately stamping out the disease will be emphasized during the second annual educational campaign to be launched in St. Louis by the Tuberculosis and Health Society, beginning Friday. The campaign, under general direction of the National Tuberculosis Association, will be conducted simultaneously in 1500 local and 48 State tuberculosis associations. Activities outside St. Louis and Kansas City in Missouri will be directed by Parent-Teachers' associations under the supervision of the Missouri Tuberculosis Association.

The purpose of the campaign is two-fold, according to an announcement by Dr. F. H. McKeon, medical director of the society.

First, to focus public attention on the danger signs of the disease and to urge yearly physical examinations; second, to stimulate renewed interest on the part of the medical profession in recognition of the early symptoms.

"Early Discovery—Early Recovery. Let your doctor decide," is the 1929 campaign slogan.

Billboard posters will be placed in the city to call attention to the danger signs of tuberculosis. Smaller posters will be placed in all municipal and private clinics, dispensaries, hospitals, high schools and factories.

Talks, meetings, motion pictures, distribution of pamphlets and radio broadcasting will also be used to gain public interest. More than 200 talks have been scheduled for factory, school and social groups in St. Louis. A motion picture demonstrating the proper procedure in tuberculosis diagnosis will be shown before senior classes in medical schools, nursing classes and groups of physicians. Insurance firms and other organizations have ordered 50,000 miniatures of the larger posters to be used as stickers on out-going mail.

Judging from the increased attendance at tuberculosis clinics held throughout the city, the 1928 Early Diagnosis Campaign was a success, Dr. McKeon declared.

NEW INTERNATIONAL TONGUE OF 500 WORDS EVOLVED

"Panoptic English" Can Be Learned in a Few Weeks, Its British Inventors Assert.

By the Associated Press.

LONDON, March 9.—Cambridge scientists and scholars have evolved an international language of 500 words.

English is the basic tongue chosen and it is asserted that people of all nations may pick up "panoptic English," as the reduced vocabulary is called, within a few weeks or months, instead of years. The entire vocabulary of "panoptic English" can be printed on the back of a single sheet of notepaper and seen at a glance, hence its name "panoptic."

In the new language the majority of verbs vanish and in their place are 12 "operators" or fundamental verbs which cover the essential movements of persons and things. They are come, get, give, go, keep, let, make, put, take, be, do and have.

Naples and Milan in Close Race.

By the Associated Press.

ROME, March 9.—The two major cities of Italy—Milan in the North and Naples in the South—are making a desperate race for the honor of being the largest city of this country. By a great spurt within the last several years Naples is right on the heels of Milan. Census totals just issued by the Government show that Milan, as of Jan. 1, 1929, had 942,114 inhabitants and Naples, 940,133.

The waiting list of eligible patients, all of whom will be treated on a benevolent basis, has shrunk to 150, the smallest in many months, it was stated.

Russia Split Into 5 Regions.

By the Associated Press.

MOSCOW, March 9.—The central executive committee has announced that Russia will be divided into the following five administrative areas Oct. 1, 1929: The Northern region centering in Archangel; the Western region with Smolensk as its capital; the Nijny Novgorod area with Nijny Novgorod as its center; the central industrial region with Moscow for its capital, and the Ivanovo-Vosnessensk region with its seat of government in that city.

How to Locate Broadcasts on Short Waves

Adapters Open New Field to Listeners — Two American and Two European Sations Should Be Picked Up When Tuning Is Learned.

Interest in reception of short-wave broadcasting of regular programs is growing steadily. While the regular short-wave listener devotes his time to so-called "amateur" transmission and reception, the marketing of short-wave adapters is opening a new radio field to increasing thousands.

With the proper adapter, virtually any receiver can be converted into a short-wave set, with loud speaker volume. Tuning a short-wave receiver is tricky and rather difficult, but, once a listener learns how to do it, he finds it interesting. He will find plenty of harmonics. Time and again he will wait for a station to sign, only to find that it is a "repeat" from some transmitter on the regular broadcast band. He will pick up local stations far more frequently than is enjoyable. He will encounter squeal after squeal that will develop into the rapid-fire chatter of code stations.

But eventually he will locate the two standbys—one of WGY's short-wave transmitters and one that carries programs from KDKA. These rebroadcast most of the chain and other features on WGY and KDKA. Time and again he will find reception of either of these stations astonishingly free from static or interference, many times as clear, or even clearer, than from stations in his own city.

Sooner or later he will pick up 5SW, the 5000-watt British station which is working with the Radio Corporation of America and the National Broadcasting Co. in an effort to make trans-Atlantic rebroadcasting of serious programs a daily fact. On three nights a week he will have a chance to tune in a powerful station in Holland. Reception of other short-wave stations in this country or abroad other than the ones mentioned is likely to be a matter of uncertainty and endless patience and enthusiasm.

Listeners in the St. Louis area will find that their best chance of picking up good programs on the short waves are from the following stations:

W2XAD and W2XAF, Schenectady; W8XK, Pittsburg, Pa; 5SW, Chelmsford, England, PCJJ, Eindhoven, Holland, and CJRX, Winnipeg, Canada.

W2XAD, Schenectady uses a wave length of 19.56 meters and is on the air as follows: Sunday: 4:30 p. m. to 9:30 p. m.; Monday: 1 p. m. to 2 p. m. and 4 p. m. to 10 p. m.; Tuesday—Silent; Wednesday—4 p. m. to 10 p. m.; Thursday—1 p. m. to 3 p. m.; Friday—4 p. m. to 10 p. m.; Saturday—silent. During the 1 to 2 p. m. periods on Mondays and Thursday one may happen to catch this station relaying NBC chain programs to 5SW, England.

W2XAF, Schenectady, uses the 31.48 meter channel and broadcasts as follows: Sundays—silent; Monday—4 p. m. to 10 p. m.; Tuesday—4 p. m. to 10 p. m.; Wednesday—silent; Thursday—4 p. m. to 11 p. m.; Friday—silent; Saturday—3 p. m. to 11 p. m.

W8XK, Pittsburg, Pa., broadcasts on 62.5 meters seven days a week as follows: Sunday—3 p. m. to 9:30 p. m.; Monday—1 p. m. to 2 p. m. and 7 p. m. to 9:30 p. m.; Tuesday—7 p. m. to 9:30 p. m.; Wednesday—7 p. m. to 9:30 p. m.; Thursday—1 p. m. to 3 p. m. and

Adapters Open New Field to Listeners — Two American and Two European Sations Should Be Picked Up When Tuning Is Learned.

Interest in reception of short-wave broadcasting of regular programs is growing steadily. While the regular short-wave listener devotes his time to so-called "amateur" transmission and reception, the marketing of short-wave adapters is opening a new radio field to increasing thousands.

With the proper adapter, virtually any receiver can be converted into a short-wave set, with loud speaker volume. Tuning a short-wave receiver is tricky and rather difficult, but, once a listener learns how to do it, he finds it interesting. He will find plenty of harmonics. Time and again he will wait for a station to sign, only to find that it is a "repeat" from some transmitter on the regular broadcast band. He will pick up local stations far more frequently than is enjoyable. He will encounter squeal after squeal that will develop into the rapid-fire chatter of code stations.

But eventually he will locate the two standbys—one of WGY's short-wave transmitters and one that carries programs from KDKA. These rebroadcast most of the chain and other features on WGY and KDKA. Time and again he will find reception of either of these stations astonishingly free from static or interference, many times as clear, or even clearer, than from stations in his own city.

Sooner or later he will pick up 5SW, the 5000-watt British station which is working with the Radio Corporation of America and the National Broadcasting Co. in an effort to make trans-Atlantic rebroadcasting of serious programs a daily fact. On three nights a week he will have a chance to tune in a powerful station in Holland. Reception of other short-wave stations in this country or abroad other than the ones mentioned is likely to be a matter of uncertainty and endless patience and enthusiasm.

Listeners in the St. Louis area will find that their best chance of picking up good programs on the short waves are from the following stations:

W2XAD and W2XAF, Schenectady; W8XK, Pittsburg, Pa; 5SW, Chelmsford, England, PCJJ, Eindhoven, Holland, and CJRX, Winnipeg, Canada.

W2XAD, Schenectady uses a wave length of 19.56 meters and is on the air as follows: Sunday: 4:30 p. m. to 9:30 p. m.; Monday: 1 p. m. to 3 p. m. and 4 p. m. to 10 p. m.; Tuesday—Silent; Wednesday—4 p. m. to 10 p. m.; Thursday—1 p. m. to 3 p. m.; Friday—4 p. m. to 10 p. m.; Saturday—silent. During the 1 to 3 p. m. periods on Mondays and Thursday one may happen to catch this station relaying NBC chain programs to 5SW, England.

W2XAF, Schenectady, uses the 31.48 meter channel and broadcasts as follows: Sundays—silent; Monday—4 p. m. to 10 p. m.; Tuesday—4 p. m. to 10 p. m.; Wednesday—silent; Thursday—4 p. m. to 11 p. m.; Friday—silent; Saturday—5 p. m. to 11 p. m.

W8XK, Pittsburg, Pa., broadcasts on 63.5 meters seven days a week as follows: Sunday—8 p. m. to 9:30 p. m.; Monday—1 p. m. to 3 p. m. and 7 p. m. to 9:30 p. m.; Tuesday—7 p. m. to 9:30 p. m.; Wednesday—7 p. m. to 9:30 p. m.; Thursday—1 p. m. to 3 p. m. and

Development of Independent Radio Stations Still Lags

WLW Held Back by Restrictions on Use of WSAI—WENR Unable to Realize Its Great Potentialities.

If the words "independent station" be interpreted as implying that a broadcaster prepares and transmits only its own programs, development of the great independents in this country seems to be lagging. Strictly interpreting the word, KWKH, Shreveport, La., is the only independent licensed to use super power. The great Chicago stations and WLW use chain programs, in some instances because advertisers are insistent, in others because of superior merit.

The idea that a few powerful stations naturally would come to specialize in certain types of programs seems to have been wholly mistaken. The broadcaster that will devote all its time to features designed to appeal wholly to the cultured is still far from serious consideration, to say nothing of realization. To many listeners there may be undeniable appeal in the thought of a station, using power enough to be audible throughout the year over a wide area, that would confine itself to the finer music, to artists and entertainers of highest type, to drama, lectures, scientific information for men and women of matured intelligence. But there is little or no appeal to station managements, despite the fact that such a station, operating with 50,000 watts in, say, Chicago, might attract and retaain as large an audience as any other single station catering to the general radio audience and dividing its attention with other broadcasters.

Management and operation of WLS, which did effective pioneer broadcasting for the rural districts, have been taken over by a farm journal. It remains the outstanding farm broadcaster. But it uses some chain programs. WGN, WMAQ and WBBM broadcast quite a few network features in addition to many excellent programs by Chicago artists and entertainers. WCCO, Minneapolis - St. Paul, which is managed by Henry Bellows, former Radio Commissioner, also uses a number of chain programs, although Bellows maintains that it should be allowed to chose from the various chain features those it believes best suited to its listeners needs and tastes.

Powell Crosley Jr. has been unable to carry out fully his plans to make WLW, at Cincinnati, the greatest independent. This is partially due to refusal by the Radio Commission to assign his 5000 watt station, WSAI, to exclusive use of a wave length. As WSAI must sign off at sunset in Fort Worth, Tex., it is unable to broadcast chain programs at night, as Crosley had planned. So WLW, instead of developing only its own features, must devote many hours to broadcasting the New York programs that listeners in its part of the country desire. If this situation can be changed, so that WLW can be freed for original program development, Crosley expects to attempt big things. Already WLW, with its "Ohio School of the Air," is undertaking an ambitious educational feature for school pupils of several states.

Insull Blocked in Plans for WENR

Crosley has recently expressed satisfaction over the record made by WLW since its 50,000 transmitter was permitted to be used.

"WLW has proven to be the greatest static eliminator ever conceived," Crosley said. "It has cut through static into all sections of the country where radio programs were formerly marred or obliterated.

"Although it has spread out two or three points farther on the dials of radio receiving sets within a few miles, it is sharp, clear, and readily separated from other stations on the adjoining channels within 50 miles of its location. There is no blanketing effect noticeable outside of a minute sparsely settled area almost directly under the antenna.

WLW has received hundreds of thousands of glowing letters of thanks for the service that it brings. In one day's mail 75 letters were received from Hawaii on one test program. WLW has demonstrated the value of higher power in broadcasting stations."

WCFL, station of the Chicago Federation of Labor, which has a 50,000 watt construction permit, is still fighting for a channel that it can use at night. Restricted to daytime broadcasting, it has no chain affiliations. Because of its operators' natural desire to speak for organized labor, is not likely to join a network.

As a matter of fact, the only simon pure independent station of superpower is KWKH, the Shreveport, La., broadcaster, whose wealthy owner, W. K. Henderson, is engaged in a fight to hold his national cleared wave against KVOO, Tulsa, Ok., owned by the wealthy Skelly interests. KWKH has a license to broadcast with 20,000 watts power.

WENR, Chicago, the station in which many observers see the greatest possibilities for cultural broadcasting, is virtually idle because of the limited time allotted to it on a sharing arrangement with WLS. This station has a 50,000 watt transmitter. It will have elaborate studios in Chicago's new opera house building. It is controlled by the Insull interests, and Samuel Insull is the dominant figure in Chicago's grand opera. Insull is credited with desire to broadcast programs of the highest quality. There has been reason to hope that eventually WENR would broadcast complete grand opera performances by the Chicago Civic Opera.

But the Radio Commission has been unable to put WENR on the air full time. For one reason, WGN, WMAQ, WLS and WBEM had made records that were held to entitle them, without question, to priority in assigning national cleared channels. WENR had not had an opportunity to make a record that would entitle it to preference over these four stations. It is impossible to give WENR full time, unless the number of national channels is materially increased. Pressure by the labor union interests of the country probably will cause WCFL to be considered for a cleared wave ahead of WENR. Also, WENR is labeled with the Insull public utility tag in the minds of official Washington. There is fear of public utility propaganda by radio.

So prospects are none too bright that Insull will be able to realize his plans for WENR—at least, not for some time to come.

The more important Pacific Coast stations are all linked into chains during the choice night hours. The large Eastern stations are all in networks. WGY and KDKA, for example, do considerable independent broadcasting —

'Small Timer' in Eveready Hour on KSD Tuesday Night

A ferry boat slides from its slip in New York and heads out over the dark Hudson. Standing almost alone on the stern is a pretty girl. Suddenly she steps overboard. The alarm spreads through the boat, which reverses its powerful engines as a man dives into the water and saves the drowning girl. The two are hauled aboard and the girl taken to a hospital in Jersey City.

This is the prologue of a dramatic radio presentation of the "Small Timer," to be broadcast in the Eveready Hour over KSD next Tuesday evening.

It all happens because an impresario doesn't think the pretty girl's voice quite good enough for opera. The man who rescues her from the river turns out to be a "small timer," a vaudeville entertainer playing the small houses 'way out yonder.

When the girl comes to in the hospital, the first thing she sees is a basket of flowers from her rescuer. He calls and they become friends. He persuades her that life is a question of viewpoint; that it is not only livable but can be happy. This happiness they find when they marry, form the vaudeville team of Merrill & Callahan and become troupers.

Their first appearance as a team is the occasion for the production of a whole vaudeville show in the Eveready Hour.

Jack MacBryde, himself in vaudeville, later star in several Broadway productions, has been engaged to take the part of the "small timer." Rosaline Greene, radio's first leading lady, will be the disappointed singer.

Vincent Lopez To Give Weekly KSD Concerts

Vincent Lopez and his orchestra will give a new broadcast series, to be known as the Chancellor period, over KSD, WDC, WOW, WDAF, WKY, KSTP, WFAA, KPRC, WOAI, KOA and KSL. These concerts are scheduled on Wednesday nights, from 9 to 9:30. The first will be given this week.

These broadcasts will originate in the New York studios of the NBC, but will go on the air only from KSD and other Middle West stations.

Lopez started as an $8 a week stenographer in the office of a milk concern in Brooklyn, N. Y., where he was born in 1895. His first engagements as a musician were as a piano accompanist at stag dinners and smokers.

In the course of his daily work, Lopez became friendly with Johnny O'Kane, a detective, who earned extra money singing at evening affairs. The detective and Lopez arranged a piano and vocal act, and before long Lopez's earnings increased from $8 to $35 a week as an entertainer. That ended his career in the milk business.

Five years slipped by and the young musician had come to the attention of Earl Carroll, producer of the annual spectacle, "The Vanities." Later he went on tour with Pat Rooney's musical play, "Rings of Smoke." For several years he was with leading Broadway productions, then crossed the Atlantic with his own orchestra. He proved a sensation in London at the Kit Kat Club, the Apollo Theater and the Hippodrome, and was presented to English society by the Duke of Marlborough.

Returning to America, his radio salutation, "Lopez speaking," has become one of the most familiar of microphone greetings.

WHO Seeking Full Time on 560 Kilocycles

Iowa Station Would Use 500 Watts on Channel Adjoining KSD's Rather Than Continue to Have 5000 Watts on Wave Shared With WOC.

WHO, Des Moines, Ia., has applied to the Federal Radio Commission for full time with 500 watts power on the 560 kilocycles (536 meters) channel, a notch on the dial below KSD.

WHO shares time with WOC, Davenport, Ia., on the 1000 kilocycles cleared channel, which formerly was used by KMOX. Inability to handle all the network programs offered, as well as Iowa programs, when sharing time apparently causes the WHO management to figure that 500 watts power on full time is better than 5000 watts on a shared wave length.

As will be recalled, WHO used 5000 watts on the 526 kilocycle channel at one time, then shifted channels with KYW and was on the 560 kilocycle wave until the new allocation went into effect Nov. 11 last, separating WHO from KSD, when the two stations were on adjoining channels, was something to boast of when accomplished by listeners living within two to four miles from KSD's transmitter.

It has been reported that WGY, Schenectady, N. Y., was using 200,000 watts power in experimental broadcasting after midnight. A telegram to Schenectady brought this reply: "WGY is not using more than 50,000 watts."

New Feature For Wednesday Nights on KSD

A new KSD feature that will be broadcast Wednesday of next week for the first time in the Middle West is the Happy Wonder Bakers, popular among listeners of the East for a long time. It will occupy the period from 7:30 to 8 o'clock Wednesday nights.

The program, planned to bring "melodious music," will be given by a noted soloist each week and a 26-piece orchestra under Frank Black. A male trio, with Will Donaldson at the piano, will sing.

The soloist for the first program over KSD will be Dolores Cassinelli, soprano, the screen star who attained fame as a singer almost overnight and has deserted the movies for the "mike."

The program is sponsored by the Continental Baking Corporation.

KWK and WIL Seek to Move Transmitters

Both St. Louis Stations Ask for 5000 Watts Power — KWK Wants to Take Antenna From West End Hotel Roof to Business Section.

WASHINGTON, March 9.—KWK and WIL have applied to the Federal Radio Commission for authority to move their transmitters and to increase power to 5000 watts.

KWK, which uses the 1350 kilocycle channel, now broadcasts with 1000 watts.

WIL, which is licensed to use 250 watts daytime and 100 watts at night, uses the 1200-kilocycle wave by arrangement with WMAY, which shares this channel with KFWF. WIL also has asked for permission to broadcast on a lower channel. Its transmitter is on the roof of the Melbourne Hotel.

The Federal Radio Commission has decided to hold a hearing on the application of KWK for a power increase. However, it is improbable that the hearing will be held before May as the commission has scheduled all the hearings it can handle until April 30.

KWK wants to move its transmitter from the Chase Hotel to the business section of St. Louis. It has not been the policy of the commission to permit stations of 5000 watts power to operate where they would blanket receivers as much as would so powerful station in the center of the St. Louis metropolitan area.

WIL wants to move its transmitter to a location not designated, but specifies that this site would be where the increased power, if granted, would not blanket too many receivers. That would mean

Trade Notes

George H. Niekamp has been elected president of the St. Louis Radio Trades Association. His election was unanimous at a meeting of the new Board of Directors. Other officers chosen were: Roy W. Haege, wholesaler, first vice president; Walter H. Dyer, manufacturers' agent, second vice president; Math Kaemmerer, dealer, third vice president; S. B. Singer, secretary, and W. A. Ward, treasurer. The vice presidents were elected presidents of their groups.

Niekamp, who is vice president of the Beck & Corbitt Co., said he planned to devote especial attention to a program aimed at making the radio retail business more profitable and substantial to dealers. He proposes that set policies for the retailers' guidance be made part of an association code, and that a monthly accounting service be sponsored by the association to educate retailers in basic business practices.

A goodly part of the retailers' problems are due to unreasonable demands by the public as to demonstrations and service calls, it is indicated by a survey made during the term of the retiring president, Julian E. Sampson. Niekamp said that a co-operative education program between association and dealer and between dealer and the public, would be worked out. A special meeting of the directors is to be called soon to take action on legislation, insurance credits and other matters.

William P. Mackle, executive secretary and show manager, was reappointed. It is probable that he will spend much of his time in the field the rest of the year on the proposed educational campaign. Karl P. Spencer was reappointed as legal counsel and John W. Snyder as auditor.

Julian E. Sampson was appointed as representative of the association on the Voice of St. Louis board, which operates KMOX.

H. Curtiss Abbott has been appointed sales manager of the radio division of the National Carbon Co., Inc., maker of Eveready receivers. He recently was general sales manager for the Crosley Radio Corporation, and before that was sales manager of the radio division of the Kellogg Switchboard & Supply Co. of Chicago. Last year, he was vice chairman of the National Electrical Manufacturers' Association.

The Arcturus Radio Tube Co. Newark, N. J., which has just announced a new AC screen grid tube and a 145 type of power tube with the capacity of a 210 but using only 250 volts on the plate, is preparing to expand production facilities. Arcturus makes only AC tubes. It has 5 plans at present, with a production of 14,000 tubes a day. Consolidation of plants and doubling of production is planned.

Arcturus AC detector tubes heat so quickly that a set is operating within 7 seconds after being turned on. A standard Arcturus be is reported to have set an endurance record by operating efficiently for more than 8000 hours.

Production schedules for Cunningham tubes for the first six months of this year are to equal the entire 1928 production. A 60 per cent sales increase came in 1928. New Cunningham warehouses have been opened in Dallas and Atlanta. More than 18 acres of floor space and 5000 workers are engaged in making Cunningham tubes.

Allen M'Quhae And Simmons In Concert on KSD Tonight

Boston Parade Recalled in Stetson Period—Blanch Ring in Afternoon Program—Chicago Orchestra to Play Suite by Bach.

Oley Speaks' modernistic song, "Rivets," is to be sung by Edward Wolter during the Peerless concert over KSD at 12:30 o'clock this afternoon. In detail the Peerless program is as follows:

Die Fledermaus .... Strauss
Orchestra

Daniel is pictured as the practical business genius of King Darius' kingdom, in a Biblical drama based on the story of Daniel in the lions' den, that is to be played over KSD at 1 o'clock. His executive ability has won the confidence of the King and the latter is inclined to overlook his habit of violating an ancient Babylonian law which forbade praying to any gods other than the official ones. Lesser satraps, whose expenditures have earned rebuke from Daniel, seek revenge by treacherously forcing Daniel's prayers to the true God upon the King's attention. How Daniel is thrown into the lions' den and how he discovers it to be a pale counterpart of another lions' den in everyday life, is told in the radio drama.

The "Gloria," from the "Twelfth Mass" of Mozart, is among numbers to be sung by the mixed quartet in the Twilight Voices concert over KSD at 4:30 this afternoon. The complete program follows:

Just a Song at Twilight .... Molloy
Rose of My Heart .... Lohr
Carissima .... Penn
Mixed Quartet.
Gloria, from Twelfth Mass .... Mozart
Mixed Quartet.
Still Wie Die Nacht .... Bohm
Paula Hemminghaus, Contralto.
A Night in Venice .... Lucantoni
Marjorie Horton and Judson House.
A Cuban Nocturne .... Lester
Good Night, Beloved .... Pinsuti
Mixed Quartet.

The parade that was part of the Boston's celebration of the 150th anniversary of the evacuation of the city by British forces will be recalled in the Stetson broadcast over KSD at 5 o'clock. As usual, the Weymouth Post band will furnish the music, which will include several thundering marches.

Blanche Ring, of vaudeville and musical comedy fame, is scheduled to make her radio debut on the Dictograph program at 5:30 this afternoon over KSD.

She is to feature songs she made famous as far back as the days of Tony Pastor's Music Hall, including "I'd Leave My Happy Home for You," "Bedelia," "Rings on My Fingers and Bells on My Toes," and "Yip-I-Yaddy-I-Aye," as well as selections from "The Midnight Sons."

Orchestra selections include "The Billboard March," "Hungarian Rag," "Nights of Gladness" waltz and "Forest Whispers." The quartet will sing songs popular a quarter of a century ago and "Miss Melinda's Wedding Day."

The second movement of Ernest Bloch's "America," an Epic Rhapsody, titled "1861-1865, Hours of Joy—Hours of Sorrow,"—is among music to be played by the Chicago Symphony Orchestra from 6 to 7 o'clock over KSD. Conductor Stock announces the following program:

Fingal's Cave .... Mendelssohn
America, an Epic Rhapsody .... Bloch
Suite No. 2, B Minor .... Bach
Flute Obbligato
Rondo Sarabande
Bourree I—Bourree II
Polonaise—Double
Minuet Badinerie
Capriccio Italien .... Tschaikowsky

William Dorn, xylophone player, is to be featured soloist in the Capitol Family broadcast over KSD from 7 to 8 o'clock.

WIL Entertainers In Free Theater Show on March 16

A theater party, free to the public, is to be given by WIL in the St. Louis theater from midnight next Saturday, March 16, until 4 a. m. William Ellsworth, director of the station, said the show was to be given because of listeners' interest in seeing the artists and entertainers that broadcast from WIL.

Ellsworth said also that nearly 200 persons who had broadcast over WIL would appear at the free show, and that some 20 different acts would be staged.

All of the WIL announcing staff will be on the stage, including George Wood, recently with KWK and formerly on the staff of KOIL.

Among those announced to take part are Jack Coleman; Bob Williams, "Tommy and Bobby," The Personality Girls, Bob Hebron, The Jolly Three, Schuyler Alward, vibraphone player; Carlos Camacho, The Sporleder Little Symphony, Silver Kings, Hauser and Bothe, Brown and Grant, Vincent Smith, Elmer Willrich, the WIL Ensemble and others.

7 p. m. to 9:30 p. m.; Friday—7 p. m. to 9:30 p. m.; Saturday—7 p. m. to 10 p. m.

W8XK, Pittsburg also broadcasts on 25.4 meters seven days a week as follows: Sunday—10 a. m. to 11 a. m. and 1 p. m. to 9:30 p. m.; Monday—1 p. m. to 3 p. m. with relays to 5SW; and 4 p. m. to 9:30 p. m.; Tuesday—4 p. m. to 9:30 p. m.; Wednesday—4 p. m. to 9:30 p. m.; Thursday—1 p. m. to 3 p. m. with relays to 5SW, England and 4 p. m. to 9:30 p. m.; Friday—4 p. m. to 9:30 p. m.; Saturday—4 p. m. to 10 p. m.

W2XE, which is the short wave transmitter for WABC, key station of the Columbia chain, broadcasts on 58.5 meters seven days a week, from 6 p. m. to 11 p. m.

5SW, Chelmeford, England, broadcasts on 25.53 meters, as follows: Sunday, silent; the other six days of the week, 6:30 a. m. to 7:30 a. m. and 1 p. m. to 6 p. m.

PCJJ, powerful Dutch station, uses the 31.2 meter channel on Monday, Tuesday and Thursday, from 5 p. m. to 8 p. m.

CJRX, Winnipeg, broadcasts on 25.6 meters seven days a week, from 4:30 p. m. to 9:30 p. m.

Radio stations in this country will be dwarfed in comparison with one that the Japanese Government hopes to put into active commission in May. This transmitter is to use 1,000,000 watts power, and will be 20 times as powerful, theoretically, as WLW, Cincinnati, or WENR, Chicago.

However, as it will be used for Japanese Government and commercial messages and will operate on a short wave channel, it will not be picked up by ordinary broadcast receivers, unless adapters are used. Reception of the Japanese station by short wave listeners should become a commonplace.

The new station is to be used principally to maintain communication with Europe. It is undergoing tests and is understood to have maintained contact with European cities. But the training of a staff to man so powerful and complicated a transmitter is a serious task.

Dr. Cadman Speaks at 3 P. M.

Dr. S. Parkes Cadman is to speak on "The Brief Day and the Coming Night" in his broadcast at 3 o'clock this afternoon. He will conduct the usual complete religious service with music by the Cathedral Chorus of 30 men under William Armour Thayer.

ATWATER KENT RADIO

This radio tells the whole truth!

If you go to a broadcasting studio and watch an orchestra in action you will see not one but several microphones. They are so placed that as the music goes on the air it is perfectly balanced.

This is music as the studio sends it to you. And this is music as you hear it at home through the Atwater Kent Electro-Dynamic. Each instrument has its chance!

That tuba player, faithfully sounding his oom-pah—that drummer, rolling his kettles—that 'cellist, painting his part of the tone picture in splashes of purple—that frolicking piccolo player—and so on through the whole orchestra—they're real. The bass is just as true as the treble, because every tone of music comes to you in its proper relation with every other tone.

Listen a moment to this new Atwater Kent. Notice that its voice is natural and rich at any volume. Enjoy the bass without the boom. Play with the FULL-VISION Dial—see how simple and accurate everything is. Price? You can pay more—but why should you?

On the air—every Sunday night—Atwater Kent Radio Hour—listen in!

Pittsburg to Tell Its Story to World In KDKA Broadcasts

Series of 14 Special Programs Arranged to Exploit City Through Radio.

An elaborate series of 14 programs is to be broadcast over KDKA as a result of Pittsburg's decision to tell its story to the world by radio. The programs will go out over the short wave transmitters of KDKA as well as over the main broadcast station.

While the chamber of commerce is sponsoring the series, most of the cost will be borne by citizens and the city government, which arranged to give the opening program last night.

Each of the programs is to begin with "Beautiful Dreamer," by late Stephen Foster, Pittsburg composer of many "Southern songs."

The Fort Pitt Civic Orchestra; The Pittsburg Chamber of Commerce male chorus, and Mme. Eeln Glen-Campbell, soprano, are to take part.

KMOX Has New Announcer.

J. Francis Laux, until recently sports announcer and studio director for KVOO, Tulsa, Ok., has joined the KMOX staff as chief sports announcer. He will be in charge of the KMOX microphone every night after 7 o'clock. Laux, who is 31 years old, was with KVOO for three years.

Largest Studio in NBC System Put in Service in Chicago

Chicago Symphony Orchestra Uses It for Its Sunday Concerts Over KSD.

A new studio, just finished in the tower of the Capitol Building in Chicago ,for the Chicago division of the National Broadcasting Co., is the largest in the entire NBC system. It is the third studio maintained by the NBC in that city, and was made necessary by the increasing number of large orchestras playing in Chicago for NBC network broadcasts.

The Chicago Symphony Orchestra plays in this studio for its Sunday evening concerts over KSD and allied stations. It also is used for radio concerts by the Studebaker Champions, 30-piece novelty orchestra under Jean Goldkette; Williams Syncomatics, 25-piece novelty orchestra under Josef [illegible]ner, and the Skellodians, another 25-piece novelty concert orchestra, unuer A. Leon Bloom.

The studio is 45 by 75 feet with a ceiling 40 feet high at the center. Microphones and drapes are placed so that the full tonal value of the big orchestras are faithfully reproduced even to the most attenuated notes.

At the rear of the studio is a pipe organ and at the front the control booth, where Charles C. Grey, control supervisor, sits at the board regulating the volume and flow of the music. He is the man largely responsible for the fine reproductions of the music from the Chicago Civic Opera productions and Chicago Symphony Orchestra concerts this winter. Were he to lax his attention for even a minute the entire effect of a master composition might be spoiled for the radio listener.

The control booth in which he sits is sound proof, opening on the studio through sound proof windows of triple glass with dead air space between. From there the lines run to the main plant room of the NBC Chicago studios, 100 North Michigan avenue, where other engineers are constantly on duty. The two control rooms are in communication by telephone and telegraph.

Hoover Expected To Block Politics In Radio Control

Indications Said to Be That He Favors Long Terms for Board Members.

By THOMAS STEVENSON.

WASHINGTON, March 9.—President Hoover is expected to block the attempt of politicians to control valuable radio concessions.

Station licenses, including broadcasting, represent one of the richest plums toward which political hands have been stretched for a long time. But the politicians could not quite reach it. By action of the last Congress they hope they have a big stick with which they may shake down the prize.

The action to was limitation of the terms of offices of the Radio Commissioners to one year.

A broadcasting station cannot operate without a license from the Federal Government. The Government, through the Radio Commission, may specify whether a station may broadcast; its hours of operation, its power and the wave length to be used.

A station has little value without a license. With a good license, for a good wave, plenty of power and unlimited time, it may have a value anywhere between $100,000 and $1,000,000.

The Radio Commission, through its licensing authority, can make a big station look mighty little, or a little station appear very big.

The same is true of commercial radio telegraph stations. Broadcasting is only a small part of the radio structure, and the commission holds the entire situation.

It is not hard to understand the reasoning of the politicians. If it were possible for them to control the members of the Radio Commission, they could get a rich haul. The licenses would make splendid prizes. Stations that supported them could be rewarded and those that opposed them punished.

But the hitch thus far has been that the members of the Radio Commission seem to have been more interested in public interest than in the ambitions of the politicians.

It would be unfair and untrue to say that all support for the limitation provision was predicated on political grounds.

But just the same it has provided the politicians with a stick with which to threaten members of the Commission.

There is every indication that President Hoover may try to remove the radio commission from political influences by giving the members long term appointments.

The second scene will bring Americans on the scene. The discovery of gold at Sutter's Mill brought the gold rush of '49, and Americans by thousands were going to the new "El Dorado."

Last will come modern California.

Centralized Radio In Chicago Hotel

First Installation of the New R. C. A. System for Wholesale Reception.

The first hotel installation of the new centralized radio system of the Radio Corporation of America is being installed in the Allerton Hotel in Chicago, providing individual radio reception through wall-type speakers to guests in 887 of 990 rooms.

Other hotels have experimented with radio service in guest rooms. Head-phones, plugged into a baseboard switch and movable loudspeakers connected in the same manner, have been installed in several hotels. The Allerton, however, is the first important hotel to adopt the standard centralized equipment.

The present installation comprises a central receiving unit with one, two, three or four "channels," each tuned to a different program; a powerful amplifying unit and a number of automatic controls. The equipment of this central receiving station is on a switchboard.

A distribution system takes the programs to all parts of the hotel. Headphones or speakers are installed in each room. The speaker has a manual volume control as well as a channel selector switch which permits the occupant of the room to choose programs. Each receiving channel comprises a monitoring speaker, by which the operator may adjust both the receiver proper and the amplifier at will.

A time switch starts and stops programs automatically as designated. Once the channel receiver has been tuned to a given station, its controls are locked. There are separate panels for receiving and amplifying units, as well as a distribution panel for regulating the output. Additional power amplifying units may be added to compensate for increase in the number of speakers.

DANDRUFF
A Sure Way to End It

There is one sure way that never fails to remove dandruff completely and that is to dissolve it. This destroys it entirely. To do this, just get about four ounces of plain, ordinary liquid arvon; apply it at night when retiring; use enough to moisten the scalp and rub it in gently with the finger tips.

By morning, most if not all, of your dandruff will be gone, and two or three more applications will completely dissolve and entirely destroy every single sign and trace of it, no matter how much dandruff you may have.

You will find, too, that all itching and digging of the scalp will stop instantly, and your hair will be fluffy, lustrous, glossy, silky and soft, and look and feel a hundred times better.

You can get liquid arvon at any drug store and four ounces is all you will need. This simple remedy never fails.

DR. VOLLBEHR GIVES RARE PICTURE TO U. S.

Collection of 20,000 Old Woodcuts Presented in Memory of Carl Schurz.

Dr. Otto H. F. Vollbehr, whose famous collection of 3000 incunabula, or fifteenth century books, was exhibited in St. Louis in 1927, and was offered to the city on terms which were not met, has donated to the Library of Congress, in Washington, the Schreiber collection of 20,000 woodcuts from early illustrated books. Mme. Vollbehr was co-donor of the collection.

The gift, announced several days ago, was made as a commemoration of the 100th anniversary of the birth of Carl Schurz, German-American editor, Senator, Cabinet member and civil service reformer. The Schurz centenary was Saturday, March 2, but is still being observed, and the St. Louis observance will be a dinner at Hotel Jefferson Tuesday night.

Of the collection given to the Library of Congress, it was said in New York that its value could not be estimated in monetary terms.

Cuts Clipped From Books.

The collection clipped from early books, represents a history of woodcutting from the fifteenth to the eighteenth century and assembles material which otherwise probably would take years to examine. It is doubtful if a similar collection could be assembled for millions of dollars today, because the value of the fifteenth and sixteenth century books, even defective copies, has increased greatly. Dr. Vollbehr obtained the collection of woodcuts from Prof. W. Schreiber of Potsdam.

Dr. Vollbehr explained that he bought the collection to save it from dispersion.

"I believe," he added, "that collectors are not the owners of works of art; they are merely guardians for the people. That is why I give it to the Library of Congress. I want my gift to be to the whole United States."

This is Dr. Vollbehr's second valuable gift to the Library of Congress. In December, 1927, he and Mme. Vollbehr presented their collection containing 10,800 printers' marks illustrating the progress of printing since the fifteenth century. Dr. Vollbehr said he stood ready to present to the national library half of his famous collection of fifteenth century books, including his copy of the Gutenberg Bible on vellum, on condition that some other donor present the value of the other half.

Offered Books to St. Louis.

He made a similar offer in St. Louis in June, 1927. He said he would make over the collection of fifteenth century books to any institution in St. Louis or the Middle West, where they could be kept as a collection, if any individual or group would share the gift with him by paying him $1,500,000, one-half his estimate of the collection's value. He wished the collection to be known as the Vollbehr collection, but said the donor might attach his name to the donation in any way desired. No individual or group was found to take up the offer.

Dr. Vollbehr said he had paid $2,500,000 for the books over a period of 18 years, and that the collection, by agreement of collectors, was worth much more as a whole than the total of its individual items. He said he had received offers from dealers as high as $2,000,000, but would not sell to anyone who would break up the collection, and thus render his life work futile.

CULTURAL PROGRAM GAINS HEADWAY AMONG MEXICANS

Sports, Theatricals, Good Literature in Portes Gil's Campaign to Elevate Masses.

By the Associated Press.

MEXICO CITY, March 9.—President Portes Gil's campaign for cultural enlightenment of the masses is entering into a phase of intense activity. His announcement a few weeks ago that he intended to educate the people to a higher moral and intellectual level was followed by rapid and methodical development of a working program and today sports, high grade theatricals and good literature are being placed within the reach of everyone.

Establishment of recreation grounds and athletic fields in the crowded slums of Mexico City is going ahead steadily and publication of the "mural newspaper," a huge poster carrying pictures and articles of educational value, already has been started. The first edition has just come off the press and will be distributed throughout the country.

A new feature in the cultural advancement scheme has been made known. Theatrical presentations, written and acted by Mexicans and portraying the humor and tragedy of Mexican life, are to be sponsored by the Government and put within reach of the poorer classes by means of low admission prices and use of transportable theaters which will be moved from one section of the city to another. These mobile theaters, called "carpas," are no novelty, for they have been a common sight in the capital for years, although until now the class of entertainment afforded in them has been of an inferior grade. The "carpa" resembles an American mobile election booth.

A "popular theater" section is to be created in the Government of the Federal district, which takes in Mexico City and the surrounding towns, and the literary genius of the country will be invited periodically to offer play manuscripts on a competitive basis.

Witchcraft and Magicians

The Tyler-Craig Production of "Macbeth" Comes to the Shubert Tomorrow Night While Thurston and His Tricks Hold the Stage at the American—These Two Offerings Likely to Be the Last of the Current Season in the Two Local Playhouses Which Have Shown Some Fine Successes During the Past Few Months.

AFTER a rather short but exceedingly profitable season of excellent attractions, in the main, the two St. Louis legitimate theaters are nearing the end of their year. The George Tyler-Gordon Craig production of "Macbeth," which begins a week at the Shubert tomorrow night, is likely to be the final offering at the Grand avenue house, although there is some talk of a return engagement of "The Desert Song" during April. Down at the American, where Thurston, the magician, begins a two weeks' stay this afternoon, no other attractions are in sight.

The cast presenting "Macbeth" is headed by Florence Reed, last seen here in the unsavory "Shanghai Gesture." She, of course, is Lady Macbeth. Lyn Harding, the Welsh actor, a Shakspearean of wide experience, will be seen in the title role. William Farnum, famous on the classic stage long before he became the highest salaried motion picture star in the world, will play Macduff. Fred Eric appears as Banquo and Douglas Ross, who has staged "Macbeth," will play King Duncan. Prominent in the cast are Percy Vivian, Olive Oliver, Leonard Mudie, William P. Carleton, Bryan Hughes, Harold Hartsell, Burford Hampden, Gerald Lingard, Arthur Barry, Harold Thomas, Tom Manning, Gloria Kelly, George Macready and others, including a numerous company of trumpeters, pipers, dancers, troubadours, minstrels, tumblers and singers.

The scienic treatment of this novel "Macbeth" is by Gordon Craig, the Continental actor-artist, and regarded as the father of the modern theater on the side of stage design.

"MACBETH" is said to be the most notable Shakspearean production ever staged in America. The company carries three baggage cars of scenery, 100 people and tours the country in a special train. The sets are designed with a view to stressing the supernatural elements of the tragedy. The primitive Celtic colors are employed and special music based upon the traditions of the eleventh century has been written.

More than one good old "Macbeth" tradition is cast aside. The witches are masculine. Lady Macbeth, in the mind of Douglas Ross, the director, is conceived as a sort of arch-witch. The witches' cry of "Hail!" as Macbeth is swept to destruction, recurs throughout the play as a leit-motif. Chorals, dirges, war-songs are as integral a part of the play as the light effects.

"Macbeth," with the same company and production that will be seen in St. Louis, had a successful engagement in New York, where its run was twice extended, and on the present tour has repeated that success in Chicago, Cleveland, Detroit, the Twin Cities and Kansas City.

ST. LOUIS is a favorite stamping ground for Thurston, who will bring his bag of tricks to the American Theater, starting off with a matinee this afternoon. His two weeks here are likely to be the banner ones in his long tour of the country—his twenty-third annual trip across the country, incidentally.

His company is a large one, numbering 35 assistants. To make up his program three 60-foot baggage cars are needed for the paraphernalia, animals and effects, used in the hundred and one mysteries that include: "The Million Dollar Mystery," "Iasia," and "The Mystery of the Whippet." In "Iasia" a young woman actually vanishes in the dome of the theater, over the very heads of the spectators. The "Million Dollar Mystery" is a European magical illusion. In the "Mystery of the Whippet" a real automobile, loaded down with girls, is flipped out of existence on a fully-lighted stage, with a mere wave of the necromancer's hand. Another new illusion this season is "The Magic Box Revue," a sort of Ziegfeldian Follies with a Thurstonesque twist. Then there is the "Lady or the Lion?" in which a tawny denizen of the African jungle and a pretty young woman exchange places in a cage, and many other new and old tricks.

The new feature of the Thurston program this season is the debut of the magician's daughter, Jane, who will be seen in a magic act with her father and a dancing act of her own. Jane Thurston is the "best-known-never-seen" stage girl in America. Since her birth her father has never given a performance in which he has not mentioned Jane. He has trained her in magic and Ned Wayburn in dancing. And now she is co-starring with her dad, like the famous musical comedy team of Fred and Dorothy Stone.

STRESS has been laid on the fact that the current "Macbeth" production is not strictly to be regarded as Gordon Craig's, but the scenery is avowedly his, and it has been generally felt that no few of his ideas prevail. Ground is now lent to this belief by a letter of detailed suggestion written by him to Margaret Anglin at a time when Miss Anglin still expected to play Lady Macbeth, the part since assumed by Florence Reed. It contains Mr. Craig's ideas on the character, and, by inference, his notions on several matters relating to acting and play production.

"To me, it seems that Lady M. could not be in a room with a group of people without they all began to live with eight times their usual intensity—every one, when she came in, glowed—and, as she went, they went out like electric lights dying down," Mr. Craig wrote.

"She was the center of a BIG social circle of people—as it is on the stage we see her the center of a circle of five handmaidens—two butlers, a messenger and a lot of awkward spear bearers—and what is that for us?"

"A second thing: It seemed to me that, although the center of it all, she never appeared in the center—she hugged the sides, her eyes alone focus the center and there she saw to it, stood her husband—a man with some poetic fancy in his speech, but a quite dull and awkward, melancholy sort of creature—with a knack of strength—physical.

"The play seems to me always to suffer in representation because we see two center figures.

"I would have it—if possible—one center dull and the other always hugging the walls vivid.

"Before five minutes our minds would be asking this man — this boor—what is he? What's he so much in evidence for? Why is he here at all?—and before another

BEHIND THE SCREENS

Close Ups of The Stars

By Margaret Post Niemeyer

On the Lots Out in Hollywood

HOLLYWOOD, March 9.

THERE is great appeal in the youth, beauty and earnestness of Hollywood and as diminutive Alice White perched on the edge of a stool beside me at the studio a few days ago she seemed the very embodiment of all these things. In a creamy vested green velvet dress with shoes to match, a fluff of blond hair peeping from under her close-fitting grey hat, and a triple string of pearls clasped about her slender throat, she was most gracious and unassuming as she told me about work in the talkies, and how much more time it took to perfect a part than in the silent picture.

Alice has great dark eyes and the heavy fringe of the mascaraed lashes made them look like deep wistful pools and very childlike. "When working in the silent pictures," said Miss White, "after a hard day's work at the studio I would go home to rest and to bed"—somehow it seemed hard to imagine that, for she appeared almost too vital to ever need sleep—"but now I have to sit up often all night studying lines, and even if they are clever, wise-cracking lines they have to be learned.

"And that is not all, for a "Broadway Baby" is supposed to dance and sing as well as wisecrack and as the star of "Broadway Babies," Miss White has to do both. She admitted she was quite terrified about making the song records, and didn't get much comfort from watching the expression of her director's face when she was doing so, but when the "play-back" was heard, she saw first a surprised and then actually a pleased expression steal over the director's countenance, for her voice had, after all, registered quite creditably in the approved "blue" manner.

They were "shooting" the dressing room of a company of chorus girls with its customary long table down the center, and mirror the entire length and flanked on both sides by stools. Most of the girls were dressed and leaving the theater, making a frightful noise with their laughing and wise-cracks. A few girls, half dressed, were in the background and the dressing table was a confusion of powder, cleansing cream, rouge, mascara and endless trinkets of personal adornment, while under it lay slippers of every color and description just where they had been carelessly kicked off.

Alice White is, of course, Broadway's leading "Baby," but she has two special girl friends who are admirably portrayed by Sally Eilers, a Baby Wampus star, and Marion Byron, otherwise known as "Peanuts," because of her diminutive size. Sitting in front of the set, asleep in his chair, overcoat crumpled in lap and glasses sliding down his nose was Charles Delaney, the leading man. Evidently, even being leading man with as an adorable a creature as Alice palls when it is professional, and one is dead tired both mentally and physically from rehearsals.

Big, powerful Fred Kohler, who did such excellent work with George Bancroft in "Underworld," was sitting by me watching, and during one of the interims when we might talk he recounted an amazing incident which occurred while making a shot a few days ago. The scene showed a poker game in session, and to give the real atmosphere to it, several professional gamblers had been engaged. A close-up was required showing Kohler holding four "Queens," so Kohler called out to the camera man, "Wait a minute, I've got to have four Queens. Whereupon a professional, shifting his cigar to the corner of his mouth, said, "All right, I'll deal them to you," and picking up a well shuffled pack he nonchalantly proceeded to do so. Kohler gasped in astonishment and declared, "I'll never sit in a game with you outside a picture."

Bodil Rosing, an exceedingly clever character actress, and incidentally mother-in-law of Monte Blue, came up and joined us. As mistress of the wardrobe in the picture, she had on a queer, old-fashioned costume which in no way detracted from her air of natural distinction. Giving one glance at the aforedescribed dressing room, she declared she was truly thankful she was only playing wardrobe mistress to that disorder.

Today I lunched with lovely Nancy Carroll who is to play the lead in the moving picture version of "Burlesque." Miss Carroll seems admirably suited for the part created by Barbara Stanwyck—Mrs. Frank Fay—in the stage production of the same name, for Miss Carroll is in many ways quite like Miss Stanwyck and incidentally is a good friend of hers and said she saw Mr. and Mrs. Fay in a sketch together at the Palace Theater in New York recently. Nancy has the same beautiful red hair, wonderfully expressive eyes, and much of the same sweet, charming simplicity of her stage model. In a cream and green jersey frock, a string of carved jade accentuating the cream whiteness of her skin and giving an added luster to her hair, Nancy was most amusing as she recounted the making of the song test for "In the Gloaming" which she sings in "Burlesque." On that particular day Miss Carroll was feeling very low, due to not getting a part she wanted or something, and consequently as she sang there was a little catching, half sob in her voice, and at the finish of the song the listeners blew their noses, wiped their eyes and gave her the contract. Hal Skelly, who played opposite Miss Stanwyck in the stage production, will play the same role in the picture at which Miss Carroll expresses great pleasure. Nancy insists she will have to lose a few pounds to play this part, and though I could see no real need for it she insisted she must, and contented herself with a luncheon of a virtuous looking, unadorned pineapple salad.

O. P. Heggie, who took John Drew's place a year or so ago in the all-star stage revival of "Trelawney of the Wells," stopped to speak to us a minute before going over to join other friends for lunch, and John Cromwell, the director and star of New York's stage production of "The Racket," and who has just completed the direction of Miss Carroll and Charles Rogers in "Close Harmony" also came up for a word with Nancy, who seems exceedingly popular, and not without reason.

Walking in the studio grounds later I met tall, distinguished-looking—and he is all of that in real life—George Bancroft, star of "Underworld," "The Wolf of Wall Street" and many other pictures. He has a quiet, delightful manner of speaking and expressed a desire for a little of the winter weather. I had come so far to escape. While talking we were joined by David Newell, who was Ethel Barrymore's leading man in "The Kingdom of God." He has only recently come to Hollywood and has just finished his first picture. "The Hole in the Wall." He is tall, unusually handsome and as he screens remarkably well, the movie fans will probably soon add another idol to their lists.

Emil Jannings, always interesting and agreeable to meet either as just Mr. Jannings or in a character role, is now engaged in making a picture called "Betrayal" which has a Swiss Alps locale. A few days ago I met Mr. Jannings attired in the picturesque and colorful Alpine attire, and a massive silver watch chain stretched across his waist-coat. While we stood talking he drew out the watch and chain for me to examine, telling me at the same time in his German accented English, that it was one he had selected to wear with his first watch when attending school in Zurich as a very little boy, but finding it far too heavy for the little silver watch his father had sent him, he regretfully put it away. And now, after all these years it has come into its own and is to be worn as a part of his wardrobe in an absolutely technically correct Swiss picture.

Last Sunday afternoon Camilla Horn, the vivacious and friendly little German girl who came to this country to play as leading lady with John Barrymore in "Tempest," gave a tea at her picturesque beach home which juts out on a wind-swept promontory at Palisades del Rey. It was a 40-mile drive, but worth it.

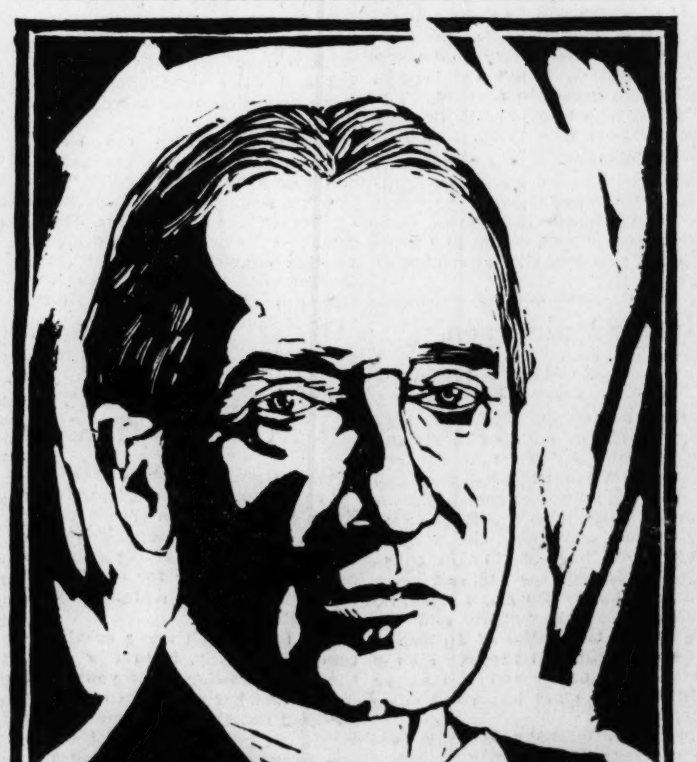
As we came up the steps the door flew open and Camilla herself appeared, smiling cordially, and calling, "Come in, darlinks, take off your coats" and began trying to help everyone at once. "It is too hard I should say all the name," she explained laughing at her difficulty with the English language. "It is much better I should call everyone big darlink."

We had our tea in front of a cheery log fire, and Camilla, charming in a long bodiced, full-skirted Russian gown of cream colored cloth with wide red chiffon sleeves and a deep band of embroidered red about the flaring hem, sat on a cushion on the floor and told us of her first "break" into the movies. "I was playing extra parts then," said Miss Horn. "And I think I am very ugly because nobody pays any attention to my face, but one day a man said he would like very much he should take pictures of my legs. I am much obliged, I need the money, but I not think this a good way to break into the movies. I sit still for two and a half hours, my face gets very red and I try hard not to cry. I wait and wait and then a man say, 'There is Marguerite,' and in a few days I am not an extra girl any more but am 'Marguerite' in 'Faust' and I am the happiest girl in Germany."

Immediately upon the "discovery" of Miss Horn in Germany and the release of her first picture she received an offer to come to America and play with Barrymore in "Tempest" and has just completed her second picture with the same star, "Eternal Love."

Camilla Horn is young, talented, beautiful and has personality plus, but it remains to be seen if the all talking movies and the difficulty of the English language will cause her to return to Europe. If so, it will be a distinct loss to America from the standpoint of the artistic.

The Master Mind



Howard Thurston, the magician, at the American Theater this week.

St. Louisan's All-Talkie

Frederick Brennan Prepared Scenario and Wrote Dialogue for "The Ghost Talks," First Conversation Farce Made for the Screen—Douglas Fairbanks Comes Along With His Annual Spectacular Offering—Stars Come and Go but Milton Slosser and His Organ Go on Forever.

By NIE.

OUT at the Fox Theater this week is being shown the first all-talking motion picture written by a St. Louisan. The film is "The Ghost Talks" and Frederick Brennan, who, until a short time ago, was a local newspaper man who leaped into prominence with his first book, "God Got One Vote," which he followed with a long list of magazine stories, prepared the scenario and wrote most of the dialogue.

"The Ghost Talks," according to all reports, is a farce comedy and the first film of that type to be made into an all-conversation picture. The story concerns the adventures of a youthful amateur detective who stumbles into a nest of crooks and finally brings them to justice after a series of blunders.

Brennan, now out in Hollywood with the Fox organization, also has prepared for the screen "Strong Boy," "Sin Sister," "Speakeasy" and "Blue Skies," which, sooner or later, will be shown at the Fox Cathedral d'Art here.

DOUGLAS FAIRBANKS, who is satisfied now to make one picture a year but who insists that the yearly output be a gorgeous spectacle, is said to have spared neither money nor effort in "The Iron Mask," which is showing at Loew's this week. Five hundred workmen spent three months constructing the village and palace of St. Germain. Expert stonemasons laid the cobblestones of the streets and courtyards according to the seventeenth century pattern. Whole trees were transplanted and flowering rose bushes were trained to twine themselves about the time-blackened timbers of the village dwellings. The huge fountain in the public square was built in exact duplication of one of the famous fountains of the seventeenth century, and was so constructed that real water poured from its massive front. Every detail of the French village was real, from the weather vanes which swayed with the wind on the peaked roofs, to the vegetables in the market stalls.

The courtyard of the palace of St. Germain was the largest set of its kind ever erected for a screen production. The ground it covers was more than twice that of a large city block and its stone walls towered 250 feet in the air. The massive doors of the castle were carved by hand by skilled workmen, and the polished floors of the royal chambers were laid by masters in the art of parquetry. Even the tapestries on the palace walls were made in reproduction of museum pieces of the wall coverings of the period of Louis XIII.

Months of careful research were spent in perfecting every detail of the realism of "The Iron Mask," and Fairbanks was aided in his efforts by Maurice Leloir, one of the world's greatest authorities on seventeenth century manners and customs.

Fairbanks' demand for the realistic extends to himself. He employs no double in even the most hazardous of his scenes. During the screening of "The Iron Mask" he took plenty of chances in dozens of daring stunts and performed the most breath-taking feats of his career. An expert swordsman, Fairbanks engaged the services of the champion fencer of Belgium, Frederick Cavens, so that the sword play of himself and his musketeers and gentlemen of the court might bear the stamp of the genuine.

THERE are times when a man is too successful in his own particular field of work. F'rexample, the eminent Milton Slosser, who organs so successfully for the Brothers Skouras at the Missouri Theater. Were Milton less of an organ virtuoso, the chances are that the Brothers would give him his chance to do the master of ceremonies thing. But because Milton has been organing so successfully during these last seven years, to the St. Louis public he is an organist, and an organist he will remain until the end of time, or maybe a month or two less.

When Slosser came here in September, 1922, he was one of the 25 or 30 men claiming the billing of "the world's youngest organist." Slosser, then barely 22 years old, came to St. Louis from the West Coast, via Kansas City. On the Pacific slope he had been a theater organist in Pasadena and Hollywood, and at Sid Grauman's Rialto Theater, Los Angeles. Frank Newman had brought him to Kansas City to open the Newman Theater. From this theater, Herschel Stuart lured him to the Missouri, St. Louis, where Tom Terry was organist.

When Terry left Famous Players, who then operated the Missouri, Stuart elevated Slosser into the chief organist's post, which he has held down for these seven years.

That Slosser has a rare aptitude for the master of ceremonies "racket" was proved when he acted as master of ceremonies during the interim between the departure of Frank Fay and the debut of Eddie Peabody. He is quick-witted, annoys a piano in clever style—he has been in concert work in Carnegie Hall, New York; and is not displeasing to the feminine eye, being constructed facially along the Ben Lyon type. His stage presence comes to him honestly, through long years at the organ console, and through a year and a half of Pantages vaudeville, doing a piano act.

Slosser is one of those unfortunate young men who is too obviously a "home guard." The folks in St. Louis know him too well; but if the Skouras Brothers wish, they can take Slosser into one of the Eastern theaters they are operating for Warner Brothers and through some active press-agent fireworks, introduce a new and clever figure into the world of masters of ceremonies.

WHILE Slosser does his stuff in a couple of weeks, pinch-hitting during the strange interlude existing between the departure of Eddie Peabody and the induction into office of the Missouri's new permanent master of ceremonies, whoever he will be, Ed Lowry will continue at the old stand at the Ambassador.

With the exception of Paul Ash's three-year record in the Chicago Balaban & Katz Theaters, Lowry is the longest lived of all the masters of ceremonies who have sung and danced and banjoed and fooled around American stages.

If, during his seven years, Slosser has played enough organ notes to reach from here to there, Lowry can be blamed for introducing more than his share of popular songs in St. Louis.

Knowing Lowry's popularity with

Goossens Comes As Final Leader Of the Symphony

Young Conductor to Direct Orchestra This Week and for Remainder of the Concert Season at the Odeon.

EUGENE GOOSSENS, the brilliant young conductor of the Rochester Symphony, arrives this week to guide the St. Louis Symphony Orchestra through the final month of its season. He makes his first appearances next Friday afternoon and Saturday evening at the Odeon in a program distinguished for its catholicity of taste, its mingling of classic, romantic and modern.

At 36, Goossens has been internationally famous for 10 years. St. Louis is familiar with his conducting from his two visits here last season when he was heard in two symphony pairs of concerts. His visits here were successful and he was asked to return again for a longer term. Last summer he had a similar experience at Los Angeles where he made the greatest success of the Hollywood Bowl season.

Goossens was born in London in 1893, the descendant of an old Flemish family of gold-beaters, but immediately the third in a line of successive conductors, his grandfather, the first Eugene Goossens, having been a famous conductor of the Carlo Rosa Opera Company, and afterward in Liverpool a choral conductor of distinction. The second Eugene Goossens, father of the guest-conductor, is still active as a conductor in London, while the youngest Eugene has been most successful as conductor of the Rochester Symphony Orchestra in this country and this season has been greatly in demand as guest conductor for the most important orchestras in this country.

Eugene Goossens entered the Bruges Conservatory in 1903 and in 1906 the Liverpool College of Music. There he won the Liverpool violin scholarship and his violin master at the Royal College of Music was Senor Arbos, his immediate predecessor as guest conductor here.

From 1911 to 1915 he was acquiring practical orchestral experience as a violinist in the Queen's Hall orchestra, and during those years also conducted his own first compositions for orchestra, "Chinese Variations" and two tone poems, "Perseus" and "Ossian." He was at the time a member of the Philharmonic String Quartet.

Toward the close of 1915 Sir Thomas Beecham asked the young violinist-composer to conduct a performance of Stanford's "The Critic" and so well did the younger man acquit himself that he was at once attached to the Beecham opera companies. Later opportunities as guest-conductor of orchestras added much to his fame. In 1921 he inaugurated a series of six modern orchestral concerts at the Queen's Hall season in London and became known internationally as a musician of gifts and brilliance. He came to America in 1923 as conductor at Rochester.

His program for this week's symphony concerts is indicative of the generous broad taste which characterizes his work as conductor. It is a mingling of classic, romantic and modern with Schumann's Symphony No. 1 (the "Spring Symphony" as its major work. In detail it is:

Leonore Overture No. 3.......Beethoven
Symphony No. 1 in B flat major—Schumann

Day by Day In New York

By O. O. McIntyre.

NEW YORK, March 9.

ON almost every New York dance floor will be seen one of those withered old birds, who doesn't look likely to last until he reaches home, popping up to twirl around, one-two, one-two-three, in an old-fashioned waltz. All of which is dandy with me but if the poor fellow could see the scowls of the onlookers. Nothing irritates young folk like seeing their elders dance. And why is that? It seems to me the venerable dodos have been pretty tolerant watching the cigarette smoking, gin guzzling and necking youngsters on the modern dance floor.

As one not at all tired of the carking cares of the world, it does seem, however, it would be a better place if there was a little surcease from those stories about Peggy Joyce's diamonds. There are innumerable women who have more jewels than Miss Joyce ever owned, but they merely have the good taste not to wear them all at once.

And speaking of the Palace, there is one actor who never fails to fill it from back rail to proscenium. He is Frank Fay billed as "the aristocratic vagabond." There is no actor who has such a distinct New York following. He has played there for six weeks at a stretch and rarely appears for less than three. Much of his best material is extemporaneous and apparently he never grows stale. Fay, like many good performers, comes originally from San Francisco and has rattled around in revues and vaudeville for a number of years. Some of these days a shrewd producer is going to build a revue or musical comedy around his talents and cash in on a big scale. Handsome, debonair and glib, he is a stage type the ladies adore and one would expect the male part of the audience to hate. But he has the happy faculty of pleasing both sexes and charms his audience as the snake charms the bird. He is a slick article. Appearing with him recently is his bride, Barbara Stanwyck, who reached a sudden and amazing success via the chorus and cabarets in the dramatic smash in "Burlesque." Mark this prediction and watch Frank Fay.

In the motion picture world the universal alibi of those who have lost popularity is they are "going abroad to make pictures."

Eugene O'Neill's latest fling was at God in his play "Dynamo," which made all the critics yawn. They are just discovering that O'Neill is a pretty dreary playwright after all.

On the backs of three magazines I note pen and ink drawings of Flo Ziegfeld and his high opinion of a certain brand of cigarettes. He may regard them highly but he doesn't smoke them. He is an inveterate user of big black cigars and I don't believe he ever smoked a cigarette in his life.

Solari Players in Operetta.

Members of the Solari Junior Players will present "The Seven Old Ladies of Lavender Town" at the Solari Guild Theater in April. The scene of this operetta by Henry C. Bunner with the music by Oscar Weil, is laid in Kategreen awayland, Once Upon a Time. "Professor Lightening Haskins" will show his "great mechanical and conversational agglomeration of waxworks." The girls will be dressed after the fashion of the Crinoline age.

There will, however, be a special extra revue in addition to the regular series. This will be presented on Tuesday evening, March 19, and the topic will be "The Glories and the Frivolities of Paris."

Jane Thurston---A Strictly Modern Witch

WHILE women in general are interested in magic, the number of women who have adopted magic as a profession, so far as the records of the art reveal, may be counted on the fingers of one hand. The very first magic lady who practiced the black arts—with the exception of Eve, who did a little prestidigitation with apples in the Garden of Eden—was doubtless the redoubtable Witch of Endor, whose deeds are recorded in the ancient Scriptures. And, according to all reports, she knew her incantations.

From the dark days of Endor to Anno Domini 1929 is a long, long unrolling of the scroll of years, as they say in the movie titles. Enter now the latest witch, who is practicing the subtle arts of necromancy and hocus-pocusism. A fair-haired witch, with eyes mutable as the sea, and a roguish smile lurking about the corners of her mouth like bubbles of sunlight in the petals of a rose. An ultra-modern witch, who does not ride broomsticks o' nights, nor brew black broths in fiery cauldrons on Walpurgis eves. But an authentic witch, none the less who, like the Black Lady of Endor, knows her mystic spells and her incantations.

AND why not? She comes by her necromantic lore by right of descent. For this witch is the daughter of a wizard. The wizard is none other than Howard Thurston. The witch is his daughter, Jane, who is doing her "witching" with her father at the American Theater this week.

Ever since Jane was a little girl who played with dolls and Teddy bears she has been on more or less intimate terms with hocus-pocusism. Whenever she wanted anything her father told her that Hocus-Pocus would get it for her. And Hocus-Pocus, the familiar of the Thurston household, usually delivered the goods. No wonder the daughter of the House of Thurston grew up to be a believer in the efficacy of the magic art.

The little girl who had believed in the efficacy of Hocus-Pocus is now a sub-deb of sorcery. For years her father has trained her in the art of which he is master, and Ned Wayburn himself schooled her in dancing. Her education was looked after in the Rayson School for Girls in New York City. She was graduated two years ago. Followed a post-graduate course in dancing at Wayburn's and a year of intensive training in magic.

And then, last September, in the Colonial Theater, Boston, Miss Jane Thurston, the modern witch, made her professional bow to the public. And now she is in St. Louis. That is the brief story of her professional career.

AND the future? Well, her father says that she will continue to be the witch of the Thurston show, he hopes, for many years. And he has great plans for her—as the leading figure in a magical-music-dancing revue.

The opening in Boston was a memorable occasion in the Thurston family. "Of course I was unusually fortunate in having Howard Thurston for a daddy," she says. "I 'got all the breaks,' as they say. It had been understood at home for a long time that I was to be permitted to go on the stage, provided I showed sufficient talent. But I had to satisfy daddy that I could do the things he expected of me. He is proud of the reputation of his show, and if I had failed to come up to his standard he would not have let me go on.

"My preparation for the stage has been progressing since early childhood. The magic tricks which I do in the show have been gradually taught me by daddy ever since I was a very little girl. And mother gave me my first dancing lessons.

"Daddy takes his work seriously and he insists on my doing the same, as long as I am on the stage. If I make any mistakes he is quick to call my attention to them, telling me how to avoid or correct them. In that regard he treats me just the same as he would any other member of the company, and I am glad of it, for I feel that is the only way to learn.

"I have already learned how to do most of daddy's tricks but I don't think I could ever give a performance in the way he does. Besides, singing and dancing interest me as much as the magic, and I should never want to give them up."

Although she prefers her comfortable country home on Long Island to hotel life, little Miss Jane is greatly enjoying her first professional tour and is filling her diary with many interesting observations about all the new cities she is visiting. The chief drawback to trouping is her separation from the girl chums with whom she went to school, and trying to keep in touch with them by letter-writing is more of a task than she anticipated. And now that she is her father's co-star her next big ambition is that he will take her shortly on a world tour.

Rip Van Winkle At Toy Theater

The Children's Theater is closing its second season with the play, "Rip Van Winkle," at the Toy Theater, next Friday evening and Saturday afternoon. The production consists of seven scenes telling of the early life of Rip in the village, through his 20 years of slumber in the Catskills, and his reconciliation with his daughter who has been happily married.

William Thie will play the part of Rip, Genevieve Lilie the parts of Dame Van Winkle, and Mildred Bardelmeyer, their daughter Judith, who in later years marries Knickerbocker, a school teacher, played by John Henry Pohlman.

E. H. Sothern in Dramatic Recital At Women's Club

E. H. SOTHERN, the actor, will give a dramatic recital and lecture at the St. Louis Women's Club, 4600 Lindell boulevard, on Tuesday afternoon at 2:30. Mrs. Thomas G. Ratcliffe, 50 Kingsbury place, will sponsor Mr. Sothern's St. Louis appearance.

The well known actor will give selections from the plays with which his name is closely associated. He will comment on these plays, relate their stories, circumstances connected with their writing and their production on the stage and their relationship to the modern theater.

In connection with the lecture Sothern will present the murder scene of King Duncan from "Macbeth"; a scene from "The Merchant of Venice" and a resume of the romantic drama, "If I Were King." In this connection he will recite several of Villon's poems and Rudyard Kipling's ballad "To the True Romance."

German Picture Of "Queen Louise" At Odeon Tonight

THE German-made motion picture, "Queen Louise," produced in Berlin, will be shown at the Odeon tonight for a single performance here under the direction of Dr. Max Winter for the benefit of the German School Society of St. Louis.

The film, which was a great success in Germany, is in two parts, the first showing the youth of Louise and her marriage to Crown Prince Frederick, afterwards King Frederick William III. In the second part many of the famous historical characters at the beginning of the nineteenth century appear, the Kings of Prussia, Napoleon, Emperor Alexander of Russia and many others and the famous meeting between Queen Louise and Napoleon at Tilsit is pictured. The picture will be started promptly at 8 tonight.

Kolar to Conduct Pop Today

VICTOR KOLAR, the associate conductor of the Detroit Symphony Orchestra, makes his St. Louis debut as guest conductor of the St. Louis Symphony at the Odeon at 3:15 p. m. today.

The major work on his program is the Chausson Symphony on B flat major—one of the chief contributions of modern France to symphonic literature. It was first presented here in 1919, and again in 1922 on regular concert programs. Today is its first hearing here at a popular concert.

One of the most brilliant and most sound of the modern French school, Chausson was shy, thoughtful, and universally admired. He met death at the age of 44 in a bicycle accident, leaving as his monument this one symphony.

Two numbers of today's program are musical illustrations to Fairy Tales, Humperdinck's pantomime and Apotheosis from "Hansel and Gretel," and Rimsky Korsakoff's "Three Musical Pictures" from his fairy opera, "The Tsar Saltan." The last has not before been heard in St. Louis. To conclude Kolar offers Liszt's "Les Preludes."

The young conductor is a native of Budapest, where he was born of Bohemian parentage. Kubelik heard him and adopted him while yet a child as his protege. The violinist arranged for his studies under Antonin Dvorak in the Prague Conservatory. Kolar was himself scarcely more than a child when he came to America, and for a time he knew poverty in struggling days in New York City. Kolar, however, found himself a chair with the Pittsburg Symphony Orchestra and later with Damrosch, among the violins. Thence he was brought forward occasionally to conduct his own orchestral works, which include a "Slavonic Rhapsody," "Americana," a Symphony No. 1, a "Lyric Suite," two symphonic poems: "Hiawatha" and "A Fairy Tale," and several concert marches, besides which he has a string quartet in E minor which is in the repertory of the Flonzaleys.

From New York he went to Detroit, where he is associate conductor, in charge of the Sunday and summer concert series and many of the tour concerts. His detailed program today is:

Dream Pantomime and Apotheosis, from "Hansel and Gretel" ....Humperdinck
Symphony in B-flat Major......Chausson
I Lento: Allegro vivo: Presto
II Tres lent
III Anima: Grave
Three musical pictures from the "Tsar Saltan" ....Rimsky-Korsakoff
(First Performance in St. Louis)
Symphonic Poem, "Les Preludes"....Liszt

three minutes were gone we should be searching the shadows for his reason—i. e., Lady M. We should from then onwards the alert—we should be waiting breathlessly to catch the glint of her eyes—and when she did ever advance we should long for her to stay, so attractive she is; and yet away she goes.

"Is something like this possible with you? I don't know how it is, but she seems to me pretty rather than handsome; seductive rather than compelling; in fact, I cannot find her even once compelling in the masculine sense of the word. She seems to have Bernhardt's voice when Bernhardt was talking to Armand in 'La Dame aux C.' Are we agreed? I cannot hear her calling on 'All ye spirits' in the voice of Siddons—but in the voice of 'Camille' gone a bit crazy.

"Drunken if you will, but not devastating—what 'spirit' that she calls on ever came to anyone in response to an order thrilled with mere intensity—but a spirit might be wooed. It is just possible—Are we agreed?

FIRST ALL-TALKING SCREEN FARCE WRITTEN BY FREDERICK BRENNAN

the picture-going populace of St. Louis, song publishers strive to get Eddie to sing their numbers. The result is that the Herr Professor Lowry has been the first singer in St. Louis to bloom forth with such immortal classics as "Muddy Waters," "Among My Souvenirs," "My Blue Heaven," "High Upon the Hilltops," "That Precious Little Thing Called Love"—incidentally, later to be given added impetus as the theme song of "The Shopworn Angel," "Me and My Shadow," "My Mother's Eyes," "Laugh, Clown, Laugh," "When You're With Somebody Else," and "Waiting for Ships That Never Come In."

Along with the singing of other people's songs, Lowry has found time to write four of his own: "I Thought That Some Day You'd Be Mine," "I, Myself and Me," "That's What Puts the 'Sweet' in 'Home, Sweet Home,'" and "My Arms Are Open." Incidentally, the Herr Professor's "My Arms Are Open" has been interpolated into Earl Carroll's "Vanities."

What Shall I Do for Gray Hair?
By ALICE STRAWN

I am often asked for a good way to restore gray, faded or streaked hair. While there are many preparations on the market for the purpose, I know of nothing better than a mixture of good old sage tea and sulphur. You can either prepare the mixture at home yourself, or as most women prefer, buy it already prepared and ready to use.

The correct recipe, improved by the addition of other ingredients, may be had in Wyeth's Sage & Sulphur Compound. All druggists carry it, and since the cost is only 75c a bottle, there is really no need for any woman to go to the bother of preparing it herself. You would be surprised if you knew the number of men and women who employ Wyeth's Sage & Sulphur because its use is undetectable.

You simply moisten a comb or a soft brush with it and draw it through your hair, one small strand at a time. By morning the gray disappears and another application or two sees your hair beautifully and evenly restored to its full original color. There is no suggestion of that hard, dyed look that repels fastidious women. I advise any woman—or man—whose hair is turning gray to try Wyeth's Sage & Sulphur.

Missouri Girl is Happy Now

The quick, easy way those ailments of children, such as headaches, feverishness, biliousness, coated tongue, bad breath, no appetite or energy, etc., simply vanish with the first few doses of California Fig Syrup, is always a surprise to those who use this fine old medicine for the first time.

Weak, puny, restless and cross children never fail to pick up weight and gain strength and energy under its gentle influence. It stimulates the appetite, regulates the stomach and bowels and gives these organs tone and strength so they continue to act normally, of their own accord.

A well-known Missouri mother, Mrs. O. E. Morey, 4033 North 25th St., St. Louis, says: "Verna Mae is rosy-cheeked, bright-eyed and happy now; but we had a lot of trouble with her. Her stomach and bowels seemed to be weak. She suffered from constipation and biliousness until she was fretful and peevish most of the time. Then our doctor told us to give her California Fig Syrup. It stopped her trouble quick. We kept on giving it to her and soon she was well and strong."

Be sure to ask for California Fig Syrup by the full name so you'll get the genuine endorsed by physicians for over 50 years.

The quick, easy way those ailments of children, such as headaches, feverishness, biliousness, coated tongue, bad breath, no appetite or energy, etc., simply vanish with the first few doses of California Fig Syrup, is always a surprise to those who use this fine old medicine for the first time.

Weak, puny, restless and cross children never fail to pick up weight and gain strength and energy under its gentle influence. It stimulates the appetite, regulates the stomach and bowels and gives these organs tone and strength so they continue to act normally, of their own accord.

A well-known Missouri mother, Mrs. O. E. Morey, 4033 North 25th St., St. Louis, says: "Verna Mae is rosy-cheeked, bright-eyed and happy now; but we had a lot of trouble with her. Her stomach and bowels seemed to be weak. She suffered from constipation and biliousness until she was fretful and peevish most of the time. Then our doctor told us to give her California Fig Syrup. It stopped her trouble quick. We kept on giving it to her and soon she was well and strong."

Be sure to ask for California Fig Syrup by the full name so you'll get the genuine endorsed by physicians for over 50 years.

NEW GUINEA GOLD TAKEN OUT BY PLANE

Air Transport Stimulates Production of Jungle Mines—Natives Fly, Too.

By the Associated Press.

BULOLO, New Guinea, March 9.—Aviation has begun to play an important part in the development of the Bulolo gold fields in the wilds of New Guinea.

Difficult of access, air transport alone has made rapid development possible, planes being used for gold as well as all kinds of cargo. Air communication between Lae, on the New Guinea coast, and the Wau, 60 miles inland, the nearest accessible point to the Bulolo-Edie Creek, has been maintained for nearly two years.

Th journey by "bush" road requires eight days. As the natives are not permitted to carry more than 50 pounds, including their own food for the trip, progress is slow, unsafe and unsatisfactory. Airplanes make the trip in an hour.

Cargo of all descriptions has been transported to the field, including a 400-pound castiron engine bed for the wireless station at Bulolo. Gold is the chief article of transport on the return trips. One shipment of gold recently carried by plane to Lae was worth $30,000.

So great has been the development of the new fields that the shipment of gold to Australia last year totaled 90,590 ounces, worth $1,000,000. Every month except April gold was conveyed to Australia, the largest shipments being in August, when 24,790 ounces, valued at $250,000, was transported.

Airplane fare for a white person from Lae to the jungle gold fields is $100.

On the return journey natives are carried for $5. Practically all natives use the air route because the mine owners have found that it is cheaper to pay the fare of a laborer than to give him rations for the road journey through the "bush," which requires a week of dangerous travel.

Jewish Women to Present "The Patsy"

The Junior Council of Jewish Women for its annual play will present "The Patsy," a three-act comedy by Barry Conners, at the Wednesday Club Auditorium, 4506 Westminster place, Sunday evening, March 31. Augusta Gubin will play the leading role of Patsy and will be supported by Beck Barack, Pansy Goldstein, Elizabeth Lee Litman, Edward Goldstein, Alfred Kissin and Louis Diener. Mrs. Albert Rich is coaching the production.

The proceeds of the play will be used to further philanthropic work in which the organization interests itself.

600 Americans Go to Denmark.

By the Associated Press.

COPENHAGEN, March 9.—Dr. Sven Knudsen, well-known in Denmark because of his activity in bringing groups of American boys to Denmark, this year intends to bring 600 American men and women to Denmark to study Scandinavian culture. They will take part in the annual Danish-American festival on July 4 at the Rebild national park in Jutland.

Canada May Invite League Council.

By the Associated Press.

GENEVA, March 9.—League circles are discussing the possibility of Canada inviting the council to meet in Ottawa. The council follows the policy of sitting outside Geneva once each year. A session in Madrid is a possibility for June and a later session may be held in Berlin, once the reparations problem has been settled and the Rhineland evacuated.

State Music Contest At the Sedalia Fair

ANNOUNCEMENT is made by Secretary W. D. Smith of the reappointment of Mrs. Dana Demand of Sedalia as superintendent of the music contest for juniors at the 1929 Missouri State Fair, Aug. 17-24.

Over 109 entries, an increase of about 30 per cent over 1927, competed in the four divisions of the contest last year. Competition was keen and a large and appreciative audience gathered in the annex of the woman's building, where the contest was held, to hear the program of selections from memory by Missouri's junior musical talent.

The various divisions of the four sections of the contest will be revised this year and the contest at Missouri's twenty-ninth annual exposition will be open to residents of other states who may desire to enter. A number of inviting cash awards will be offered in this department. The contest will be staged under the auspices of the Missouri State Federation of Music Clubs as in previous years.

Lippsonian Players In an Irish Drama

The Lippsonian Players will present "Kathleen Mavourneen," an Irish comedy, in celebration of St. Patrick's day, Saturday, March 16. The organization, though not quite two years old, has achieved something of a reputation for presenting the best type of plays in a creditable manner. The members consist of young people who are interested in drama and who possess dramatic talent.

"Kathleen Mavourneen" will be the fourth production that this group of young dramatists have presented this season. It will be given at the Masonic Temple in Maplewood, 7468 Manchester, next Saturday. Martha Antoine will play the title role.

Russia Grants Aid to Parents.

By the Associated Press.

MOSCOW, March 9.—Russia's social insurance laws grant parents from $12.50 to $25 for every new-born child. The money is supposed to be spent for clothing, milk and other necessities.

KING EXPECTS DICTATORSHIP TO SAVE JUGO-SLAVIA

Alexander Thinks Stronger Nation Will Emerge After Period of Freedom From Political Discord.

By the Associated Press.

BELGRADE, March 9.—Sprawled along the Adriatic Sea for 450 miles and hemmed in by Austria, Italy, Hungary, Rumania, Bulgaria, Greece and Albania, like a square in a crazy Oriental patch-quilt, is the Balkan kingdom of Jugo-Slavia, whose diverse racial elements would furnish first-class material for an ethnological museum. This heterogeneous mass, which is mostly of Slavic origin, is composed of Serbians, Croatians, Solvenians, Dalmatians, Bosnians, Herzegovinians, Mohammedans, Macedonians and Montenegrins, who at one time or another were vassals either of Turkey or Austria-Hungary.

They vary as much in mentality and religion as they do in costume and appearance. For instance, the Croatians of the North, who form the most enlightened, educated and progressive element in the entire triune kingdom, are Roman Catholics, while the Serbs of the old kingdom, who have more political experience but far less culture, are members of the Greek Orthodox Church. Again, while most of the people of Dalmatia, Montenegro and Macedonia are Christians, those in Bosnia and Herzegovina are Moslems, the men wearing the Turkish fez and the women the veil.

Much Discord Since 1919.

Since 1919, when the old kingdom of Serbia, as a reward for its services in the World War, was doubled in area and quadrupled in population, the races composing the newly-formed kingdom of Serbs, Croats and Slovenes have quarreled among themselves for political power. In that period Jugo-Slavia has had no less than 21 governments. As the country produced no statesmen of sufficient popularity and sagacity to bring permanent peace among the peoples of the various provinces, King Alexander himself was called upon constantly to arbitrate their disputes and pour sovereign oil upon the troubled political waters.

The youthful Slav King had measurable success as peacemaker among his 12,000,000 subjects until a few months ago, when a half-crazed member of the dominant Serbian political party assassinated three prominent members of the Croatian Peasants' party, including Stephan Raditch, its leader, in open Parliament.

Dictatorship Created by King.

This act precipitated such a grave crisis between the Serbs of the old kingdom and the Croatians of the former Austrian provinces, that it threatened the very existence of the kingdom. It was at this point that King Alexander stepped in and, scrapping Parliament, the constitution, all existing political parties, and most of the laws, set up a modern dictatorship as the only means of bridging the chasm. This absolutist regime, says Gen. Peter Zikovitch, who was placed at its head, will endure until the King feels the people are fitted for a return to real parliamentary government.

The Associated Press correspondend had the privilege recently of seeing King Alexander at the royal palace in Belgrade and conversing with him for an hour. It is from that conversation, held informally over coffee cups and cigarettes, that he following impressions of the sovereign are based:

Descendant of Kara George.

The great-grandson of the famous peasant-warrior, Kara George (Black George), who could neither read nor write but who led the Serbs in their war of independence against the Turks, King Alexander inherits the courage and independence of his sturdy forebear. In addition to this, he inherts, on his mother's side, the boldness and dash of the fearless, patriotic mountaineers who upheld Serbia's independence in her days of greatest adversity, for Alexander is the grandson of the doughty King Nicholas Montenegro, who with his predecessors kept the cross of Christianity shining above the mountains of his rock-bound country intsead of the star and crescent of Turkey.

The King is of small stature and is not of robust physique. He possesses great simplicity and charm of manner. Although a man noted for courage and strong convictions, he is intensely shy. He has none of the austerity or aloofness of a monarch. He makes the visitor feel immediately at home. He is a careful listener rather than a communicative talker. He has the typical dark features of his Slav countrymen, with whom he is probably more closely connected, by birth, blood and breeding, than any king of any people in the world.

The King's large, prominent nose, firm mouth and dark eyes denote the soldier, but there is no suggestion either of the autocrat or the dictator. He is mild mannered and soft spoken. His rimless eyeglasses and his engaging smile soften his dusky features. He has jet black hair and a closely cropped mustache. He dresses habitually in the uniform of a general, which sets off his somewhat undersized frame to better effect than civilian dress. He has just passed his fortieth birthday.

Afflicted With Poor Health.

Throughout all the recent months of political stress and trial, when King Alexander tried by might and main to bring peace between the dominant but less advanced Serbs of the old kingdom and the virile, progressive but politically ambitious Croats of the North, the sovereign was afflicted constantly with poor health. He suffered intermittently from colds and fever. He also was tormented with tooth trouble, which was relieved only when he obtained the services of an American dentist.

Notwithstanding his physical distress, the King remained at his desk, day and night, trying still to calm the surging political waters, which finally became so turbulent that they threatened to submerge his kingdom. The Serbian and Croatian political leaders remained inflexible and irreconcilable to the end. It was then that the King stepped in and virtually created a new Jugo-Slavia overnight.

King Alexander dislikes publicity and rarely talks for publication, but his views regarding the crisis that confronted him may be summed up briefly as follows:

"It was one of your great Americans, Abraham Lincoln, I think,' he said, "who said that a house divided against itself cannot stand. Well, although all our people are of the same origin, the politicians attempted to divide them. They sought individual privileges for their provinces which we could not grant. I could not allow them to undermine the foundations of unity and solidarity which it had taken so many years to build up. I labored hard to avoid taking the drastic steps I took, but it was the only solution. Desperate situations demand desperate remedies.

"My patience exhausted and my strength taxed to the breaking point by the irreconcilable and unreasonable demands of the leaders of the various political parties, I decided I would abolish Parliament, although I have profound confidence in and respect for true parliamentary government, and that I would deal directly with the people. My people are of one heart and mind, and I knew they would support me. Although in the new regime they will preserve their individualities. They all belong to the one family and have one common ideal—the unity of the Southern Slav race.

"I think the results have justified the measures. The whole country is at peace. Everybody is at work. Those mischievous persons and organizations who sowed seeds of discord have been silenced. By hard work and honest deeds we must make up for the idle political discussions and inattention to the nation's real interests of the last 10 years. We shall return to a normal regime as soon as the work of reorganization and production warrants it. I am sure that after a period of freedom from political discord and party strife, a new, better and stronger Jugo-Slavia will emerge."

Have Kidneys Examined By Your Doctor

Take Salts to Wash Kidneys if Back Pains You or Bladder Bothers.

Flush your kidneys by drinking a quart of water each day, also take salts occasionally, says a noted authority, who tells us that too much rich food forms acids which almost paralyze the kidneys in their efforts to expel it from the blood. They become sluggish and weaken; then you may suffer with a dull misery in the kidney region, sharp pains in the back or sick headache, dizziness, your stomach sours, tongue is coated, and when the weather is bad you have rheumatic twinges. The urine gets cloudy; full of sediment, the channels often get sore and irritated, obliging you to seek relief two or three times during the night.

To help neutralize these irritating acids, to help cleanse the kidneys and flush off the body's urinous waste, get four ounces of Jad Salts from any pharmacy here; take a tablespoonful in a glass of water before breakfast for a few days, and your kidneys may then act fine. This famous salts is made from the acid of grapes and lemon juice, combined with lithia, and has been used for years to help flush and stimulate sluggish kidneys; also to neutralize the acids in the system so they no longer irritate, thus often relieving bladder weakness.

Jad Salts is inexpensive; cannot injure and makes a delightful effervescent lithia-water drink.

Famous Recipe For Stopping a Severe Cough

You'll be pleasantly surprised when you make up this simple home mixture and try it for a distressing cough or chest cold. It takes but a moment to mix and costs little, but it can be depended upon to give quick and lasting relief, even for severe bronchial coughs.

Get 2½ ounces of Pinex from any druggist. Pour this into a pint bottle; then fill it with plain granulated sugar syrup or strained honey. The full pint thus made costs no more than a small bottle of ready-made medicine, yet it is much more effective. It is pure, keeps perfectly and children love its pleasant taste.

This simple remedy has a remarkable three-fold action. It goes right to the seat of trouble, soothes away the inflammation, and loosens the germ-laden phlegm. At the same time, it is absorbed into the blood, where it acts directly upon the bronchial tubes and thus helps inwardly to throw off the whole trouble with surprising ease.

Pinex is a highly concentrated compound of genuine Norway Pine, containing the active agent of creosote, in a refined, palatable form, and known as one of the greatest healing agents for severe coughs, chest colds and bronchial troubles.

Do not accept a substitute for Pinex. It is guaranteed to give prompt relief or money refunded.

CRITICISES LEASING OF NEGRO PRISONERS

League of Nations Report on Forced Labor Cites Practice in U. S.

By the Associated Press.

GENEVA, March 9.—A report on human slavery and forced labor throughout the world, just issued by the International Labor Bureau of the League of Nations, states that the practice of leasing Negro prisoners to private employers exists in several Southern States of the United States.

The report will be used as a basis for preliminary negotiations at a conference to be held in Geneva this year for the abolition of involuntary servitude in all its forms.

That section dealing with the United States begins with citing the Thirteenth amendment to the Constitution, which says that neither slavery nor involuntary servitude, except as a punishment for crime, shall exist within the United States, and any place subject to its jurisdiction.

As evidence of the leasing of Negro prisoners the report then prints an extract from "The American Race Problem," a book by an American writer, Edward Byron Reuter. It alleges that in the case of Negro petty offenders it has been customary to impose a fine-work sentence. By this, says the quoted author, it is meant that the offender has the choice between paying a cash fine or working a specified number of days in a chain gang.

The report defines forced labor as "all work or service which is exacted under menace of any penalty for its non-performance and for which the worker concerned does not offer himself voluntarily." The bureau does not suggest that any international convention regulating forced labor which might be adopted should prevent the self-governing people of an independent state from imposing compulsory labor upon themselves. The forced labor dealt with in the report is that of dependent peoples, whether found in independent states, colonies or mandated territories, who can be compelled by existing laws and regulations to work on plantations for private employers, or on public works of various kinds. The experts say:

"It would indeed be of little use solemnly to abolish slavery if conditions of employment analogous to slavery were still to be maintained in the form of forced labor. For this reason the assembly of the League of Nations in 1926, after adopting an international slavery convention, passed a resolution drawing attention to the importance of the work being undertaken by the International Labor Office with a view to studying the best means of preventing forced or compulsory labor from developing into conditions analogous to slavery."

PREDICTS U. S. WILL SOON PASS EUROPE IN ART COLLECTIONS

Berlin Museum Director Says Americans Are Buying Up Privately Owned Treasures.

By the Associated Press.

BERLIN, March 9.—The director of Kaiser Friedrich Museum, Wilhelm von Bode, predicts that the great private art collections of Europe will have passed into American hands within 20 or 30 years.

In an article in the art journal, Der Kunstwanderer, he wrote:

"It will not be long, then, before all these collections will find their way into American museums, which, by these acquisitions, will rank as equal to the two dozen great European galleries."

He said that Americans were displaying great zeal in the study of art and enumerated benefactions by wealthy citizens and municipalities. These, he wrote, "leave us poor Europeans dumb with amazement."

"Moreover," he added, "the peculiar megalomania that afflicts many of our museum committees leads to the wastefulness of valuable museum material. When folly on our side is thus found to be working hand in hand with progressiveness and wealth on the part of Americans, there can be little doubt that the New World will soon overtake and beat effete old Europe in the possession of art."

WATER POWER PUMPS WATER FROM TOWN'S ARTESIAN WELL

Gibson, Ga., Has Device Which Runs All the Time Without Expense or Repairs.

By the Associated Press.

GIBSON, Ga., March 9.—This town uses direct water power to produce its water supply. Gibson boasts a water system, municipally operated, which constitutes a near approach to perpetual motion. It runs all the time and hasn't had a breakdown in its 20 years of operation.

Here is how it works:

About 300 yards from the center of town is a creek, fed by springs. A trough carries the water from the creek to the brow of a small ridge, under which is a water wheel. Attached to the wheel, which is turned by the creek water, is a vertical shaft. The shaft is connected to a cable which slides back and forth over the tops of cypress poles extending to an artesian well in the main square of Gibson. The cable works a well-pump piston, exactly as a gasoline engine would, and pumps water into a wooden tank over the well. From this well the 600 citizens of Gibson get their drinking water and fire protection.

The system operates without expense and without manual labor.

Gifts Only to Italian State.

By the Associated Press.

ROME, March 9.—Public subscriptions, no matter how worthy their object, remain strictly prohibited throughout Italy for 1929 by Premier Mussolini's orders. The only exception provided for is the sending to Mussolini himself of State bonds or paper money, to be destroyed in order to reduce the internal debt. Subscriptions of that character are still being received and long lists of patriotic donors are displayed in the newspapers every other day or so.

Prescription He Wrote in 1892 is the World's Most Popular Laxative

When Dr. Caldwell started to practice medicine, back in 1875, the needs for a laxative were not as great as they are today. People lived normal, quiet lives, ate plain, wholesome food, and got plenty of fresh air and sunshine. But even that early there were drastic physics and purges for the relief of constipation which Dr. Caldwell did not believe were good for human beings to put into their system. So he wrote a prescription for a laxative to be used by his patients.

The prescription for constipation that he used early in his practice, and which he put in drug stores in 1892 under the name of Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin, is a liquid vegetable remedy, intended for women, children and elderly people, and they need just such a mild, safe, gentle bowel stimulant as Syrup Pepsin.

Under successful management this prescription has proven its worth and is now the largest selling liquid laxative in the world. The fact that millions of bottles are used a year proves that it has won the confidence of people who needed it to get relief from headaches, biliousness, flatulence, indigestion, loss of appetite and sleep, bad breath, dyspepsia, colds and fevers.

W. B. Caldwell M.D.
AT AGE 83

Millions of families are now never without Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin, and if you will once start using it you will also always have a bottle handy for emergencies.

It is particularly pleasing to know that the most of it is bought by mothers for themselves and the children, though Syrup Pepsin is just as valuable for elderly people. All drug stores have the generous bottles.

THERE'S A REASON.

Are You Tired of Your Face?

HORRID little blemishes ... pores that show ... tiny blotches here and there ... rough surface texture! Why—oh why—can't you have that milky white skin, that smooth, flawless complexion that makes a woman so gorgeously beautiful? Now it is possible! Now there is a new, easy way that may double or triple the beauty of your skin ...

NOW ... Amazing Results for Skins that Don't Respond to Cold Creme

Use a 6-fold creme. Ordinary cold creme never goes below the surface. It does no more than cleanse and protect. Gervaise Graham Beauty Secret is absorbed—it penetrates all three layers of tissue. What an amazing difference this makes!

Freckles fade out, blackheads melt away, tiny blemishes give way to delicate clearness, coarse pores—most stubborn blemishes of all—are closed to stay, by being filled out from below. Surface roughness is replaced with smooth, flawless texture. And, finally, this amazing creme whitens steadily, naturally and permanently without bleaching.

HOW IT WORKS

The world's finest beauty aids—unknown in cold creme—are emulsified into one 6-fold creme. A penetrating base takes them through the skin. They reach all three layers, clearing, smoothing and whitening. For the first time, a way has been found to combine six great beautifying agents into one penetrating creme!

Hoover's Plan for Reorganizing Federal Departments Offers Wholly New Field for Economy

Existing System Has Been Shown to Be a Hodge-Podge, But No Steps Have Been Taken to Co-Ordinate Activities.

By CHARLES G. ROSS,
Chief Washington Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch.

WASHINGTON, March 9.

PRESIDENT HOOVER will attempt to bring about a reorganization of the departments of the Federal Government. Every taxpayer in the country should applaud his decision.

We have about reached the limit of the savings that can be made under the present system. On top of that fact, which stands out clearly from an examination of the Federal budget for the last eight years, is the prospect of new demands on the Treasury in the years just ahead.

The President committed himself in his inaugural speech to "the expansion of public works and the promotion of welfare activities affecting education and the home." These projects, which exemplify the constructive program that he has in mind, will require money. So also, at least at the start, will his plan for farm relief. So also will the more effective enforcement of prohibition which has been promised. So will the building of new cruisers, the protection of the Mississippi valley against floods, and the other commitments into which the Government already has entered.

The problem before Mr. Hoover is to find money for the new requirements of the Government without starving any of the essential services and without imposing an objectionable tax burden on the people. He turns therefore to an avenue of economy that has not yet been explored—the reorganization of the departments. Here is an opportunity for saving on a grand scale and not by penny-pinching. Here is an opportunity, moreover, for increasing the efficiency of the Government.

The problem is one that in any event would appeal to Mr. Hoover; in the fiscal situation in which he finds himself, it is bound to appeal with special force. That he intends to tackle it was made clear in his inaugural address, when he listed "the more effective reorganization of the departments of the Federal Government" as one of the definite mandates he had received from the people in the election.

The problem has never been better stated than it was in a speech by a member of the Coolidge Cabinet. He said:

"Over many years our people have been striving to better the Federal administration. We have succeeded in two major steps; we still have a third equally important and perhaps more difficult one to accomplish. The first step was the establishment of Government employment based upon merit; the second was the establishment of adequate control of appropriations through the budget system. There still remains the third and even more important step to relieve the taxpayer of a greater but more obscure waste—that resulting from faulty organization of administrative functions. And the first two steps will never reach full realization without the third.

Big Waste in Departments.

"In recent years we have been successfully slashing Federal expenditures by the elimination of extravagances and unnecessary personnel. But for lack of legislative authority we have not been able to reach into what I believe is an even larger waste and larger drain on the taxpayer than extravagance and the inflation of payrolls—the waste which arises from the swamp of bad organization."

The quotation is from an address by Herbert Hoover, then the Secretary of Commerce, delivered at the annual meeting of the National Chamber of Commerce in May, 1925.

Mr. Hoover is by no means the first President to be aware of the need of a regrouping of governmental functions along more efficient and less wasteful lines. Roosevelt urged it upon Congress, but got nowhere. Taft appointed a special commission which went exhaustively into the whole subject and laid out a reorganization program. In a special message to Congress, submitting the reports of this body, Taft declared that the matter was one of "fundamental importance;" that only by the solution of this problem could other important reform measures be made possible. He soon found that he was running his head against a stone wall.

Harding Sought Reform.

Wilson called for reorganization, with similar lack of results. Then came Harding, who made it one of the major items of his policy. At his instance, Congress created a joint committee on reorganization, composed of members of the Senate and the House, and the President placed at the head of it, as his personal representative, Walter F. Brown of Toledo, O., whom he brought to Washington for that purpose.

Brown, as it happens, is now the Postmaster-General in the Hoover cabinet, after service under Mr. Hoover as Assistant Secretary of Commerce, and he will undoubtedly be one of the main advisers of the President in reorganization matters.

The Brown Committee held exhaustive hearings and brought in a bill, with the approval of the President, embodying its recommendations. Numerous faults in the present arrangement of the boards and bureaus of the Government were pointed out. The existing system, it was shown, was a hodge-podge which had grown up as the expediency of the moment or the pressure of special interests, from time to time, had dictated.

The Committee's report called attention, incidentally, to the constantly changing character of the governmental organization. "Hardly a session of Congress

HOW EXPENDITURES OF U. S. HAVE GROWN IN LAST SIX YEARS

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

WASHINGTON, March 8.

THE upward curve of Federal expenditures, despite the savings effected under the "Coolidge economy" program, is shown in the following table:

Fiscal Year.	Ordinary Expenditures.	Surplus.
1924	$3,506,677,715	$505,366,986
1925	3,529,643,446	250,505,238
1926	3,584,987,973	377,767,817
1927	3,493,584,519	635,809,922
1928	3,643,519,875	398,828,281
1929 (estd.)	3,794,745,469	36,990,192

How appropriations have grown is indicated by the comparative figures for the last four sessions of Congress, covering the nine regular annual supply bills:

First session Sixty-ninth Congress	$2,528,046,805
Second session Sixty-ninth Congress	2,608,527,602
First session Seventieth Congress	2,906,585,736
Second session Seventieth Congress	3,072,873,162

This table of appropriations does not include permanent appropriations which are estimated by the Budget Bureau to amount to $1,378,679,735 for the next fiscal year. Neither does it take into account deficiency appropriations, which amounted to $346,945,425 during the first session of the Seventieth Congress and to $212,001,443 during the second session.

WHAT HAPPENED IN THE ITALIA, HOMEWARD BOUND FROM NORTH POLE, IS NOW REVEALED BY GEN. NOBILE

First Detailed Statement of Events in Dirigible When, After Repairing One Damage Which Imperiled Crew, Another Occured and Brought the Italia Crashing on the Ice Below—No Panic at Any Time, Declares Commander.

FOLLOWING one of the most remarkable trials in history, during which scores of documents and hundreds of witnesses were examined behind closed doors, the Board of Inquiry appointed by Premier Mussolini of Italy has adjudged Gen. Umberto Nobile responsible for the loss of the airship Italia and eight of its crew in the Arctic.

It also has condemned him for permitting himself to be the first rescued by the Swedish aviator, Lieut. Einar Lundborg.

During the trial not one word of the testimony was made public, either in condemnation of Gen. Nobile or in his defense. A series of exclusive articles by Gen. Nobile, giving for the first time his own dramatic story of the disaster and the scientific achievements of the expedition as he sees them, has been obtained. In effect, these articles constitute his defense. The first of these articles is presented herewith. The others will follow day by day until the series is completed.

By GENERAL UMBERTO NOBILE,
Commander of the Ill-Fated North Pole Expedition of the Italian Dirigible Italia.

Gen. Umberto Nobile, drawn from a very recent photograph.

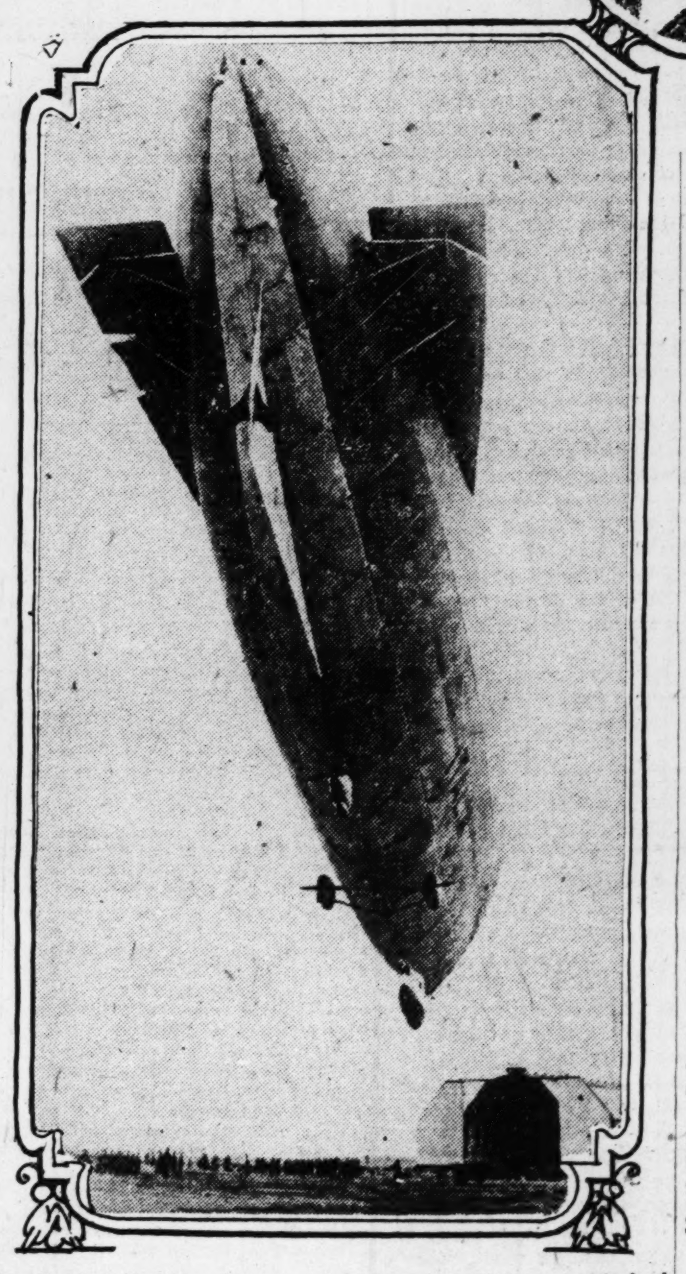
MANY people have an idea that the polar expedition of the dirigible Italia began only on the day of the catastrophe, or, at most, from the flight which ended in disaster. They are also unaware of the most important vicissitudes of that flight.

In one of the many books that have been published in Europe, on what has been called the "polar drama of the Italia," I read that the Italia had flown from Rome to King's Bay, and thence it had left on the morning of May 23, 1928, and had flown directly to the North Pole.

Arriving at the top of the earth, the cross given by the Holy Father and the Italian flag were dropped and the Italia had begun her return voyage, during which the accident occurred.

Thus for many people, all our enterprise was reduced to a simple aerial voyage from Italy to the Pole, to the letting fall of a flag and a cross on the Pole, and to an accident. The two previous flights accomplished by the Italia in the polar regions—one of which was most important — simply did not exist. Consequently the people are also ignorant of the very considerable scientific works undertaken during these voyages, although I mentioned them at the time in my wireless reports.

I shall rapidly summarize the adventures of the last hours of the final flight before describing the two earlier flights and their scientific achievements.



The Italia, showing elevator fins at rear which were choked with ice at one stage of the flight returning from the Pole.

After our departure from the North Pole, which we left at 2 in the morning of May 24, we continually encountered wind and fog. I say fog, but sometimes it was really a low cloud.

The wind reached an intensity of 24 to 32 miles an hour, hindering our advance. We proceeded slowly and with notable deviations from the pre-established route, because the airship steered very badly.

On the other hand, we were never able to ascertain our position by the height of the sun. Only in the neighborhood of the Pole, and then at short intervals, were we able to navigate above the fog.

As the fog became higher and higher—and it was necessary not to lose sight of the ground to be able to ascertain our speed and direction—we descended below it. From that moment we steered through wind and fog for 30 hours without ever being able to discern the sun or even a tiny opening of sky.

When one steers under such conditions, the mind is always depressed; the fatigue of long sleepless hours is felt more.

Apart from this depression of spirits and fatigue, which was not outwardly manifested, during the day of the 24th and the night of the 24th-25th perfect order reigned on board. Each one attended to his duty, rarely giving himself even a short hour of repose.

Starts His Third Motor to Increase Ship's Speed

At the beginning of May 25 the weather did not show any signs of improvement. Malmgren (the Swedish meteorologist) was very anxious and advised me to force the velocity so that we should reach our northern base as quickly as possible. Therefore I started the third motor, which was not usually used during the flight, and increased the number of revolutions of the other two.

The real speed of the airship thus had reached and even surpassed 62 miles an hour, but now we advanced over the ground with a speed of barely 24 miles hourly.

Naturally, forcing the speed in this manner notably increased the amount of gasoline consumed. Therefore more than ever it was imperative to ascertain our position, [illegible] be able to calculate what quantity of gasoline was needed to reach King's Bay. We still had an abundant supply on board, but not sufficient to ignore regulating [illegible] the amount consumed.

In the hours that immediately preceded the disaster, my chief occupation was that of controlling the route with frequent measurements of speed, direction and radio hearings. I attended to these controls with the collaboration of two of the three naval officers on board. The third took turns with Malmgren at the rudder.

Most of Dirigible's Gas Still Within Its Envelope

The dirigible was very light, as I had hardly ever opened the valves to let the gas escape from the envelope.

Every now and then we were struck by fierce gusts of snow. Incrustations of ice formed everywhere, and, from time to time, some piece would detach itself from the propeller projecting from the sides of the airship.

These projectiles of ice were chiefly thrown from the small propeller which served to put the motor of the wireless cabin in action. Therefore, I kept an eye on that propeller, and when it stopped, I took care, personally, to detach the ice, which continued to form rapidly.

According to our calculations of route, we were near the northern coast of Spitzbergen, but we soon perceived that we were mistaken, because land was not to be seen.

Our navigation proceeded thus between the uncertainties of the route and anxiety over the amount of gasoline consumed, when an accident occurred.

The elevator control stopped and remained fixed in such a position that the dirigible was bound to descend. The trouble was due to ice having formed inside the mechanism.

Stops Motors to Check Descent of the Airship

When I perceived this, I stopped the motors. It was the only way of preventing a fall. After this was done, I was no longer anxious, because I was quite sure that the descent would be immediately stopped, with the airship given greater lightness.

This, in fact, is what happened. We descended for a minute or two, then began to rise slowly again.

In the meantime I had called the chief technician, Ceccioni, who was resting in the interior of the ship, to repair the damage to the rudder. While Ceccioni worked, the dirigible continued its ascent through the fog, which was becoming lighter, indicating that it was vanishing.

At this moment Mariano, the first officer on board, proposed that we should rise above the fog to take the height of the sun. We would then be able to ascertain our whereabouts through astronomical determination, which had not been done since we were in the neighborhood of the Pole. I assented and let the airship continue upward until it emerged above the fog.

After the height of the sun had been taken, I started the motors, and for some minutes the navigation continued above the fog. We

Byrd Party Making Ready For Year of Isolation In Bay of Whales Camp

Permanent Quarters Put Into Condition in Preparation for the Long Antarctic Night.

BAY OF WHALES.

COMMANDER BYRD and his men shortly will be settled in their Antarctic home on a vast tableland of shifting ice, where they will live for a year in absolute isolation. It is an isolation which can hardly be imagined except by those who have seen this continent and those who know that in a short time they will be imprisoned by intense cold and an encircling band of ice which nothing can penetrate.

It is a strange home. The Bay of Whales is not a bay of ruffled water between gentle rolling hills or walls of stone. It is a great level plain of ice between the Barrier cliffs, which are broken into inlets and promontories. Along the sides are distorted and broken ice masses forced up to a height of 10 or 15 feet. The bay extends inland further than we can see from the deck of the ship, although when the sun shines in the south the far away hills of the Barrier snow shine softly against the gold and old rose sky.

Pictures Antarctic Landscape.

About three miles in from the edge of the bay, ice on the eastern side is a high cape, gleaming with an internal blue light, which fades imperceptibly into glistening white, topped by an overhanging cornice formed by drifting snow. The trail to the base leads toward it between the high sentinels of up-ended ice cakes over a pressed-up and undulating floor. There are a few seal holes from which a black nose will lift and puff gently before sinking back out of sight, and nearby a heavy and somnolent seal will roll over and lift a lazy head before dropping back into slumber.

There is nothing else — only snow and ice, majestic walls, the interminable stretch of Barrier, and the cold wind blowing from the lonely land beyond.

Past the cape the trail turns to the east and ahead stretch the narrow limits of our inlet, walls of ice on either side. The snow deeply covers the old ice here, and our little harbor probably has not been clear of ice for many years. On the south side of the inlet the snow sweeps up in a long concave slope to the Barrier edge and on the north it curls up toward the blue ice cliff and breaks just before reaching it, leaving a wide crevasse. The snowy covering over the ice floor of the inlet becomes deeper inland so that the trail gradually slopes upward until at the end it rises in a swift approach to the top of the Barrier. And there, startling in its incongruity, is "Little America."

Houses Buried in Snow

There are three houses about two feet of their orange sides showing above the snow in which they are buried. Inland from the first two houses—one must say inland just as one uses ashore for there is no nomenclature to meet these conditions where the "land" is ice—inland are the piles of supplies, yellow barrels of gasoline, tarpaulin covered cases of instruments and valuable equipment, huge stacks of provision boxes.

Three tall wireless masts look like the derricks of an oil field, and on one side are the airplanes, their wings extended over the snow as if eager for flight. Surely, no stranger sight was ever seen against the white purity of Antarctica.

It is a beautiful spot. The vast stretches of Barrier, the long, sweeping lines of hills gleaming with hues that ever change, fading imperceptibly and then glowing softly like a symphony in color, hold one with an irresistible fascination. Overwhelming solitude and the stillness of death brood over the awful immobility of this frozen land. One cannot look upon it unmoved.

Little America's First Settlers.

Behind our tiny settlement the slope descends into a shallow valley through which runs a line of haycocks, as small conical mounds of snow are called—mounds which usually mark the presence of an old crevasse. The valley vanishes at the foot of another far-away hill, showing only when the sun touches its sides with brilliant light. This is the setting for Little America, sometimes shining under the midnight sun, again shrouded in snow which drives before a bitter wind, and soon to be cloaked in darkness.

It has grown by constant toil and struggle. When the spot was first selected by Commander Byrd there was only a lone gull sitting on the snow, looking almost as big as a dog in the weird light conditions which frequently play tricks with our eyes. When the Commander went back to the ship Carl Petersen, a tall, amiable, fair-haired Norwegian, one of our radio operators, and Bernt Balchen remained as the first settlers. They lived in a small tent, cooked on a primus stove, slept soundly in their fur bags and had a delightfully peaceable time until the dog teams began to arrive. In a few days there were several small tents pegged down in the snow and about 20 men living there. They were dog drivers and others who were engaged in receiving and sorting supplies, erecting houses and stowing all the infinite variety of gear which must be readily accessible to the combination flying and sledging expedition. It is a complete organization.

Building the Settlement.

It will always be a picturesque village, but it was perhaps most so during the first days when sledges were hauling stuff in over a new trail, winding between pressure ridges and small seal holes, the slopes of which have since grown to proportions which tax all the drivers' ingenuity and strength. It was located first at the foot of the slope leading to the Barrier in order to obtain shelter from the wind. The dog crates were hauled in and placed in long lines, a regular dog village, from which at regular intervals during the night would come the mournful chorus of huskies howling at the sky, a chorus which begins with one solitary and wailing note, is taken up by the others and ends in a few minutes as if cut short by the baton of a leader.

The tents were further in, tiny affairs, some of them big enough for two men, but most of them only large enough for one. They were not the trail tents, but extra ones which were accumulated during the expedition preparations. The sight of men wriggling from them would arouse any one's risibilities. The call for breakfast came from the cook, who went from tent to tent and with violent commentaries upon the habits and personality of each individual, managed to rouse the sleeping camp.

Adventures of a Kitchen.

Heaves and grunts and movements shook the tent sides as men crawled from their bags in the confined space and in the chilly atmosphere began hurriedly to dress. Fur-clad heads would be shoved out, mittened hands would wave wildly in the air as the owner pawed the snow away from the tent opening and then came stiffly out on hands and knees. The dogs, seeing movement, would begin to bark and jump about, and if two dogs could get near Holding Companies and Electric Rates.

To the Editor of the Post-Dispatch:

YOUR editorial on holding companies gives the impression that there are more holding than operating companies, while in the electrical utilities field there are only 150 holding companies and over 4000 operating companies. The holding company has been a necessity in the electrical development of the country and will be for some time to come.

Its function has been to overcharge developed sections and use the profits in territory that could not be expected to pay for some years. Missouri has been mostly developed from overcharges in Illinois. Oak Hill, Ill., has probably contributed more to rural development in Missouri than St. Louis and Kansas City combined. Not that the overcharge has not been plenty, but that it was not used in Missouri.

There should be no reason to be afraid of any holding or operating company's paper—any business that carries an average spread of 800 per cent between production cost and selling price can pay interest on bonds and dividends on stock. State regulation is not to be expected to bother anyone. After from 15 to 20 years of regulation no State has anything to show that they have gained from it, or any utility to have suffered by it. Rates are just what they always were.

The cents per K. W. H. may change as the dollar goes up or down in value but rates stay of the three original types—there is the political type for residential use, or service below cost used where the district is not politically safe for either party. There is the competitive rate for large consumers. It is in competition with other sources of light and power. Then the all-the-traffic-will-bear rate, used for commercial light and small power and for residential use if a majority can be depended on to vote for a certain political party regardless of issues. If there is no State regulation city elections must be watched closer and the traffic will not bear so much.

This covers the situation very completely as it is now and there is nothing in sight to make one believe there would be any change.

To the Editor of the Post-Dispatch:

I BEG to differ with your editorial entitled "Exit Narcosan."

Last April, through the courtesy of Sergt. Roach of the St. Louis police force, I put a boy that had applied to me for employment in the City Hospital for treatment for the use of morphine. This boy was not an addict, but a dope fiend and had been on it for 21 years.

The treatment at the hospital was wonderful and thorough. They released him to me in 21 days. After resting a week he went to work and has been thoroughly and completely cured of any desire to use it. If narcosan is administered as per instructions and proper care taken of the patient it is a complete success. This boy came out like a new man with a new lease on life.

Science Verging on Chaos.

To the Editor of the Post-Dispatch:

IN the March Harper's Prof. P. W. Bridgman of Harvard, under the title, "The New Vision of Science," tells us that the latest experiments in the study of atomicity and radioactivity lead to the conclusion "that nature is intrinsically and in its elements neither understandable nor subject to law." He says that, following Newton's discovery of the law of gravitation and until recently, science held that all things were subject to law, and that by studying nature's laws we could more and more reach an understanding of the universe.

Now, we are told, scientists have found that the two smallest things subject to experiment, the electron and an atom of radiation, when one bombards the other, are not subject to the well-known laws found when a couple of billiard balls collide. It is impossible to predict what will happen, because it is impossible to measure the position and velocity of these infinitesimal things with accuracy. Hence we enter a field where knowledge itself is stopped. The law of cause and effect must be given up and, says Prof. Bridgman, our ordinary concepts based on physics as heretofore understood must be abandoned.

Is not the conclusion too far fetched? Because the materials dealt with are too small for our instruments, or because they are in their nature nothing but points of energy, why may they not be subject to laws which we have not yet been able to formulate but which may be as real and valid as the laws we are familiar with? I take it that these atomic points are unlike anything so far subject to experiment. We are in the infancy of this new science. The only complete stumbling block may be that our instruments can never be made fine enough to go to the bottom of their mystery. But even then, why say that nature in its elements is not subject to law?

THE MEXICAN REVOLUTION.

The policy adopted by the Hoover administration for the recognized and friendly Mexican Government in connection with the revolution is in accord with sound principle and precedent. The administration has cut off war supplies to the rebel forces, but permits the sale of guns, munitions and airplanes to the Mexican Government. Although no request has been made for permission to move Mexican troops on American soil, it is understood that if such a request is made, it will, as in the Huerta uprising, be granted.

The killing of two Americans, one a child in El Paso, by a stray bullet, the other an American in Juarez, during the fighting in that city, is not likely to cause complications, but will be treated as unfortunate incidents growing out of the revolution, for which the Mexican Government is not directly responsible.

The meeting of the Cabinet for discussion of the policy of the United States has some significance beyond that question. It indicates that the revolutionary outbreak in Mexico is not regarded as a mere sporadic local uprising, but may become formidable. The news indicates widespread revolutionary activities by considerable forces. The revolutionists have captured important points and apparently have strong support in a number of States in the North.

The news, however, is not dependable. Government censorship is working effectively on one side. News sources on the other cannot be trusted. We shall probably not know the extent and strength of the revolution until further developments. Former President Calles is in command of the army and seems to be acting promptly and vigorously. He is a man given to that sort of action.

The revolution, whatever may be its causes, is profoundly disappointing to the friends of Mexico. We were beginning to think that the Government had reached a position of stability and popular support that would preclude further armed revolution. Whether it is stable and popular enough and has the organized strength to dispose of this uprising promptly and thoroughly and to restore law and order has yet to be demonstrated. Undoubtedly there has been widespread discontent and resentment on account of the heavy hand of Calles, who although out of the presidency, is still the power behind the Government. His drastic enforcement of drastic laws dealing with land and religion has created a situaton favorable to the schemes of opposing political leaders.

While the purposes of the reform leaders in control of the Government have been good, some of their methods have been unwise and provocative of resentment, particularly in dealing with the churches. The plans of the reformers for equitable distribution of lands, to relieve the people of peonage and to break the clerical control of politics are approved by intelligent liberals everywhere. Drastic action against the churches has been generally condemned.

The revolution, whatever its outcome, may and ought to have a salutary effect on political leadership in Mexico. It may teach the leaders one lesson from history, that the customs, institutions and thought, particularly the religious views of a people, cannot be changed by force over night. These processes are evolutionary. This lesson is being learned by dictators all over the world. This leaf from history would be valuable for those responsible for the government in Mexico. It would substitute reason for arbitrary force and lay the foundation of stability.

WATER RESOURCES OF MISSOURI.

According to a report just issued by the Missouri School of Mines at Rolla, the Gasconade, 265 miles, is the longest river wholly within the State. The Meramec, 194 miles, is second. The Osage River, with 150 miles in Kansas, flows 250 miles through Missouri, and the Big and the Burbeuse rivers are respectively 125 and 108 miles long. The River des Peres, 22 miles, is one of the shortest rivers in the State.

There are 62 Missouri springs which average more than a million gallons a day. The five largest, in the order named, are Big, Greer, Welch, Double and Meramec. Big Spring averages 242,000,000 gallons daily, Meramec Spring 84,000,000. There are five Blue springs. One of these, flowing into the Current River just above Van Buren, is among the largest springs in the State.

Missouri has 12 Bear creeks, 12 Big creeks, 8 Honey creeks, 10 Clear creeks, 9 Muddy creeks and 10 Indian creeks. There are also several Dry creeks. Macon County has a Hoover Creek, which may be the reason for a Republican presidential majority in the county last November while all other important county offices went to Democrats.

THE WHITE HOUSE SPOKESMAN DIES.

One of Mr. Hoover's first acts as President was to announce the demise of the White House spokesman—a mythical person who was the bane of Washington correspondents during the Coolidge administration. Mr. Coolidge used the spokesman to avoid direct quotation. When he had a statement to make the reporters were forbidden to attribute it to the President and hence resorted to circumlocutions in which "it was learned upon high authority" or "a White House spokesman thought the President might do so and so."

Mr. Hoover is willing to have his utterances used between quotation marks, a policy which brought forth loud huzzas from the men gathered at the President's first conference with the press. It means that presidential interviews will not only be easier to write, but they will be more interesting to read and the public will no longer be puzzled by the fictitious figure of the White House spokesman.

Some anxiety as to Mr. Hoover's attitude toward the press was caused by the censorship of news exercised aboard the battleship Utah while Mr. Hoover was making his good-will tour of Latin America. No explanation of that incident has ever been made, but Mr. Hoover made it clear that, as President, he wishes to develop as free a relationship with the press as possible. To that end, he not only continues the institution of regular press conferences, but he intends to broaden its usefulness. Furthermore, he announced his willingness to see individual correspondents at any time about matters not of general interest.

As Food Administrator and as Secretary of Commerce, Mr. Hoover would have been unable to carry out his policies without the aid of the press. As President, he will have even greater need of it, for his technique as an administrator involves the use of wide publicity. He shows his wisdom in his quick establishment of an entente cordiale with the Washington correspondents.

MR. ROOT'S MISSION.

"Other lawyers tell me what I can't do. Root shows me what I can do." Legend accredited the late E. H. Harriman with that sententious judgment. Myth or truth, there is no question as to the extraordinary resourcefulness of Elihu Root, who is just now, unofficially, trying to plat a way by which the United States may become a member of the World Court.

It is a high mission Mr. Root has undertaken. His labors are naturally inspired with zeal and pride. He is, in a way, the father of the World Court, as the author of its charter. But is it not a bit preposterous that Mr. Root's acumen, skill and prestige should be drawn upon to devise a plan for our adherence to that tribunal which is acceptable to the other nations and at the same time adequately safeguards our interests?

There are traditions and policies which we cannot submit to the jurisdiction of any court, but with reservations covering those points may we not in all confidence and security join in this exalted effort to settle differences between nations in the spirit of justice by the process of law?

If our attitude towards the World Court is correctly defined by the entrance conditions imposed by the Senate we announce our distrust of the honor and good intentions of other nations.

That is an unworthy sentiment, and as long as it dominates the chancelleries of the world peace will continue to be an interlude between wars.

WHAT PROF. CHAPMAN FOUND.

Prof. Roy Chapman Andrews has not found the Dawn Man in the Gobi Desert, though he still hopes to do so. Meanwhile, he has found the bones of the giant baluchithere, a colossal hornless rhinoceros which exceeded in bulk even the great dinosaurs which disported on the receding ocean shores of the Northwestern United States. The baluchithere stood 17 feet high at the shoulders. It had a browsing height of 27 feet, exceeding that of the tallest giraffe.

Indeed, it has been discovered by the expedition which the American Museum of Natural History has maintained in the Gobi Desert over the past six years that what is probably the most inhospitable part of the world and the one therefore most barren of creature life now was one day the ideal home of the most abundant and extravagant creature life that the world has ever known. It was from this central region, says Prof. Henry Fairfield Osborn, that all the mammals and reptiles radiated to the rest of the world. The progenitors of their kind everywhere, they enjoyed there, says Prof. Osborn, "the most favorable climatic and environmental conditions that the mammalian kingdom has ever enjoyed, not excepting the highly propitious conditions of the modern equatorial African uplands. Under those favorable conditions of fertile and relatively well-watered uplands and broad level plains, or partly meandering streams bordered with forests and succulent vegetation, there arose new races of quadrupeds surpassing in size and grandeur even the great titantotheres of America or the great mammoths that in Northern Africa and Southern Eurasia marked the close of the age of mammals and the beginning of the age of man."

The paleontologist does not attempt to tell us that changing conditions at last destroyed this fantastic creation. He leaves us to assume that it disappeared in the course of evolution. Prof. Osborn estimates that the era of man is now 1,000,000 years old. That of the mammals he estimates at 54,000,000 years, continuing through four geological periods, the pliocene, miocene, oligocene, and eocine. The age of reptiles is estimated at 100,000,000 years, covering the upper cretaceous, or closing age of the dinosaurs, 40,000,000; the lower cretaceous or age of the iguadont dinosaurs, 25,000,000, and the jurassic, or age of the giant dinosaurs, 35,000,000.

What Prof. Chapman therefore found was the largest of all known creatures, which lived in Gobi when that desert was a garden, or some 155,000,000 years ago.

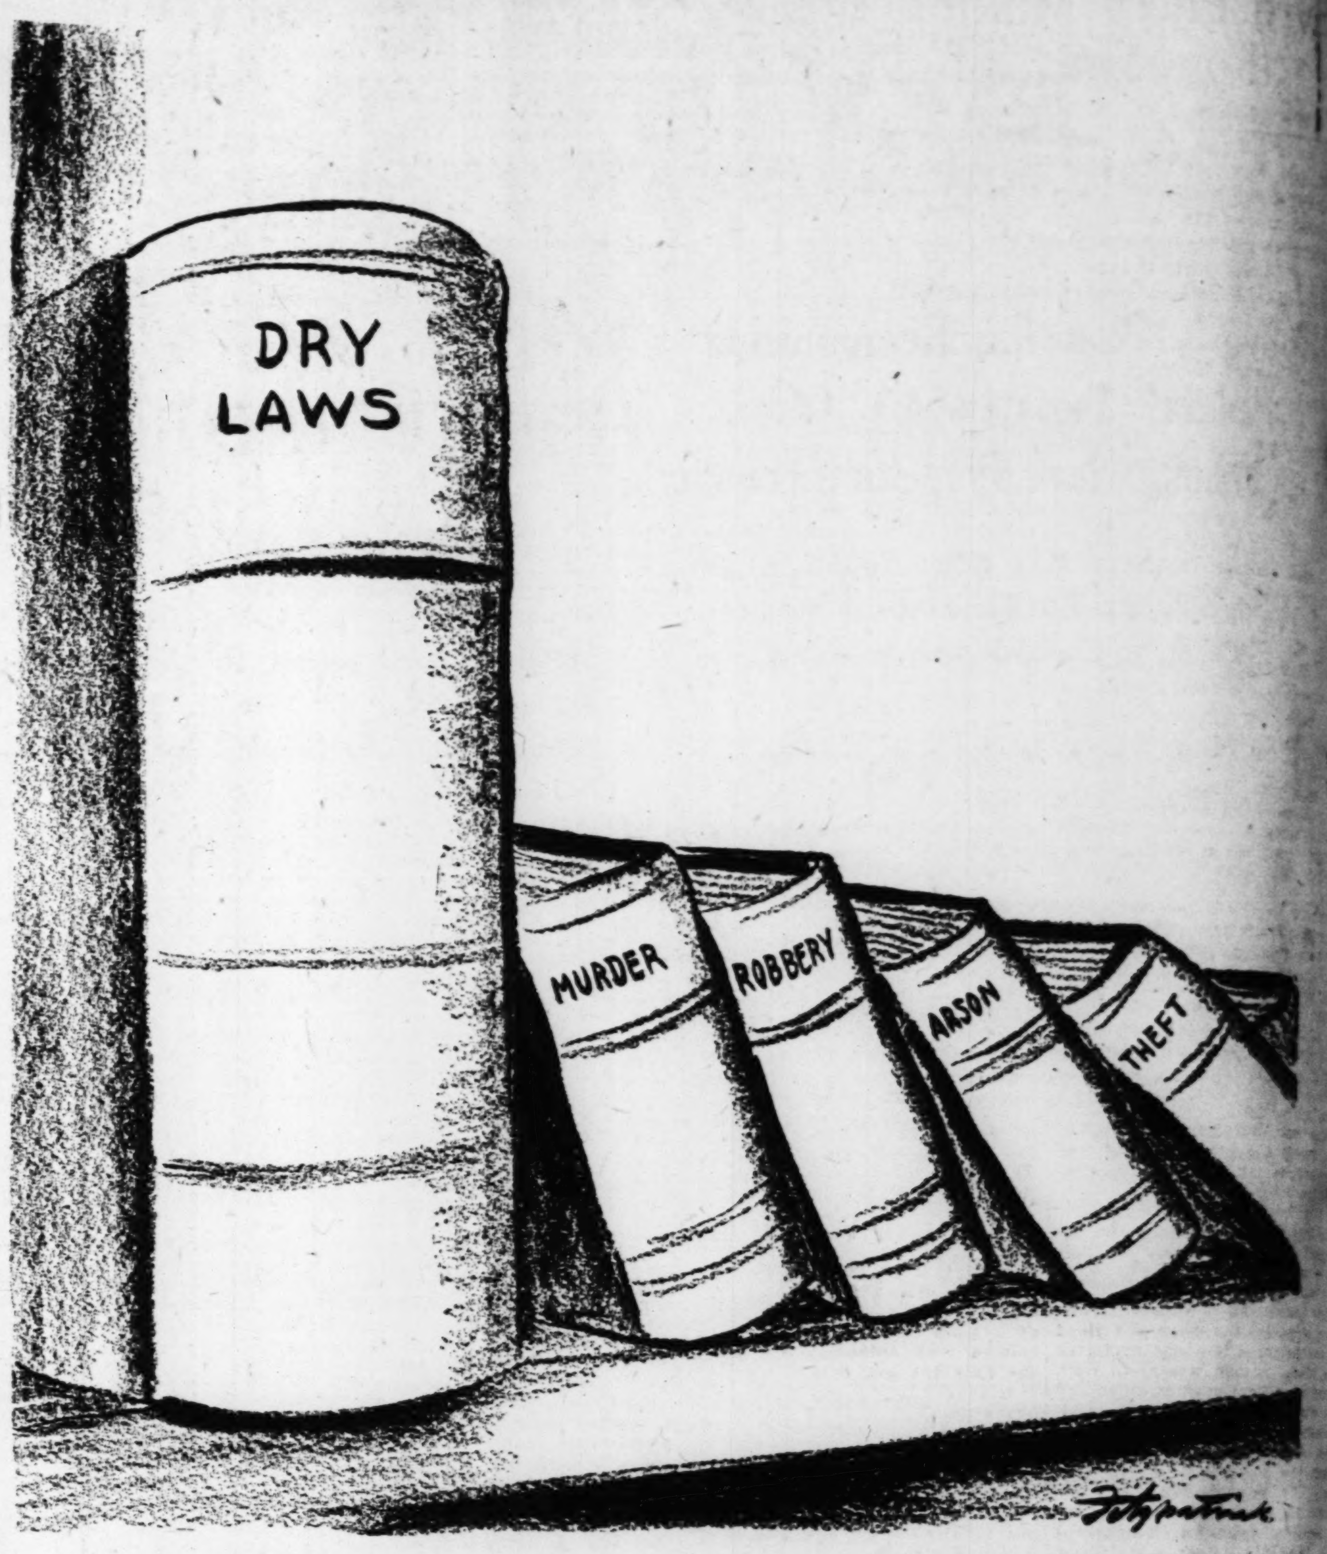
DOCTOR, NURSE, PATIENT.

"The question of reducing the cost of sickness to the public is the most important matter before the medical profession today." That statement was recently made by Mr. Hoover's Secretary of the Interior, Dr. Ray Lyman Wilbur, speaking as chairman of the "National Committee on the Cost of Medical Care." Dr. Wilbur further stated that at present the physician is not well paid, the nurse more poorly paid than the teacher and yet "illness is often a financial calamity to the individual or family."

The question, obviously, is one of great public interest. Dr. Wilbur has no solution. He thinks it imperative that medicine and surgery, now "badly organized from the standpoint of economy," should strive for the efficiency of the business world. He believes, too, that the tremendous investments in plants for the instruction of medical students is unwise and urges that some of that money could wisely be expended in postgraduate training, facilities for which, he says, are seriously inadequate. But even if those suggestions were acted on, which seems unlikely, the problem of the cost of sickness for the public would remain substantially as it is.

Perhaps there is no solution. Perhaps the cost of sickness, like the cost of living, has moved up to new altitudes, there to remain. One wonders, in this connection, about the hospital experiment announced with a flourish of publicity by Henry Ford several years ago. Mr. Ford, it will be recalled, condemned as unfair and uneconomic the medical or, in especial, the surgical practice of charging according to the patient's capacity to pay. He argued that an appendix was an appendix, whether it belonged to a rich man or a poor man, and that its removal should be performed at a fixed price. The Ford idea, in a word, was a one-price hospital. In the extensive Ford biography compiled since that announcement, we have seen no reference to this enterprise.

Certainly there is something wrong with a condition where the doctor is ill paid, the nurse hardly able to make ends meet and the sick man bankrupt. "Something wrong" does not express it. It's all wrong. But if the invincible Henry has tried and failed, who will, or can, find a way out?



OUR PRESENT CODE.

Freedom of the Seas

Blockade, Great Britain's traditional weapon in war, has become more dangerous to herself than to others in this day of submarine and airplane; to abolish this weapon in favor of freedom of the seas would be to her advantage, thinks British weekly, which strongly favors an Anglo-American entente as a guarantee of world peace.

From the MANCHESTER GUARDIAN.

THE most powerful weapon used in the Great War was the stranglehold of blockade. Without it the total defeat of the Germans in November, 1918, would have been impossible. But it also came very near to achieving the total defeat of Great Britain, and, with her, of all the Allied Powers, in April, 1917. The blockade against Germany was carried out by the British fleet—at that time the most formidable ever known—aided by the powerful French, Italian, Japanese, and, later on, American fleets, as well as by the circumstance that Germany, being surrounded by her Continental enemies, was blockaded by land as well as by sea.

But the blockade against Great Britain was carried out by a few German submarines with bases a long way off and with no access to the English Channel because of the narrowness and consequent inviolability of the Straits. How was it that these few submarines (of a now old-fashioned and relatively ineffectual type) could be almost as formidable to this country as the tremendous combined armadas and armies of the Allied Powers? The reason is that this country is hypersensitive to blockades, and much more so now than during the war. Except in special circumstances such as existed then and will surely never exist again, none of the great Continental Powers can be blockaded as effectively as Germany was in the war. But to blockade Great Britain and inflict on her a defeat far more catastrophic than even the defeat that came upon Germany nothing would have been needed save a few more German submarines.

Today a Continental naval Power with suitable bases could swiftly defeat this country, all the more so as aeroplanes (against which there is no adequate defence) would complete the work of the hostile submarines. Indeed, it is possible that merchant shipping in the English Channel would be destroyed more rapidly by attack from the air above than from the water below. Total defeat could come without the landing of one enemy or the bursting of one shell on British soil, or the loss of one British soldier, because Great Britain can feed herself for no more than seven weeks. Blockade, our traditional weapon in war, has become far more dangerous to ourselves than to others.

It follows that to abolish this weapon altogether would only be an advantage to Great Britain. Indeed, more than this—it might be her and the Empire's salvation. And more even than this, the peculiar part which the right of capture at sea has played and still plays in Anglo-American relations makes it seem reasonable to hope that if maritime law were modified so as to suit both modern needs and modern ideals the only possible cause of an armed conflict between this country and the United States would be removed, the two countries could at last begin to co-operate effectively in world affairs, and the full consequences of the Kellogg pact could work themselves out.

It is hardly an exaggeration to say that world affairs reveal no problem of greater importance than the problem commonly known as the "freedom of the seas." Indeed—and this again is hardly an exaggeration—if Great Britain and the United States come to an agreement in which maritime law will have been revised so that the principle of the freedom of the seas will be carried out, then the cause of universal peace will have been won, whereas if they do not come to such an agreement this cause will have been lost. We publish an important letter from an authority who states the essence of the problem in the words: "The truth is that for the two Powers inheriting a common civilization and to a large extent common ideals the freedom of the seas rightly understood in the light of the new conditions is a common objective, not a matter of dispute. We both want freedom and we both want peace." That is undoubtedly so.

Anglo-American relations have been badly disturbed by the abortive "naval compromise" and by our new entente with France, by our failure to accept the Kellogg pact without reservations, by the anti-Americanism of our reactionaries, who have helped the cruiser bill to pass the Senate and have given the American Admirals all the encouragement they need. But in the last few weeks there has been an improvement. The immense interest taken in the King's illness throughout the United States, where it received as much publicity as it did here, has been a revelation on both sides of the Atlantic.

There is in this country a growing recognition that friendship with the United States should be the supreme object of our foreign policy, and that the only permissible entente is one with America. The new entente with France still stands, but the movement against it has developed on a broad front—a movement inspired by dislike of any British commitments on the European continent, by a real uneasiness over the danger to our relations with the United States, and, ultimately, by the resolve, deeply felt by the people of this country, that there shall never be another war, and a strong and very sound suspicion that a lasting Anglo-French entente means another war as surely as an Anglo-American entente means no more war.

In the United States, who have made that magnificent and original contribution to the world's peace, the Kellogg pact, there is absolute readiness, indeed eagerness, to discuss a revision of maritime law with a view to establishing the freedom of the seas. In this country there is still a certain reluctance to follow the American lead, for the Admiralty is strong, and we do not easily break with old and deeply ingrained traditions. Nevertheless, the desire to compete with the United States in naval armaments is not felt even by the British Government—it never existed amongst the British people—there have been no American "naval scares" as there once were German "naval scares," and the passage of the cruiser bill has been accepted without the slightest ill-will by the British public.

The time is therefore ripening for an Anglo-American conference on the freedom of the seas. The very idea that such a conference should fail is altogether intolerable.

WASHINGTON
DAY BY DAY

WASHINGTON, March 16.

ON the grounds of Washington Cathedral, within a small iron enclosure, there grows one of the most famous trees in all Christian history.

It is the Glastonbury thorn—a part of the original thorn at Glastonbury in England, which tradition says was a growth from the staff of Joseph of Arimathea.

The peculiarity of the thorn is that it blooms irregularly. True to tradition, for which there is evidence running back to the first century of the Christian era, this tree occasionally blossoms on Christmas day.

In medieval times, whenever English royalty visited Glastonbury a bit of the bloom was plucked, placed in a silver box and presented to the member of the royal family making the visit.

This custom was revived in the United States in 1919 when the Prince of Wales visited Washington Cathedral. Although it was the month of November, the tree shot forth two or three blossoms. They were plucked, placed in a silver box and presented the Prince by the Bishop of Washington on the day of his visit. It was on the occasion that the Prince of Wales planted a tree near the peace cross at the Cathedral which is marked by a bronze tablet.

THE Glastonbury thorn, however, is not the only plant material of historic interest to be found in the Cathedral gardens. There are others, and in great abundance.

Ivy from Canterbury Cathedral grows there along with some cedars brought from Lebanon 25 years ago, which are in the Bishop's garden. There is an ancient yew from Port Royal, Va., and a great pine, said to be one of the largest trees ever transplanted in America. Six picturesque holly trees reputed over 100 years old add to the beauty of the garden.

But among the most interesting of these historic trees and shrubs are the boxwoods.

The George Washington boxwood was transplanted in 1925 from an old garden maze at the ruined house, Hayfield Manor, Fairfax County, Va., built in 1761 by George Washington.

THERE is a tall sempervirens variety, brought from Monticello by Thomas Jefferson himself and given to the original owners of the site of the Cathedral.

A remarkable specimen of ancient growth is the Bishop Harding memorial boxwood. It is believed to be more than 200 years old and weighs more than six tons. It was transplanted successfully from a distance of 30 miles, and is believed to have been planted originally by one of the cavaliers of Maryland, possibly Lord Baltimore.

Incidentally, there is to be found in this rare garden a gothic "wheel cross," dating back to the fourteenth century. The steps to the garden house are from the birthplace of Nellie Custis.

And then the breakfast. It was prepared under difficulties at first in a kitchen that was open to the wind. The walls were made of food boxes piled one on another, boards placed across these for a roof and covered with snow. The sides of the food boxes could be opened and the cook had only to reach over and take what he wanted out of the wall. No kitchenette could be handier. The stove was white enameled, using gasoline under pressure. The cook was as queer as his kitchen. He was clad in mukluks and parka and waved his spoon in a mittened hand. One windy day the roof blew off the kitchen and breakfast, dinner and supper consisted of cheese and crackers, with coffee made over a primus stove. It had its disadvantages, this kitchen.

Mess Hall of Snow Blocks.

The mess hall was part of the same unstable structure but its walls were made of blocks of snow and it had no roof. If there was snow on the three tables in the morning they were merely turned over and thoroughly kicked. Snow thrown from the Barrier sifted down into the plates and no matter how warm anything might be when it left the stove it was cold enough before it had been eaten. The walls of this dining room suffered from the sun and gradually become bowed. They bent in more and more until by the time the house was up and the snow building deserted one had to bend well forward at table to avoid wrecking the place.

What rejoicing there was when the first bunk house was put together! Sleeping bags and sea bags were moved in and stacked against the wall, with rolls of blankets and a few boxes. There were no chairs. Men slept on the floor and liked it, except for a few who preferred the tents in mild weather. Both doors were kept open at night and the wind blew through and occasionally deposited a drift inside. A mess table was made of planks and boxes, the stove took up one corner. The portable radio set was placed in another corner so communication could be maintained with the ship. The sun shone through the windows, it was warm and cheery and clean. A few pictures were tacked up on the walls.

Mountain Named for "Chips."

More material and stores arrived at camp, more men were needed, and the small Norwegian house was erected back of the first house. Bunks were put up in it, some of metal, fastened against the wall, and some of wood built by "Chips" Gould the carpenter, after whom Byrd has named a mountain. "Chips" is only happy when he is working. Long and lank, with a disreputable beard which he has little time to clip, his jaws continually working on the tobacco which he reaches for as automatically as he picks up his tools, he goes silently about from place to place and things take shape under the touch of his capable hands. Laconic of speech, he has a quizzical and friendly twinkle in his eye, and a brief word for anyone who speaks to him, but his usual attitude when indoors is one of silent and amused contemplation. Nothing ruffles his serenity.

When the Bolling went back to New Zealand more men were left to work at camp and it became a bustling place. So many things arrived that it was all Capt. Ashley McKinley—who started out as an aerial photographer but has become supply officer temporarily—could do to keep track of them. McKinley is a calm person with a gentle voice and smile, of rather slight physique, but he has been stacking boxes by the hundred until he estimated with a grin that he has lifted two or three hundred tons in the last month. He knows every case and box and can walk to them blindfolded, or could until they were recently covered with two feet of snow. They must eventually be arranged so that they may be easily reached in the winter when the snow will cover everything and the cold and darkness will make work outdoors almost impossible.

scanned the horizon in the hope of seeing the outline of the mountains of Spitzbergen, but nothing was to be seen. I then decided to return below the fog.

Officers and Gen. Nobile Confer on Radio Bearings.

At about 1200 feet altitude, we began our normal course again. The wind seemed to have lessened in intensity. I followed up the radio bearings and the measurements of speed together with the naval officers.

Malmgren, under the control of Zappi, was at the helm. Ceccioni, helped by Troiani, continued at the elevator control, which he had not left since I had called him to repair the damage. In the rear of the cabin, Mariano and Viglieri were examining the plan of route, while Behounek continued his scientific measurements. Biogi was at his post in the wireless cabin.

At 10:25 I was in the fore part of the cabin at the window, intent on measuring the time of the fall of a glass ball filled with liquid colored with aniline. Calculating the time the ball took in falling, I was able to deduce our height above sea level. Thus I rectified the indications of the instrument for measuring heights.

Suddenly, Ceccioni warned me that the dirigible had become heavier. I turned to look at the instruments. They indicated that it was descending rapidly, though the ship was weighted down at the stern. I instantly perceived the danger, and therefore ordered Troiani to put the motors at full speed, to compensate dynamically the weighing down.

At the same time, wondering if some group of valves had remained open, I ordered Alessandrini, the sailor in charge of the equipment of the dirigible, to go up on the envelope and examine it.

Ship Continues to Plunge Downward Toward Floes.

But I quickly perceived that the dynamic support was insufficient to arrest the descent. The airship continued rapidly downward, notwithstanding the strong upward thrust, that I gave it by increasing the speed and weighing it down at the stern as much as possible. Now we were a very short distance from the ice packs. I realized there was nothing more to be done. The fall was inevitable.

I thought only of lessening the consequences. I had the motors stopped to prevent the dirigible from taking fire and ordered Ceccioni to let fall the chain of lead balls, which served as ballast. Ceccioni's place at the elevator control was taken by Zappi.

We continued to fall. The ice neared us rapidly. Suddenly Malmgren, who was at the rudder, let it go and turned toward me, as if to signify that there was nothing more to be done. Instinctively I took his place and seized with both my hands the rudder which he had abandoned.

A second later I saw the sharp-pointed ice come up to meet us. I calmly awaited the crash. It was terrible. Then something fell on my head. I was flattened. I felt as if something was broken in my body, without feeling any pain. Then I was thrown out. I thought coldly: "Now all is ended."

When I opened my eyes I found I was lying on a tremendously convulsed pack. Near me were Malmgren, Zappi and Ceccioni. Standing were Mariano, Viglieri, Behounek, Troiani and Biogi. I saw the dirigible, now lightened, rise, carried by the wind toward the east. My glance lingered on the large black letters pained on the side, "Italia." Then the dirigible disappeared in the fog.

Nobile Thought He Would Die, Asserts He Was Glad.

All was lost. I saw that I was wounded in the head and had an arm and leg broken. It was difficult to breathe. I believed that I had only two or three hours of life left. I was not sorry. I was glad.

I turned to my companions and exhorted them to raise their thoughts to God, to turn their hearts to our far-off country. Then I gave a cry that broke impetuously from my heart, "Viva l' Italia," and my companions joined.

It was 10:30 on May 25.

From the moment in which Ceccioni, who was at the rudder, gave the first alarm to the instant when we crashed on to the pack, only two or three minutes had elapsed. During this interval absolute calm and order reigned on board. All that could reasonably be done from the first to prevent the fall and lessen the consequences was done. Orders were given and executed with a clearness, promptness and coolness truly exceptional.

The accident was so sudden that today I am still at a loss fully to explain it.

Other articles in this series by Gen. Nobile will be printed in the Post-Dispatch.

NIECE OF SPANISH KING WEDS COUNT IN PRIVATE CEREMONY

Recent Death of Queen Mother Prevents Display at Marriage of Infanta Isabel.

By the Associated Press.

MADRID, March 9.—The Infanta Isabel Alfonsa of Bourbon, a niece of the King of Spain, today was married to Count Zamoisky of Poland, to whom she had been engaged for several months.

Because of the recent death of the Queen Mother, the wedding ceremony, performed at the chapel of the royal palace, was strictly intimate, only members of the immediate family of the bride and palace attendants being present. The Cardinal of Toledo gave the blessing.

The wedding procession started at the chambers of Infanta Isabel, at the palace. It was preceded by a band of lancers playing the nuptial march.

The bride walked with King Alfonso, who was dressed in the uniform of an Admiral of the Spanish navy. She was attired in a white velvet dress, and wore no jewels.

The bridegroom held the arm of Queen Victoria. He was attired in the costume of a "maestrante" of Seville, a dignity to which he was recently elevated by the King. Members of the Spanish Government were present in gala uniforms.

Hoover Plan to Reorganize Departments for Economy

passes without the enactment of legislation creating new executive agencies, transforming old ones, or imposing new or larger duties upon existing establishments," the report said on this point. "Hardly a year goes by when some executive department does not organize a new bureau or division for the purpose of carrying out new requirements of law."

Brown Report in Vain.

The Brown report, like all the previous ones on the same subject, went into a congressional pigeonhole, and there it has remained.

President Coolidge adopted the Harding reorganization policy and linked it with his general economy program. Beyond a few gestures of support in his messages to Congress, he did not push the idea, with the result that during his administration it dropped almost out of sight. President Hoover, therefore, so far as any positive action is concerned, starts work in practically a virgin field.

Why has action been so long delayed? Mr. Hoover answered the question in the speech already quoted:

"Every President from Roosevelt to Coolidge," he said, "has urged upon Congress a reorganization of the executive arm of the Government, commissions have been appointed, congressional committees have investigated, reports have been made. Cabinet officers express their feelings in spirited annual reports. More than once a complete program of reorganization has been formulated, and put forward as a basis for general consideration.

"But practically every single item in such a program has invariably met with opposition of some vested official, or it has disturbed some vested habit, or offended some organized minority. It has aroused the paid propagandists. All these vested officials, vested habits, organized propaganda groups, are in favor of every item of reorganization except that which affects the bureau or the activity in which they are specially interested."

Aware of Difficulties.

That is the complete answer. It is clear that Mr. Hoover is fully cognizant of the troubles he will encounter in trying to get his ideas through Congress.

One of these ideas, as we know from his inaugural address, is that the prohibition enforcement unit should be transferred from the Treasury to the Department of Justice. Every Secretary of the Treasury since the beginning of the Volstead era has favored this change, but the Anti-Saloon League has blocked it.

The only progress that has been made toward a rational regrouping of the bureaus is that made by Mr. Hoover himself as Secretary of Commerce, when he took over from the Interior Department the administration of the Patent Office and the Bureau of Mines. Under the laws creating these bureaus, it was possible for these changes to be made by executive order, without action by Congress. Though the transfer in each case was perfectly logical, it met with the criticism that the Secretary of Commerce was reaching out in an effort to control the whole governmental establishment. Any other changes which Mr. Hoover now has in mind will require the assent of Congress.

Mr. Hoover in his speech to the Chamber of Commerce referred to the "swamp of bad organization." How vast is that swamp may be realized from the fact that the Federal Government now has more than 200 boards, bureaus and commissions with a total of approximately 550,000 employes. These agencies are scattered among the 10 executive departments, under Cabinet officers, and the more than 40 so-called "independent establishments," which are directly under the President or Congress.

How Wastes Arise.

"As these 200 bureaus and agencies are now grouped and organized," said Mr. Hoover, "there are two primary streams of confusion and waste. There is a confusion of basic principles; there is a grouping of Federal bureaus which divides responsibility. Direct wastes arise from overlapping and conflict. Indirectly, large costs are imposed upon citizens by this scattering of functions, and, I may add, by the undue complexity of our laws and regulations of independent agencies. There are too many floating islands in this dismal swamp. They are technically anchored to the President, but are really responsible to nobody.

"With the growing complexity of Government problems, it has been necessary for Congress to delegate to the executive side many secondary legislative functions in the making of regulations, and many secondary judicial functions in the enforcement of them. That is the so-called administrative law. And there has been the crudest mixing of these semi-legislative and semi-judicial functions with purely executive functions. These semi-judicial and semi-legislative duties are frequently entrusted to single officers, while purely administrative functions are often carried on by boards.

"All of this is exactly the reverse of the basic principles of sound administration. Boards and commissions are soundly adapted to the deliberate processes necessary to semi-judicial and semi-legislative and advisory functions, but they are abslutely hopeless where decisive administrative action is necessary. There is not a single successful business organization in the country that confuses such functions the way we do in Government.

Urges Clarifying Duties.

"Every single department, bureau and board in the entire Government should be placed upon the operating table and a clean-cut separation established between semijudicial and semilegislative functions on the one hand, and of administration on the other. The former rightly belongs to boards or commissions, the latter to individuals.

"Our other greatest weakness in organization is the division of authority over services dedicated to the same major purpose by scattering them through unrelated groups."

To illustrate this point, Mr. Hoover gave what he called "a collection of misfits." He cited, among other examples, the scattering of public works contruction among 14 separate agencies of the Government, of conservation of national resources among eight, of direct aids to industry among five, of direct aids to the merchant marine among 14, of direct aids to education among six, of aids to veterans among four, and of public health services among four.

"Under the existing hodge-podge arrangement," he added, "the citizen is driven from pillar to post among the bureaus seeking information he wants. Settling the demands upon him or determining the regulations by which he is required to conduct his business."

Treasury a Dumping Ground.

Every department of the government has its defects, but the one that offends the most against correct principles of organization is the Treasury. Since its establishment it has been the dumping ground of services not important enough to be made into independent departments. Some of these have been removed from time to time, but it is still loaded with extraneous functions. The Treasury has charge of the Bureau of Prohibition, the Public Health Service, the Coast Guard and the office of the supervising architect, none of which has anything to do with the fiscal policy of the Government.

It is the view of all the experts who have studied the question, as well as of the responsible officials of the Treasury itself, that this Department should be stripped of the bureaus having no relation to its primary function.

"The Treasury Department," said the Brown report, "makes no secret of its desire to be rid of the non-fiscal functions which it now exercises, frankly acknowledging not only that they constitute a real embarrassment to the fiscal work of the Department, but also that the departmental officers are not able to give expert supervision to such diversified non-fiscal matters as are represented by the supervising architect's office and the public health service."

"Bristles With Defects."

In addition to the Brown report and the other official studies of the governmental system, President Hoover unquestionably will make use of the report drawn up in 1923 by the Brookings Institute for Government Research, of Washington, an agency which assisted materially in the preparation of the budget act. The institute reported, after an elaborate survey of the workings of the executive branches, that "the system fairly bristles with incongruities and defects." Stress was laid on the desirability of divesting the Treasury of prohibition enforcement and its other non-fiscal duties.

The emphasis which the President in his inaugural speech placed upon education and public health suggests that he may have in mind the creation of a new department within which would be grouped a number of agencies now scattered through half a dozen different departments. President Harding and his Cabinet, in a recommendation to the Brown Committee, proposed the establishment of such a department, to be known as that of Education and Welfare. The Brown Committee accepted the recommendation in substance, but changed the name to the Department of Education and Relief. The Brookings Institute suggested a Department of Education and Science.

Details Not Yet Known.

Exactly what Mr. Hoover intends to do along this particular line has not been made known. He has announced no detail of his plan except that with regard to prohibition enforcement.

No one who knows him, however, expects him to stop at this point. He has it in mind to give the Government departments a housecleaning, to tear out some partitions and build some new ones, and to do a good deal of shifting of furniture. A considerable amount of accumulated dust will fly when he gets started.

To change the metaphor to his own, he will attempt to drain the swamp of bad organization. If his administration succeeds only tin that one respect, it will be entitled to a grateful cheer from the taxpayer.

MISSOURI STATE LIFE TAKES CITY CLUB BUILDING

Foreclosure Leaves Organization Occupying Two Top Floors, With Hotel and Stores Using Remaining Space.

NEGOTIATIONS ON FOR BANK BUILDING

Promoters of De Soto Hotel to Expand Project if Proposed Federal Building Site Is Chosen.

By Berry Moore.

The Missouri State Life Insurance Co., has become the owner of the 15-story City Club Building at the southeast corner of Eleventh and Locust streets, through foreclosure proceedings as the holders of a first deed of trust for $1,100,000, including accumulated interest. It was bid in by the insurance company for $900,000, which, however, is no criteriou for the value of the property.

As a result of the foreclosure proceedings, the second mortgage bonds were automatically obliterated without recourse, according to real estate men, unless the City Club voluntarily assumes the obligation.

The Club will occupy the two top floors, and the Missouri Hotel the lower floors under leases to be executed by the insurance company. The stores on the Locust and Eleventh street fronts, as well as the cafeteria in the basement of the building, will also be occupied under leases from the insurance company. Prior leases of the building were excluded by the foreclosure under the first deed of trust.

Rentals on Better Basis.

Rentals to be paid under the new leases will place the property on a much better investment basis, it is understood. The future of Locust street as a retail center greatly enhances the potential value of this property, which doubtless will be held by the Missouri State Life as a permanent investment. Locust street is expected to receive new impetus with the erection of a large mercantile building on the present site of the Federal Building, as is now being urged.

The Missouri State Life recently acquired the Syndicate Trust and Century Building blocks, facing Olive, Locust and Tenth streets, together with the 12-story Scruggs annex at 916 Locust street for $8,000,000. This transaction was handled by Richard C. Boyle and W. J. Holbrook, president of the Holbrook-Blackwelder Co. Recently the Missouri State Life sought to purchase the Railway Exchange Building—not including the site—encompassing the block from Olive to Locust and Sixth to Seventh streets, but negotiations were either dropped or are in abeyance.

Bank of Commerce Proposals.

Negotiations for several other large down town holdings were begun during the week. These included several proposals for the Bank of Commerce and Federal Commerce buildings occupying an entire half block on the east side of Broadway between Olive and Pine streets. The buildings which rank with the finest office structures in the city, are challenging the attention of large life insurance companies, both as investments and as quarters for their general offices. The Northwestern Life Insurance Co. now occupies several floors in the Bank of Commerce Building at Broadway and Olive street. The ground floor of the building, which is occupied entirely by the Bank of Commerce, has been attracting the attention of brokerage concerns for which it is regarded as especially desirable. The Federal Reserve Bank formerly had its quarters in the building at Broadway and Pine street which was erected by a syndicate headed by Fletcher R. Harris and from which the National Bank of Commerce acquired it.

The Mercantile Commerce Bank & Trust Co., under which the Mercantile Trust Co. and the National Bank of Commerce will function, with the completion of the proposed merger of these banks, has agreed to take over the buildings and site of the Bank of Commerce, embracing the entire east half of this block, at a valuation of $2,750,000. According to real estate men the buildings alone could not be reproduced for near this amount. They are to be offered for sale as soon as the merger is in effect. The Bank of Commerce has agreed to deposit $500,000 in cash or its equivalent to protect the new Mercantile Commerce Bank & Trust Co. in the event of loss from the sale of the building.

Work on De Soto to Be Resumed.

Construction on the new 15-story De Soto Hotel at the northeast corner of Eighth and Market streets, is to be resumed April 1. Five stories of the concrete work had been completed when construction of the hotel was stopped several months ago, pending new financial arrangements, which it is understood have been completed. Several hotel companies, it is understood are negotiating for control of the hotel.

Plans of the promoters of the De Soto Hotel, it is understood, contemplate increasing its height to 20 stories, should the block bounded by Market, Chestnut, Eighth and Ninth streets, be selected for the new Federal Building, as now seems probable from Washington news dispatches. Both Market and Chestnut street would share alike from the buoyant effect of the new Federal Building, which would impart an entirely new atmosphere to this part of the city.

The new hotel will have a total of 355 guest rooms, exclusive of three conference rooms, fully equipped. Every guest room will be provided with a shower and other modern fixtures. The lower level of the building will be equipped with coffee rooms, kitchen and cold storage kitchen, in addition to a large dining room.

There will be two fast passenger elevators and one service elevator.

Plans for the Market and Eighth street fronts, include a tea room, candy shop, news and tobacco stand, and a beauty parlor and barber shop.

The building plans were drawn by the John C. Craven Engineering Co. The Koplar Construction Co., of which Joseph Kopman is president, has the construction contract. George W. Hunter, with offices in the Railway Exchange Building, conceived the hotel building project.

Wenzlick Space in Demand.

Publication of the architect's perspective of the 35-story Wenzlick Tower, designed for the southeast corner of Eleventh and Chestnut streets, has been followed by a flood of applications for space in the proposed building. These are forthcoming principally from attorneys who realize the advantages to be divided from being in close proximity to the new Civil Courts Building, which the new Wenzlick Tower will face.

Chestnut street is expected to receive fresh impetus from this project, which is one of the most noteworthy private building ventures in the history of the city.

DECLINE IN BUILDING CONTRACTS REPORTED

February Figures for 37 States East of Rockies Total $361,273,000.

February construction contracts awarded in the 37 states east of the Rocky Mountains show a decline from January and from the preceding February, according to F. W. Dodge Corporation. Last month's total, $361,273,900, was 12 per cent less than the January, 1929, record, and it was 22 per cent below the total for February of last year.

The decreases may be partly attributed to the fact that last month had four business days less than the preceding month and one business day less than the corresponding month of a year ago.

Two districts made new high totals for February, the new records being reached by New England and Texas. Two other districts, Middle Atlantic states and the Pittsburg district reached totals which were next to the highest ever recorded for February.

The February building and engineering total included the following items: $129,486,400, or 36 per cent of all construction, for residential buildings; $68,265,500, or 19 per cent, for commercial buildings; $57,593,000, or 16 per cent, for public works and utilities, and $56,092,100, or 16 per cent, for industrial projects.

Last month's contract total brought the amount of new construction work started in the 37 Eastern states since the first of this year to $771,241,800, as compared with $892,500,000 for new construction started during the first two months of last year, the decrease being 14 per cent.

Contemplated Projects.

New contemplated projects reported during February reached $772,621,600. This figure was 6 per cent less than the amount reported during January of this year and it was 18 per cent below the amount reported during February of last year.

POST-DISPATCH CLASSIFIED COLUMNS

ANSWERS TO QUERIES

The Post-Dispatch reserves the right to reject any query. Personal and telephone calls or answers by mail cannot be given attention, except letters on medical questions of undoubted sincerity when accompanied by stamped addressed envelope.

MRS. N.—Write the Board of Health, Department of Vital Statistics, of the county to ask for the birth certificate, if you had the birth recorded. The attending physician might be able to tell you if it was recorded.

GALE.—If you have the name of the island and think it is some fictitious land see Lippencott's Gazeteer and see if it is described among geographical names of the world. A map giving detail enough to locate it by latitude and longitude might be found in the public library. See north of Cuba, near San Salvador.

H. W.—If the canoe trip you inquire about was that of Albert S. Tousley and Allen Sulerud in 1925, write the New Orleans Times-Picayune to learn the result, as they were said to be writing articles for that paper. The outcome is not of record here. They claimed that if they completed a canoe trip from the source of the river in Northern Minnesota to its outlet at New Orleans, it would be the first of its kind since 1881. When in St. Louis they had completed 1200 miles of the trip and Post-Dispatch copy of July 24 gives their account of it.

EAST SIDE.—The history of Ham, son of Noah, is given in Genesis 9:22-27. His descendants are named in Genesis 10:16 and in First Chronicles 1:8-16. The curse on Ham was by his father Noah, and appears to be that the descendant of his undutiful son should be a slave to his brethren. "Cursed be Canaan (the youngest son of Ham), A slave shall he be to his brethren."

H. S.—An outline of Government control of liquor in Quebec will be found under 'Canada" in the World Almanac (public libraries and news stands). The regulations are different in different provinces and cannot well be summarized as a so-called Canadian system, which you ask for, other than to say that under the Canadian Constitution the sale of liquor is regulated by provincial, not Federal, authority.

LEGAL INFORMATION

(By a Member of the St. Louis Bar Association)

J. P.—The adoption papers mentioned cannot be annulled.

C. P. G.—Consult a lawyer about your property rights. Under the circumstances you probably could not be prosecuted for bigamy.

CURIOUS.—If your mother left no will, her son, that is, your half-brother, would probably share equally with you in her estate.

A READER.—As to manufacturing a salve from a formula taken from a book, the formula may be registered. Consult a lawyer before using it.

MAC.—Of the stock mentioned, the man's widow would receive half, and the other half would go to his relatives, if he leaves no will, and no children or descendants.

M. E. P.—A man paying alimony here if he left the State would still be under legal obligation to pay alimony and he could be sued and his wages garnished for it in another State.

A. B. C.—You can apply to the Probate Court to be made guardian of the insane person. Consult a lawyer.

MRS. X.—The property in the names of yourself and husband would go to you if he died. The Illinois law is the same as to this.

MRS. S.—As to what recourse you have, you could discharge the doctor and tell him his bill is excessive.

BREESE.—Residence is largely a matter of intention. If you regard St. Louis as your permanent residence, then you would have to take out a nonresident's license for fishing in Illinois. (For answer as to planting potatoes, please write the Agricultural Department, Jefferson City, Mo., for a bulletin.)

STUPID.—(1) Copyrights on all work of the authors, Poe, Hawthorn, Irving, have long since expired. (2) The works of Maeterlinck and Kipling are copyrighted. You would have to get the permission of the owners of the copyright for the use you mention. (3) As for such works as the old English tales, these can be used, but not a copyrighted version of them.

MEDICAL QUESTIONS

Health and sanitation questions of public interest only will be considered. Diagnosis or treatment of individual cases will not be given.

M. E. T.—Diet is important in a "run-down" condition such as you mentio. A list of proper foods will be mailed to you if you send stamped, addressed envelope asking for answer to M. E. T.

MRS. J. B.—The only possible service to offer you for the child with crossed eyes is to recommend a capable oculist, which will be done if you wish to send stamped, addressed envelope, mentioning the case again.

THANK YOU.—As to how long milk may remain in the stomach, the liquid part, taken on an empty stomach, is absorbed in as short a time as one-half hour, whereas the solids must be acted upon and digested before being absorbed, requiring, like ordinary food, from one to three hours. (2) Buttermilk does not increase hyperacidity.

WAITING.—For hair that is thinning: Tincture of cantharides, two drachms; alcohol, four ounces; castor oil, two drachms; bay rum, eight ounces; carbonate of ammonia, one drachm; mix, shake and apply night and morning by gentle rubbing in with tips of fingers. Shampoo with hot water and pure castile soap every four or five days.

L. S.—For very oily scalp: Witch hazel, two ounces; alcohol, two ounces; resorcin, 40 grains; distilled water, one ounce; mix, shake, and apply night and morning. Also take a hot bath followed by an alcoholic rub each alternate day, after which the same lotion may be applied to the skin. Systematic outdoor exercise, and keeping the bowels moving freely, are also advisable.

C. O. D.—Since the blood test continues to show a positive result, consultation with some one experienced and specializing in that line of practice is all that could be advised. If a resident of St. Louis free examination, tests, treatment, etc., will be given at the Municipal Clinic, Room 14, Municipal Courts Bldg., Fourteenth and Market streets. Names of physicians are given if you send a stamped, addressed envelope with the request.

SALESMEN.

"Will 1929 be just 'another' year for you, or the most important in your life?"

"It will be just 'another' year of headaches and heartaches for some—for the kind of man who is in a rut, who knows he is in it and who lacks backbone enough to make a constructive move to get out of it."

"But for others — for the clear-eyed, aggressive, ready-to-face-the-world type of man it will mean something else—a new deal; a new opportunity, another chance to cash in on this energy, his ability and the good times that all the economists predict."

"THE DAVIS REALTY ORGANIZATION has looked into the future, has seen what 1929 holds and has laid its plans so that all of the men associated with its sales force shall enjoy to the maximum the rewards that are the inevitable result of good, hard teamwork, intelligently directed."

MEN

"We need good men—many of them—men of the same type that we now have in our sales force—men who can capitalize on our record of uninterrupted success, who are serious and want a permanent connection, who realize the dollars and cents value of an opportunity to represent one of the largest and oldest real estate firms in the country—a concern with more than 20 years of successful development behind it—an organization where sales resistance is at a minimum."

"To such men we offer the opportunity of a lifetime; 1929 will be our biggest year. We have Ten Million Dollars of the finest and closest-in subdivision property for multiple homes, apartments and businesses, in Clayton and University City, the kind that rapidly increases in value. We are starting a big advertising campaign through the newspapers and direct mail. We want men 'Stickers' to follow this campaign. We will offer them a chance to make more money than they ever made before."

"Experience is unnecessary. We are thoroughly organized to train you and work with you and put in production immediately. March will be a big month.

"Come in any day this week and let us lay our cards upon the table. Let us tell you what we are willing to do for you and what we expect from you in return. Ask for Everett Davis, president."

TWO DRY AGENTS FROM NEW YOR RAID 'CAP'S PLAC

Federal Men Expressly Im ported for Occasion Sei Liquor in Troll's Eigh Street Bar.

Two special prohibition ag were brought here from New Yo a case against a saloon at 20

North Eighth street, said to owned by Charles "Cap" Tr
Republican politician. Troll w arrested and charged with po session and sale of liquor follo ing a raid shortly afternoon ye terday.

Deputy Administrator Ja
Dillon explained that many saloo keepers who were raided indi nantly asked him why he did n raid "Cap's place," and the im portation of the two agents fo
lowed.

Troll was seated in the saloo
when agents entered and found 2 pints of Canadian whisky, fo pints of moonshine, 15 quarts o gin, 19 quarts of wine and fo quarts of champagne. He denied that he had any interest in th place and explained that he wa eating lunch. He was jointly charged with the bartender, Fran X. Rose. Both were released o bonds of $1000.

The New York agents made pu chases of liquor in the saloon bot before and after the Jones la became effective, Dillon said.

First Arrest in City Under Drast New Dry Law.

Federal prohibition agents sin
the Jones amendment to the Vo for first offense liquor violators t five years in prison and a fine o old, 5209 Wilson avenue.

Federal agents were waiti for Mernati outside a saloon a 1400 Pine street Friday night whe he drove up in his machine. The reported that he removed a five-gallon can of alcohol from beneat the hood of the car, and a subcan of moonshine whisky unde the hood.

Mernati, who was released o
$2000 bond yesterday pending ac quoted by Chief Agent Dillon a saying, "the alcohol business ha been rotten all week."

Records disclose that Mernati was arrested in 1926 by police o and Mernati was fined $400 in Fed

The HOME-MADE MOVIE PLAY in ST. LOUIS

Interesting Experiments in Both the Silent and Talking Variety by Zealous Amateurs Who Prefer to Roll Their Own.

EVEN the talking movies have now yielded to the amateur. For long the drawing rooms of those who could afford it have been converted into movie sets and Klieg lights have burned through long evenings at home. But now the illusion of sound is added.

Out on the Lackland road, in St. Louis County, is a laboratory-theater in which the talkies talk with extraordinary perfection. This theater is in the basement of the home of Randolph Laughlin, whose son, Robert Laughlin, has pushed amateur experimentation with sound pictures farther than probably anyone else. In fact, he has become so interested and has carried his experiments to such a length that what began as a hobby has become a full-time occupation.

There are other amateur moviemakers in St. Louis who have worked along different lines with an almost equal zeal and enthusiasm. In short, they have given up their time and energies to it as though their livelihood depended upon the success of their productions. One of these is Dr. Arthur W. Proetz, who filmed, with a number of friends, a five-reel amateur movie of "The Greene Murder Case," which, in its photographic ingeniousness and painstaking exactitude, may well rival the professional film of this Van Dine mystery story which is being made by Paramount.

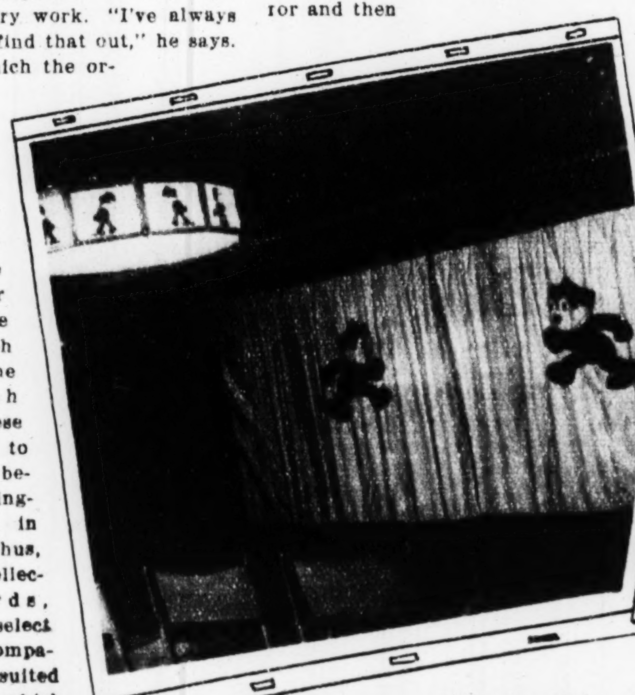
Another of these enthusiasts is J. D. Wooster Lambert of the Country Club grounds, who also has a theater in his basement. He, too, has worked with sound effects, but less seriously than Laughlin.

It is Laughlin's pride that his theater has everything that a metropolitan movie theater has. That, he says, is the reason he began to play with the idea of talkies. He wanted to bring his basement playhouse, which he has called The Felix Theater, dedicated to Felix, the cat, up to date.

HE IS stage manager, director, operator and everything else. He ushers his guests into the Felix Theater and seats them. They have a moment in which to look around. The walls, formed of tightly-stretched black velvet, are relieved here and there by illuminated silhouettes of Felix, patron of the playhouse. From the ceiling of light yellow velvet hangs a chandelier of opaque glass, which also has silhouettes of the expressive Felix about it. The curtains of the stage, striped blue and gray, are closed. Laughlin excuses himself.

Then things begin to happen. An organ prelude begins, the rolling tones resounding through the little theater. The moviesque illusion is perfect. The lights gradually dim. Faint green and red bulbs glow behind the capering Felixes. A spotlight is flashed on the curtains, which slowly part. There is a brief orchestral accompaniment and then the first skit begins—an attractive girl singing a popular song. First there is a close-up and her voice rings out strong, then she recedes and the voice grows dimmer, dropping to a crooning whisper, then loud again. There is no audible scratching or mechanical effect. Skit follows skit, with brief interludes when the lights go on and the organ resounds. Finally there is a still picture, with proper musical accompaniment by organ and orchestra. The feature ends, the show is over.

LAUGHLIN comes in to ask how you've enjoyed the program. Upon request he consents to show how the wheels go round. That is his principal preoccupation—to see what makes machinery work. "I've always been trying to find that out," he says. The way in which the organ and orchestral accompaniment is produced is comparatively simple. Outside the theater, to the rear near the stage, are two phonograph consoles. The music which comes from these is transmitted to the amplifier behind the moving-picture screen in the theater. Thus, from a large collection of records, Laughlin can select the kind of accompaniment that is suited to the picture which is being shown.



Robert Laughlin's private theater.

Robert Laughlin.

The projection of the talkies is more complex. Even before the first talking pictures were shown in St. Louis, more than three years ago, Laughlin had rigged up a crude kind of synchronized sound picture.

He did it in this way: He took an ordinary phonograph record as sold over the counter in any music store—it happened to be a male voice singing a sentimental song—and then he learned this song. He memorized the words, the tempo, rehearsed the inflections before a mirror and then he was ready to have himself photographed, singing at exactly the same pace as the phonograph record and with proper gestures and expressions. The result was surprisingly good. Laughlin revived the film the other night and showed it with others of later date, and the comparison was not invidious. To all intents and purposes one saw Robert Laughlin singing this sentimental song.

It becomes obvious that there are infinite variations of this method. Laughlin persuaded his friends to act before his camera—so that their acting could be synchronized with other phonograph records. Having demonstrated that this method could be successfully employed, he then interested himself in perfecting the synchronous projection of the song and the film. He cared nothing about making records of his own to accompany scenes that he himself might devise. He believed that the records were made about as well as they could be. But he did hold that the final result to the audience could be bettered.

And there is the testimony of experts that he has succeeded. He is about to produce his apparatus commercially, not only in a large size for motion-picture theaters but on a smaller scale for home use. What he has chiefly done is to eliminate a great deal of the vibration that, he says, inevitably mars the sound effects of devices now in use.

IT IS chiefly vibration, he explains, that brings about the imperfections in reproduction that can be detected in virtually all the talking picture machines—vibration largely caused by the motor which runs the film through the projector and which also runs the disc on which the record for reproducing the sounds is placed.

What Laughlin has done is to take the disc and place it on a pedestal at some little distance from the motor, which is connected to it in such a way that vibration will not be so easily transmitted. Also, he has set the disc on the pedestal in such a way that it is really as though it were balanced on springs. A vitaphone operator in a St. Louis theater became interested in Laughlin's machine and as a result they are being made at a rapid rate to fill orders that have already come in. Moreover, as soon as it is practicable Laughlin hopes to put a set on the market for amateurs. It will be so made that it can be attached to the ordinary amateur's projector as it is now sold.

It so happens, according to Laughlin, who has had the matter investigated by a patent lawyer, that there are no basic patents by which commercial devices now on the market can be protected. He explains that experimentation began as long ago as 1906 and that patents were issued in succeeding years which have since expired. He has applied for patent rights on the particular devices which he has worked out.

BUT whatever the fate of the commercial venture—and Laughlin is optimistic—he says he will never lose his interest in the Felix Theater. He points out that it even has a cooling system. Above the yellow draperies that form the ceiling are great trays. During warm weather he fills these trays with cracked ice and coarse salt. Concealed electric fans are blown over the ice for two or three hours before a performance and Laughlin is thus able to bring the temperature down to 60 degrees.

He was led into tinkering with movies through an interest in still photography. When he was quite young motor cars absorbed him, later it was an airplane. Things that go have always interested him. Laughlin is 26 years old.

Arising from a somewhat similar motive, but quite in a different spirit, was Dr. Proetz's venture into amateur movie making. It grew out of a desire for amusement. Miss Barbara Tallerman of London, England, was a guest in the home of Dr. and Mrs. Proetz. It was decided that it would be diverting to do a movie of "The Greene Murder Case," which was then running in Scribner's Magazine. A number of guests were present. Dr. Proetz put up a sign that read: "Proetz Cinema Productions. Casting on this lot tomorrow evening at this time."

On the following evening there were a number of types from which to choose. On slips of paper were written the names of every conceivable emotion—love, hatred, fear and so forth. These slips were placed in a hat and each guest was told to draw out two of them. A third slip, left blank, was to be filled in without previous warning at the time that the separate screen tests were made. Also, each individual was told that he or she could choose one other emotion.

The screen tests went through rapidly and the cast was soon chosen. The

Divorce of the "PERFECT WIFE" and the "GREEK GOD"

Surprising Smash-up of the Love Match Between Muriel Vanderbilt and Frederick Cameron Church Jr. That Had Everything in Its Favor.

NEWPORT, Rhode Island.

THEY called it, romantically, the marriage of the "Golden Girl" and the "Greek God." They said, here, at last, was the ideal couple. But it has turned out no better, and indeed, far worse, than thousands of other marriages entered into with less auspicious prospect of success. Muriel Vanderbilt, America's richest society girl, who married Frederick Cameron Church Jr., the former Harvard football star of classic profile, four years ago, has now entered suit for divorce and the case is scheduled to be heard in Newport within the next few weeks.

When her engagement was announced, Muriel Vanderbilt was hailed widely as the society girl who, nearer than any other, fulfilled the specifications of a perfect wife. She was a home lover. She didn't drink. She didn't smoke. She didn't go in for daring bathing suits and wild parties. She didn't do any of the things that a perfect wife is not supposed to do. She didn't even use lipstick and rouge. She had a keen interest in sports, amateur dramatics and philanthropy. Entirely aside from the fact that she was an heiress of enormous wealth, she was regarded as one of the most generally worth-while young women of the whole Four Hundred class. So far as available evidence goes, four years of marriage have not materially changed her habits. So in the widespread discussion of the forthcoming divorce case, her acquaintances are not disposed to find the source of the trouble in any shortcoming of hers.

SHE, herself, refuses to discuss specifically the causes of her action. She disclaims any desire to "blacken" her "Greek God" and says she expects, when their marriage bond is severed, they will remain good friends. A "painless divorce" is what she wants. Non-support is the legal ground upon which she seeks the decree. But nobody takes that charge very seriously. In view of her husband's prosperity, her own great wealth and her obvious indifference to "support" from anybody, the charge is the subject of much speculative comment at the hands of aristocratic gossipers. Just what, they ask, did she mean and what was she covering up when she charged him with non-support? Even if he was a "Greek God" and therefore generally expected to be worthless, Frederick C. Church Jr. was not a loafer or a fly-by-night. He was not a man of great wealth, especially inherited wealth, but since his graduation from Harvard in 1920 had gained considerable business distinction as an insurance broker of Boston. In everyday parlance of the street, he was "doing very well" in other ways besides marrying the great-granddaughter of Commodore Vanderbilt.

Apparently it is with considerable pain that Mrs. Church contemplates the disruption of her marriage which for a time had held such promise of happiness. But when this correspondent talked with her recently at "Dudley Place," her home at Middletown, Rhode Island, she made it clear there would be no reconciliation. Neither, she declared, would there be any backbiting.

"I married Mr. Church because I loved him," she asserted, "but two years later, in the summer of 1927, it became apparent that our marriage was not a success. All I can say is that I have been hurt enough and when I say that I mean it.

"However, I shall never consent to a course of action that would in the slightest degree blacken Mr. Church. That is not necessary and, furthermore, it would be poor sportsmanship. We have scores of mutual friends. Why hazard friendships by airing all our differences in court? After it is over, we expect to remain good friends.

"I WANT to make it clear," she continued, "that any story about withdrawal of my petition or effecting a reconciliation with my husband is absurd. It is true that since the filing of the petition Mr. Church and I have had a talk by telephone, but it had nothing to do with reconciliation. He had been aware for some time that I intended to institute divorce proceedings, but he expected to receive service before the suit was made public.

"When he heard a report that the petition had been filed, he immediately called me to learn if this were true. I told him that no action had yet been taken, but that a suit would be filed within a few days. He did not seek a reconciliation. We had an understanding and he is perfectly satisfied. He will not contest the divorce.

"Under the Rhode Island system it will not be necessary for me to appear in court. Uncontested divorce petitions in this State are heard by depositions, and that is how my case will be heard. It will spare the two of us pain all around.

"A great many women, in order to justify a divorce action, are willing to go into court and parade a multiplicity of charges. That isn't to my liking. It would make me very unhappy and it would not serve my purpose. The ending of my happiness has been a blow that is hard enough. I am far from happy now, but I shall never utter a word that will contribute to my husband's unhappiness. Mr. Church has many amiable qualities and I was too happy during the first two years of my married life to put it all behind me now and think only of the unhappy days. My husband is perfectly willing that I should divorce him. He has not asked me to abandon my plans and I am sure he does not want me to do so."

Mrs. Church is not asking for alimony and she emphatically denied a report that she would seek annulment of her marriage by the Roman Catholic Church so that she could marry again.

"It is rather unfair to circulate such a story," she said. "At present I have no intention of remarrying and, therefore, I have no intention of appearing before the Roman Catholic Church officials in order to have my marriage annulled. I am a Catholic, but I am so ignorant concerning the rules that guide the tribunal of the Rota in such matters that I have no idea whether a request on my part would even be considered. But I want to be perfectly frank in this matter as I have been in other phases of my trouble. I am too young to say that I shall never remarry. The day may come when I shall again experience real romance. When and if that day comes I may take steps that will permit me to remarry. Just at present, however, nothing is more remote from my mind than the idea of remarriage."

As to Mrs. Church's plans for herself, assuming the divorce proceedings go through painlessly and without a hitch, she says that she will continue to make her home in Middletown. "Dudley Place," an old mansion built by Lord Dudley in 1760, was purchased by Mrs. Church from the Bull estate in the happier days of two years ago.

The marriage of Muriel Vanderbilt and Frederick Cameron Church Jr., in 1925, was regarded by society as a brave challenge to the divorce tendency that seemed to be gaining in the House of Vanderbilt.

The bride's paternal grandfather, William K. Vanderbilt, son of the old Commodore, married Alvah Murray Smith, daughter of a Baltimore family. They were divorced and Mrs. Alvah Vanderbilt married O. H. P. Belmont. She now lives in France.

The William K. Vanderbilts had three children, Consuelo, William K. II and Harold S. Vanderbilt. Consuelo, aunt of Muriel, married the Duke of Marlborough, divorced him, obtained an annulment and then married Colonel Jacques Balsam of Paris. The English nobleman subsequently wed Gladys Deacon of the three celebrated Deacon sisters of Boston.

William K. Vanderbilt II married Miss Virginia Fair of San Francisco, California. Three children were born to them—Muriel, who now seeks divorce; Consuelo, named for her aunt and now the wife of Earl E. T. Smith, and William K. Vanderbilt III.

When Muriel Vanderbilt married nearly four years ago her parents had long been separated. On June 2, 1927, about two years after the marriages of Muriel and Consuelo, their parents were divorced. Their mother took the name of Mrs. Graham Fair Vanderbilt. Their father married Mrs. Rose Lancaster Warburton of Worcester, Massachusetts, divorced wife of Barclay H. Warburton of Philadelphia.

William H. Vanderbilt, cousin of Muriel Vanderbilt Church and Consuelo Vanderbilt Smith, married Emily O'Neil Davies, who divorced him in 1928, the decree becoming final on December 5, last. Three days later she married Sigourney Thayer of Boston. Reginald C. Vanderbilt, uncle of Muriel and Consuelo, was also divorced.

BUT none of these divorces and separations appeared as omens of ill to Muriel Vanderbilt when she became the bride of Frederick Cameron Church Jr. The bride was 25 years old at the time of her marriage, one of the most beautiful and gracious daughters of the famous multimillionaire family. Church was the son of a prominent family of Lowell, Massachusetts.

The bride's parents, separated but not then divorced, were both present at the marriage ceremony of their daughter, Muriel, which was celebrated at "Beachmound," Newport, on July 25, 1925.

The ceremony itself at the Church-Vanderbilt nuptials came in for considerable publicity on account of a religious question involved. Church desired the marriage to be performed by an Episcopal clergyman, while the bride-elect and her family were of the Roman Catholic faith.

In accordance with the wish of the bridegroom the ceremony was performed by the Rt. Rev. Herbert Shipman, Suffragan Bishop of the Episcopal diocese of New York, and the Rev. Stanley C. Hughes of Trinity Church, Newport. It became known that the Rev. Joseph P. Coleman, pastor of St. Augustine's Roman Catholic Church of Newport, waited until after the ceremony had been performed for word to go to "Beachmound."

A few months after the wedding the bride's mother announced that her daughter and Mr. Church also had been married by a Roman Catholic priest subsequent to the Episcopal ceremony.

The marriage of Muriel and her "Greek God" was followed five weeks later by an unfortunate incident.

The couple had returned to Newport from the honeymoon. Early in the morning of August 28, while the bride was in Newport, Mr. Church was found unconscious and injured on Commonwealth avenue, Boston. The police report was worded thus:

"ABOUT 2:35 a. m. of the 28th instant a man who gave his name as Frank C. Church, 37 years, of 91 Bay State road, Boston, was found lying in the street in front of 541 Commonwealth avenue, Boston, by Patrolman Crowley. When he recovered consciousness he requested to be taken to the suite of his friend, Robert Lancaster, of 91 Bay State road. He was taken there by Patrolman Crowley.

"Dr. Warren Tilton was called by Mr. Lancaster. Church was suffering from a lacerated right ear and multiple contusions and abrasions of the face and body.

"He refused to give any information as to how he received his injuries or where he had been previously. It is the opinion of the officer that he fell from or was struck by an automobile. Later it was learned that he does not live at 91 Bay State road."

The victim of this situation was Frederick Cameron Church Jr. Shortly after the report of the accident of Church, the police of Station 16 of the Boston Police Department became engaged in an investigation of a wild party that had been staged at an uptown hotel, not far from Commonwealth avenue. The inquiry came to naught, except that it was revealed that a prominent man had been given a trouncing, for alleged freshness with a girl of the "No, No, Nanette" chorus.

Later Church was taken to the Massachusetts General Hospital. He was unable at first to give an account of just how he had been injured, but later he said he had probably been hit by an automobile.

In the fall of 1925, Mr. and Mrs. Church established themselves in Boston. The following summer Mrs. Church purchased "Dudley Place." She kept "Dudley Place" open the year round and did not return to Boston to live permanently. Mr. Church divided his time between Boston and Middletown for some months, the separation coming last October.

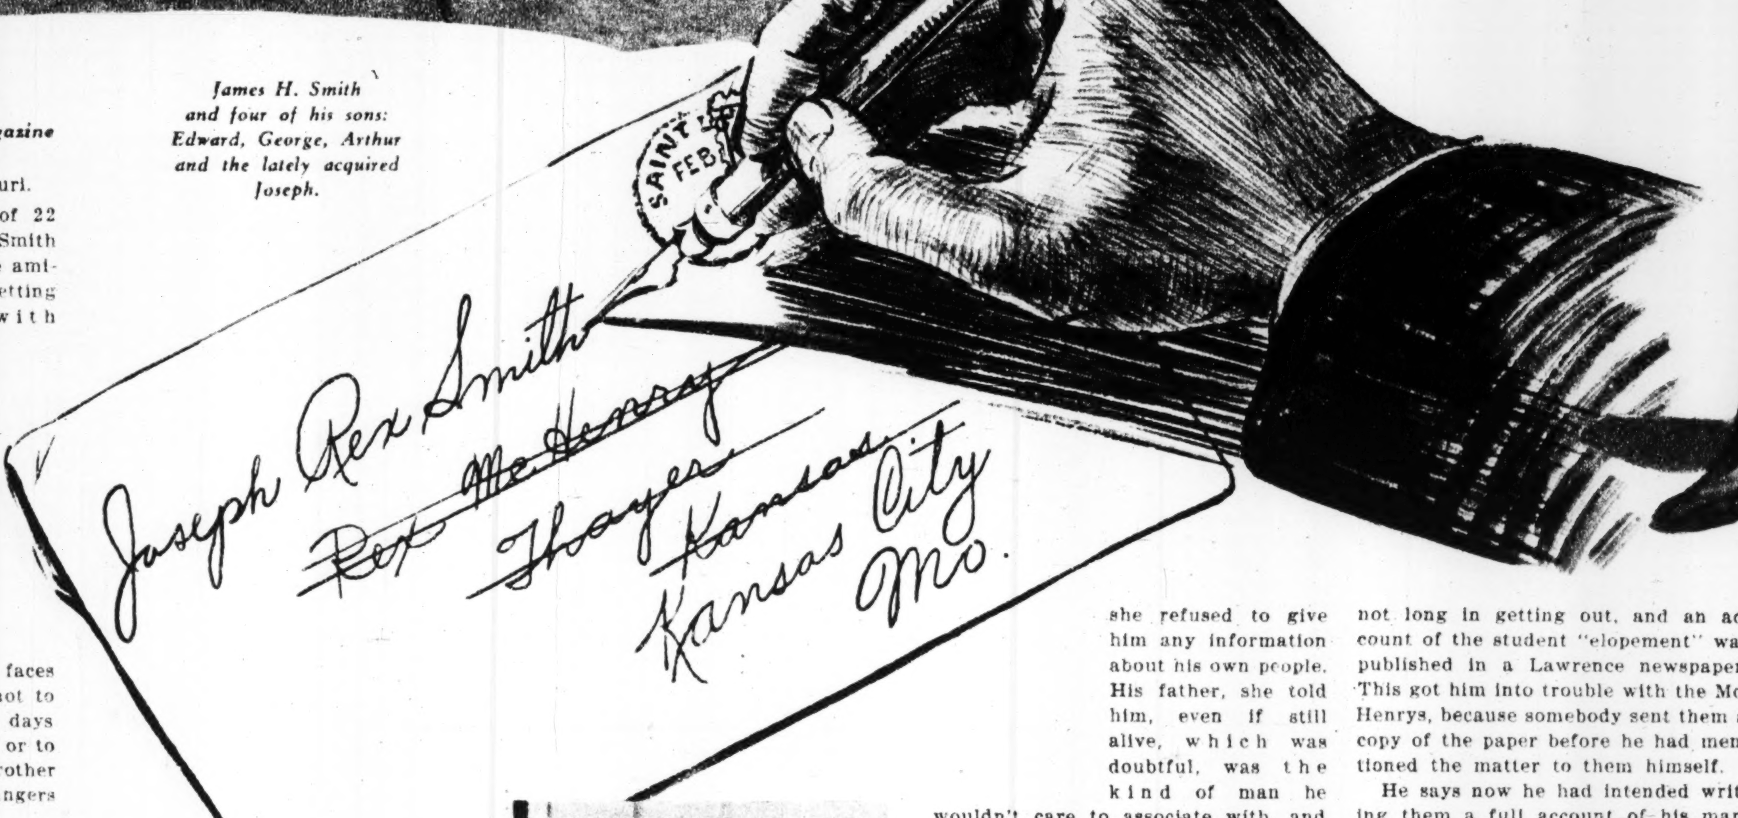
James H. Smith and four of his sons: Edward, George, Arthur and the lately acquired Joseph.

Why Rex McHenry of Kansas Has Now Become Joseph Rex Smith.

Joseph Rex Smith.



By GUY FORSHEY

of the Post-Dispatch Sunday Magazine Staff

KANSAS CITY, Missouri.

AT THE age of 22 Joseph Rex Smith is busy at the amiable task of getting acquainted with his father, his six brothers, two grandmothers and a dozen or so of uncles, aunts and cousins. He is yet to meet three of his six brothers, one grandmother and the majority of his more distant relatives, but he is getting around as rapidly as possible—so rapidly, in fact, that he is having some trouble in keeping names and faces straight. He's just as likely as not to meet Brother Bill one of these days and say, "Hello, Cousin Alfred," or to mistake Brother George for Brother Arthur. They were all utter strangers to him until a few days ago.

Adopted in infancy by Mr. and Mrs. James McHenry of Thayer, Kansas, Joseph Rex was brought up in complete ignorance of his real identity and of his own relatives. That was by an agreement which his father had entered into so that the boy might have a better chance in life as a son and heir of the well-to-do McHenry family. Until he was cut off by the McHenrys in young manhood he didn't know he had any real blood relatives. Then suddenly they began to appear, and now it seems to him that he must be kin to about half the people in Kansas City. All his life he was called Rex McHenry. Now, suddenly, he becomes Joe Smith. It's all a bit perplexing. Like the returning Rip Van Winkle, he isn't quite sure whether he's himself or somebody else. It seems too good to be true, especially the discovery that his musical career, which disinheritance had forced him to abandon, may now be resumed.

Extraordinary though it is, the mixed-up domestic situation of Joseph Rex Smith is turning out to be a most pleasant one from every point of view. Not that it is pleasant to get his relatives mixed, but to find he has so many of them. And such agreeable relatives they are, all trying to make him have a good time, celebrating his arrival with turkey dinners, vying with one another for the opportunity to entertain him and not one of them trying to borrow money or give him advice. They have even provided for him what he needed most—a job. His father, who operates a merchant patrol system in co-operation with the Police Department, has taken him into the business. It is a crowning triumph for the elder Smith and it is doubtful if there is a happier man in Kansas City. He has now recovered the last of his seven sons, all of whom were scattered, and has four of them as business partners.

THE fact that the youngest son was lost to his family for 22 years was not due, it appears, either to a fault of the boy or his father. It was due to a peculiar set of circumstances, a strange quirk of fate, which kept each in ignorance of the other, even though they were sometimes within shouting distance. Two years ago the youth, still thinking he was Rex McHenry, was married at the Jackson County Courthouse, which is three blocks from his father's office and within full view of the place.

It was the death of Joseph's mother, the day after his birth, which led to the scattering of the family and the loss, for 22 years, of the youngest son. Twenty-two years ago James H. Smith was living with his wife and six small sons at Altoona, Kansas. There Joseph was born and there the mother died a few hours later. She was 28 years old and had borne eight sons in 11 years. One had died in infancy. Left with seven small children to care for, the father found himself in a desperate predicament. He was earning about $2.50 a day as a laborer. It was impossible to keep the children together or pay for their maintenance. They had to be placed with families who were able to take care of them. The six older children were placed with relatives. The youngest was placed in the home of Mr. and Mrs. Charles Orr, the father paying the Orrs for the baby's keep. This arrangement was continued for about two years, the father meanwhile having moved to Kansas City.

WHEN the boy was 2 years old it became necessary for Smith and the Orrs to find another home for him. It was then that the McHenrys came into the story. They had but one child, a girl, and wanted to adopt a boy. The owners of several farms in Southeastern Kansas, they were in comfortable circumstances and had an attractive home to offer to the Smith baby. The Orrs at once placed him in their keeping and James Smith approved of the plan. Believing the boy would have more advantages with the McHenrys than with him, he agreed that if they would make the lad an heir to half their interests, he would relinquish a father's claim and permit the child to grow up in the belief he was born a McHenry. No adoption papers were executed, but from that time on the Smith baby was Rex McHenry. When two or three years had passed and things continued to go well in the McHenry household, James Smith ceased to communicate with the family. It would be better for Joseph Rex, he thought, if the boy never learned he was an adopted son. He was busy then getting his merchant patrol system established and taking care of other sons who were not so fortunately situated as the youngest. That was how he completely lost touch with Joseph Rex.

James H. Smith.

When the boy was about 4 years old, the McHenrys retired from farm activity and moved into the little town of Thayer. There Joseph Rex went to school. Early in his boyhood, he relates, he heard from schoolmates that he was an adopted son of the McHenrys, but did not pay much attention to these childish rumors. The McHenrys were the only parents he could remember and he called them Mother and Father. Whatever curiosity he may have felt concerning his origin, he asked the McHenrys no question, for they were stern parents and little disposed to take children into their confidence. Besides, at that time, he was satisfied to be a McHenry. It was not until he was 17 that he learned authentically that he had been adopted. Then Mrs. McHenry, he says, told him that much, but beyond that and the fact that his father's name was Smith she refused to give him any information about his own people. His father, she told him, even if still alive, which was doubtful, was the kind of man he wouldn't care to associate with, and the less he ever found out about his real origin the better. The boy was satisfied with that and asked no more questions.

During his high school course at Thayer, Joseph Rex showed promise of developing a good singing voice. His bent was decidedly musical and he was active in all school and church singing festivities. When he was graduated in the spring of 1925 he determined to continue his education at Kansas University and specialize in voice. Accordingly, in the fall of 1925, he went to Lawrence and enrolled, working for part of his expenses and receiving additional support from the McHenry family. He studied voice two years under Prof. W. B. Downing in the Fine Arts School and made notable progress. He was regarded as a first-rate baritone with operatic possibilities. His voice showed such promise, in fact, that at the end of his first year's training a concert tour was arranged to give him experience. He sang in a number of small towns of the State, among them being Altoona, his birthplace. But beyond the fact that it was his birthplace, he knew nothing about his connection with it. In his second year at the university, he was a member of the glee club, and on one occasion sang with that organization in St. Louis.

IT WAS in this fateful second year at college, however, that the course of his career was changed. He got married. He admits that it was perhaps an unwise thing for a sophomore to do, particularly when he held hopes of achieving operatic prominence. But anyway he got married. His bride was Miss Iva M. Knight, a resident of Lawrence, but not a student in the university. It was not exactly an elopement, but they came over to Kansas City for the event and the ceremony was performed in the courthouse, three blocks from where they now live. His real father, walking a beat as a merchant patrolman, may have been passing by at that very time, for his territory lies all around the courthouse, but had the father passed directly through the Judge's chamber the result probably would have been the same. He would not have recognized the son and the son certainly wouldn't have recognized his parent. They went back to Lawrence, intending to keep the marriage a secret until the term was over, but the news was not long in getting out, and an account of the student "elopement" was published in a Lawrence newspaper. This got him into trouble with the McHenrys, because somebody sent them a copy of the paper before he had mentioned the matter to them himself.

He says now he had intended writing them a full account of his marriage at once, but had wavered and deferred doing so because of the recollection of what had happened when his foster sister married without her parents' knowledge several years before. They had made it very unpleasant for her and he was certain they would make things unpleasant for him.

"THE McHenrys," he told this correspondent recently, "were not the sort of parents that children confide in. They were cold and unsympathetic, but demanded obedience and at least a show of affection. They used to rebuke me for lack of affection when I would address them as 'Dear Folks' in my letters. Affection with them was only a formality, and only the children were obliged to show it. My foster sister, Frances, who was nine years older than I, came in for the same sort of treatment. We both were always being reminded of how grateful we should be for such good parents. We were never permitted to enter into any family discussions. We were told to be quiet and respectful. Our home life was always unpleasant. She was the best sister to me a fellow ever had and when any trouble came up she stood up for me.

"The McHenrys got the newspaper account before they got my letter and thought I was deceiving them. They wrote me they didn't want to have anything more to do with me and were sorry they had given me their name. They said I needn't come back to Thayer and need not expect any more financial support from them. Naturally, I had to drop out of school to support myself and my wife. At first I worked as a ditch digger and a plumber's helper. Summer before last I worked with the construction gang building the Kansas University stadium. I suffered a sunstroke that summer and for a week or two was critically ill. The McHenrys knew about it, but they didn't offer me any help. They didn't even write. After I recovered I got a job as a furniture repairer, which I kept until I quit to join my father here."

It was during these last two years, young Smith related, that he began to think seriously about his own people and wonder if he had any relatives. It chanced that, in his first year at college, he had roomed at the home of Mrs. Mattie Crooks, who formerly lived in Altoona. Through her he learned the circumstances of his birth and adoption. He went back to her now for more information. She gave him the names of Altoona residents who could tell him more. He wrote to Mrs. Annie Shoaf and she referred him to Mrs. Martha Hemme of Rosston, Oklahoma. Mrs. Hemme turned out to be his aunt, his father's sister. From her he learned at last his father's whereabouts.

Now came the delicate part of the procedure of reunion. Would his father be glad to see him? Would he welcome the return of a son who had been away from him for 22 years? Joseph hesitated. With some misgiving, he ventured one day to call his father by long-distance telephone. He identified himself as Rex Smith and his father didn't understand who it was, but in response to the young man's inquiry, said, casually: "Sure, I'll be glad to see you; come on down."

Divining that his father hadn't clearly understood the situation, the son then wrote a letter explaining the matter fully and stating he would come to Kansas City in a few days. The next day he got up and found three young men at his door looking for Joseph Rex Smith. They were his brothers—Edward, George and Arthur Smith. On receipt of the letter, their father had hurried them off to Lawrence in an automobile to bring the missing one home. They brought him and his wife, too, and a few days later suspended the celebration long enough to permit him to go back to Lawrence after clothes and household effects.

THE father was so overjoyed over his son's return that he wept. It was his greatest ambition, he said, to have all his sons with him, but he had long ago given Joseph up because he thought the McHenrys could do more for him. Besides Joseph he now has Edward, George and Arthur with him in his business. Edward and Arthur are married. George lives with his father and his father's mother. William, also unmarried, lives with his maternal grandmother at Quenemo, Kansas. Raymond lives at Jane, Missouri, and Earl in California.

Temporarily, Joseph and his wife are residing with the families of Edward and Arthur, in the building which houses their father's office. Joseph has a job waiting for him, but so far his relatives haven't given him time to work. They have kept him too busy visiting. Soon, though, he will go to work and all have agreed for him that he is going to continue his musical education in a Kansas City conservatory. So the boy who was lost 22 years has, in this belated reunion, found more than mere relatives.

Turned his LOVE VICTIMS into SPIES

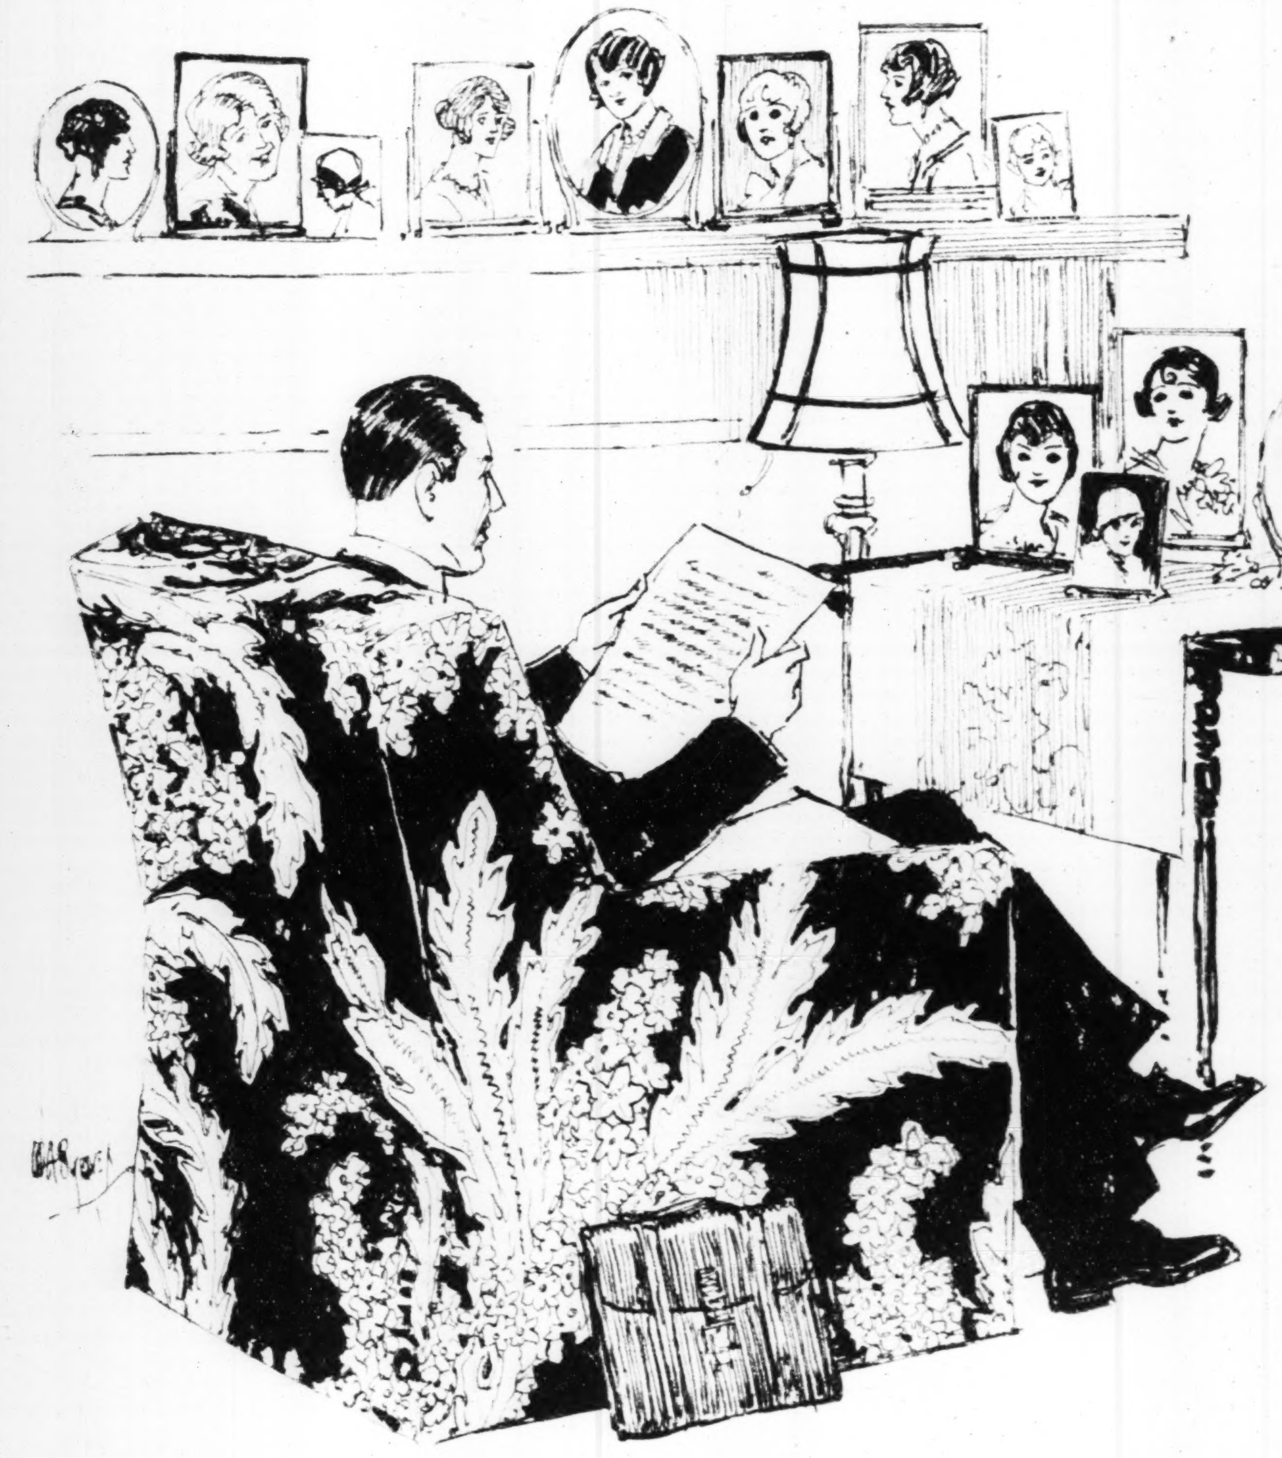
But Captain Lembourn's Complicated System Went to Smash When His Latest Sweetheart Fell for a Younger Man.



Captain Harry Lembourn, the Don Juan spy, who is now in a German jail.

By a Special Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch Sunday Magazine

BERLIN.

THE psychological principle which Harry Lembourn, Captain in the Danish Army and master spy of the French Military Secret Service, laid down for himself as an iron rule and the very basis of his perilous activities was undoubtedly perfect and unimpeachable from many points of view. He contended that women were by nature predestined to act as spies. As to the dangers connected with this risky profession, there is nothing in the world a woman would not do for the man she loves. Therefore, Captain Lembourn thought, the best of all possible methods open for a master spy was to employ women who loved him and who, for the sake of their love, were willing to do the most dangerous part of the work of getting information directly from officers of the enemy's army.

This was the method employed by Captain Lembourn for years, with unfailing success, bringing him money and recognition. There was only one hitch in the system, one little flaw in the reasoning, a single vulnerable spot in the cleverly organized plan. What if one of these feminine operatives should change her mind as to Captain Lembourn and fall in love with someone else? And what if this someone else should be an officer from the enemy's camp?

CAPTAIN LEMBOURN, however, so crafty in his activities of espionage, but—alas!—so cocksure in affairs of love, didn't even think of this possibility. Had he been less positive in his affairs of heart, had he studied more thoroughly the mysteries of feminine psychology, he would not be today an inmate of the Magdeburg Prison in Germany, sentenced to five years of penal servitude, expelled from the Danish Army, disowned by his French employers, stripped of honors and the sorry central figure in a sensational trial held recently before the highest court of Germany in Leipzig, followed intently by all Europe.

Captain Lembourn began his work as an international spy in 1915, the second year of the World War, in Copenhagen, at that time one of the main centers of international espionage. Capital of a neutral country, gay Copenhagen, "Paris of the North," swarmed with spies and secret emissaries of all nations, men and women who made their livelihood buying and selling information on this weird, fantastic international exchange of military secrets.

Harry Lembourn, at that time a First Lieutenant in the Danish Army, was one of these many underground operatives. Like most of his colleagues, he, too, worked for both sides, giving information to the Germans as well as to the French. It was here in this high school of international espionage that he developed his method of working with women and through women.

Among his colleagues Lieutenant Lembourn was known as a Don Juan who had love affairs a-plenty, spent money lavishly in entertaining the various ladies of his heart and who usually selected his lady friends from among the populous colony of foreigners. Nobody knew at the time that those interesting Russian girls, those somewhat corpulent German frauleins and those chic and piquant Viennese beauties, who used to dine with Harry Lembourn in smart hotel restaurants or in one or another of those charming little places in which the Danish capital abounds—that all these women were simply operatives under Harry Lembourn, the international spy; and that the mysterious source of his financial supply was the pay he drew from the military attaches of various foreign legations.

But this was only the beginning of Lembourn's career. Two years later he went to France and joined the French Army with the rank of Captain. He never went to the front, but was sent on prolonged and mysterious travels, whence he returned to Paris, writing secret reports and waiting for the next assignment.

HE PROVED to be one of the cleverest of spies, so much so that he decided to make espionage his real career. In order to secure a more thorough understanding of military affairs he attended for two years the French Military Academy under the name of Henry Lambert. When the war was over he asked the French Intelligence Service for a new appointment.

Three years ago Harry Lembourn suddenly vanished from Paris. He returned to his native Copenhagen, told his friends that he intended to settle down in his native land and asked the Danish military authorities for reappointment. Thus he became a Danish Army Captain and was assigned to a regiment stationed in Schleswig, near the German frontier.

In the summer of 1927 Captain Lembourn asked for a long furlough. He said that he was in failing health and needed to take a cure in a German health resort. The furlough granted, Captain Lembourn left—not for a health resort but for Berlin. He rented a luxurious bachelor apartment in one of the city's exclusive sections, furnished it in admirable taste and began to frequent places where he might make the acquaintance of eligible young women.

Soon the smart Herr Heinrich Leimberg, as he now chose to call himself, became a well-known figure in cabarets and night clubs, entertaining sportive women and spending money lavishly. Yet among all these women there was no one who could have been intrusted with a task so delicate as that of getting secret military information from German officers. Captain Lembourn scrutinized them and found that they were not clever enough to work for him.

At last, after weeks of search, the Captain made the acquaintance of Helene Stegemann, a beautiful blonde, exceedingly intelligent and of excellent education. Helene was a poor girl who worked as a clerk and dreamed of wealth and travel and love. The elegant Captain Lembourn, with his manners, taste and seeming wealth, made a deep impression on the ambitious young girl. The Captain courted her ardently and soon Helene fell in love with the 40-year-old "Herr Leimberg." The Captain bought her gowns and furs, let her taste the pleasure of an easy-going life. When he thought that Helene was devoted to him body and soul, he initiated her into the secret of his life and began to train her as a spy.

THE first thing was to get Helene a position where she might make the acquaintance of army officers and get in touch with German military circles. The girl found a job as clerk in the office of a manufacturer of uniforms where army officers were frequent visitors. It was easy for the young and beautiful Helene to get acquainted with many of these officers, to flirt with them a bit and to accept invitations to theaters and dinner parties. Innocently, she used to ask questions of military bearing, and the officers, thinking the girl was genuinely interested in these things, answered her questions readily.

Every time she went out with an officer Helene returned with a mass of information, which she wrote down and handed over to Captain Lembourn. She was clever and daring and proved so successful that a few months later, when Lembourn had to return to Denmark, she was able to continue the work alone. Whenever she wanted to meet her lover she sent him a telegram and Lembourn came over the frontier and met her in one of the border cities. Helene would return from these week-end excursions with a supply of money and the conviction that the Captain was more devoted to her than ever.

In the spring of 1928, Captain Lembourn got a new furlough on account of failing health. Again he went to Berlin, this time with the intention of employing more women and of building up his espionage system on a grand scale. Helene, of course, was to remain the most important link in his chain.

Helene continued doing work for the Captain, but somehow she was no longer so zealous in securing new connections. She didn't go to see the Captain as often as she had before. Their meetings were somewhat cooler and more businesslike than of yore. Still the Captain gave no sign of noticing any change. He seemed satisfied that the girl worked for him, and endeavored to get new operatives of her kind.

As for Helene, she saw nobody now except a young Lieutenant, whom she evidently found attractive—more so than Captain Lembourn, who on his part was no longer as attentive as in the first months of their acquaintance. Besides, the Lieutenant was younger than Lembourn, and even if he was unable to give much military information to Helene he could make good with his youthful, overflowing heart.

Yet Helene wished to remain faithful. She no longer felt any love for the Captain, but she knew that he needed her and so she decided to stand by him. She determined to see the young Lieutenant less frequently.

One evening—it was in June of last year—Helene called upon Captain Lembourn again. It was on the eve of his departure for Denmark. The Captain received her rather coolly and appeared decidedly nervous. Helene had not been more than 20 minutes with the Captain when Lembourn told her she must go, because he expected an important visitor. Helene left the apartment at the moment when Captain Lembourn's visitor was arriving in the person of an elegantly-dressed young woman. Helene went to the nearest telephone booth, called up her young Lieutenant and told him she had been jilted by the man to whom she wanted to remain faithful. A long conversation ensued in which the name of Captain Lembourn was mentioned quite often.

NEXT morning the Lieutenant made a report about Captain Lembourn's suspicious interest in German military affairs. At noon secret service men came around to arrest Lembourn. They didn't find him. He was on his way to Denmark and passed the frontier 15 minutes later.

Next day Captain Lembourn received a telegram signed "Helene," saying she wanted to see him on a very important matter at the border city where they had been wont to meet. At the time the wire was sent Helene was already in a cell of the Moabit Jail in Berlin. The moment Captain Lembourn set his foot on German soil he, too, was arrested. He was taken to Berlin, then to Leipzig, where he was sentenced to five years' imprisonment.

Helene got off with two years. The Judge declared that the fact that she loved the Captain and "worked" for him for the sake of love should be regarded as a mitigating circumstance. The Lieutenant did not appear before the court and his name was not made public. It is rumored, however, that he hopes to get Helene out of jail within a few months. It is also surmised that he has certain cogent and personal reasons for getting her out as quickly as possible.

Exotic Creatures From the Orient Crossed With Ordinary Home-Grown Stock Now Producing Such Weird Hybrids as the Yakalo, the Galyak, the Zebrass and the Cattalo.

IF SOMEBODY tells you one of these days that he has just encountered a cattalo or a yakalo or maybe a galyak, the occurrence need not necessarily be attributed to the same factors which produced the pink elephants, though it is best in this age of prohibition to demand ocular proof where possible in all cases involving discovery of strange new animals. Some reported discoveries are not to be credited at all, but if the observer tells you it's a yakalo or even a zebrass, his statement may be given whatever credence his reputation for veracity commands. He might very well have seen one, for it's a fact, abundantly attested, that such creatures are at large now in this very country.

They have come into existence all because of the fact that the sleek, mild-mannered beef cattle of the East cannot successfully endure the prolonged winters and the searing drouths of the Western plains. Stock raisers of the West, all the way from Alaska to Mexico, have been experimenting for several years in efforts to combine the good qualities of fashionable beef cattle with the hardiness of more vigorous but less edible animals. In a measure they have been successful, so there has come into existence a great American melting pot for animals as well as human beings. Some mighty strange beasts have come out of it and there is no telling how many others will appear if the experimentation continues.

Crosses between cattle and the native bison, between cattle and long-haired yaks from the Himalayas, between Siberian reindeer and Alaskan caribou, between fat-tailed sheep from Persia and domestic sheep from England, are among the new citizens of the North American West.

There won't be any undesirable citizens among them. Such will be born, no doubt, but the breeder can weed them out as infants. This is one advantage the animal melting pot has over the human one. The undesirable animal crosses are either eliminated at once or survive only as caged-up curiosities to show breeders how not to do it next time.

The secret behind the efforts of breeders to produce cattle hybrids of kinds that were never seen even in the prophetic dreams of Pharaoh is to be found in a climatic and geographic paradox. The "cow country" of our West is really not now cow country at all. At least it isn't in the modern economic sense, which pays more attention to bookkeeping than to romance.

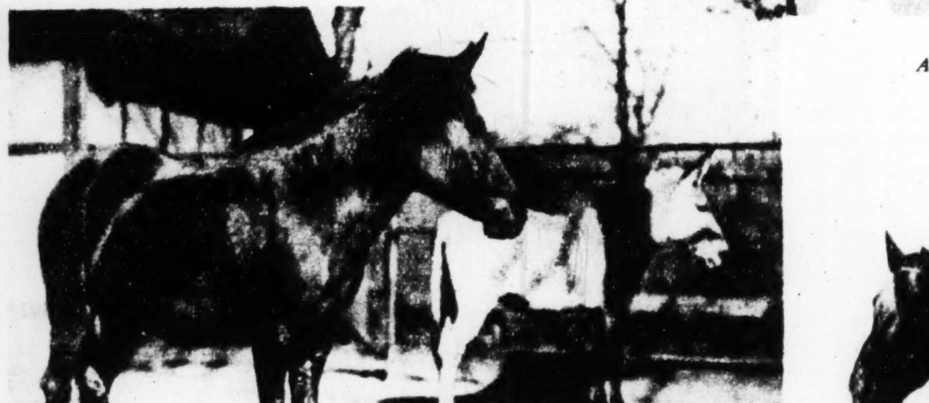
The breeds of beef cattle that have become standard in this country originated in Western Europe, on rich pastures where blizzards never howled, and where there was shelter from even the relatively mild storms that did come. Their names tell that: Angus, Durham, Hereford, and so on. They have, furthermore, been bred in this country to meet the needs of the moderately humid East and not to face the sterner life of the thin-grassed Western ranges, where they must shift for themselves as best they can, even when a "norther" catches them in the open.

THE old Spanish cattle, famous in a thousand novels and movies as "Texas longhorns," came of a stock more easily adapted to drouth and cold. But they were not shaped right for modern beef fashions, and had to give way before Eastern breeds which affected the boxcar silhouette, and carried more meat aft.

Because these could not stand the climate so well and because they fell easier victims to the terrible tick-borne fever, stockmen early began casting about for possible hardy mixtures to add to their blood.

The first possibility, naturally, was the native American buffalo, or bison. Most of these ancient "cattle of the Indians" had been wiped out in the terrible slaughter of the '80s, but a few cattlemen, either more sentimental or more far-sighted than their contemporaries, had kept small private herds going on their ranches.

A mule's colt, foaled in Nebraska.



Zebra-horse and zebra-ass, or zebrass, hybrids in the National Zoological Park, Washington.

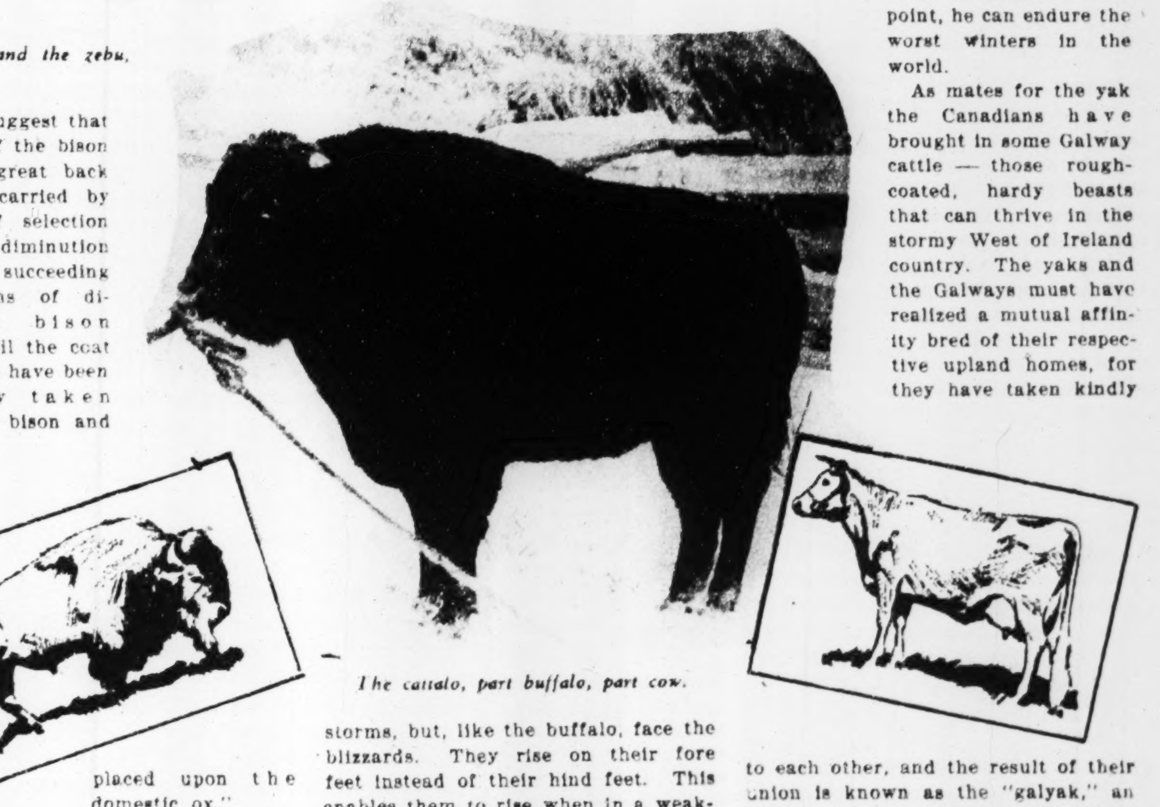
Here was a bovine stock inured to Western range life, able to travel and feed at the same time, heedless of blizzards, resistant to disease.

So they tried crossing bison and cattle. The results at first were not an unqualified success. Domestic cows bore calves in a fair proportion of cases, though frequently with considerable trouble, and at first the offspring were all heifers. It was thought that in such a cross bull calves could not be born alive.

The trouble was that, though such hybridization had been tried sporadically for more than a hundred years, it had never been tried on anything like a large scale. Finally, however, Mossom M. Boyd, a Canadian breeder, succeeded in obtaining a bull that was almost one-half bison by mating a pure-bred bison bull with a cow that was one-quarter bison.

A number of other male calves with a high percentage of bison blood have been obtained. With these the experiments are being continued in Canada, where the shaggy mane of the bison is of especial value in protecting the animal against the blinding snowstorms that sweep the range.

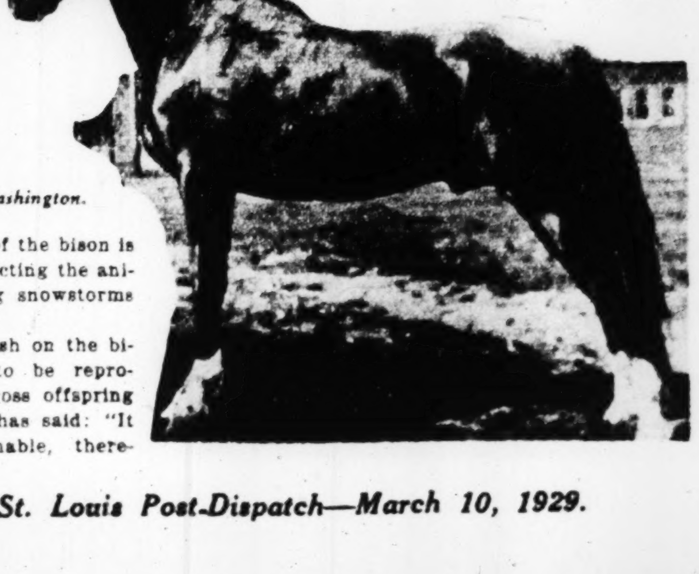
The great hump of flesh on the bison's shoulders tends to be reproduced in the domestic-cross offspring also, so that Mr. Boyd has said: "It does not seem unreasonable, therefore, to suggest that the fur of the bison and his great back may be carried by means of selection without diminution through succeeding generations of diminishing bison blood until the coat and hump have been practically taken from the bison and placed upon the domestic ox."



The cattalo, part buffalo, part cow.

Charles Goodnight, a pioneer breeder of Texas, agrees with Mr. Boyd in his high estimate of the cattle-bison cross. "They are immune from all diseases as far as I have tested them," he has stated. "They are much greater in weight, eat much less and hold their flesh better under more adverse conditions. . . They have a better meat, clear of fiber, and it never gets tough, like beef. They have long and deep backs, enabling them to cut at least 150 pounds more meat than other cattle. More of them can be grazed upon a given area.

"They do not run from heel flies nor drift in storms, but, like the buffalo, face the blizzards. They rise on their fore feet instead of their hind feet. This enables them to rise when in a weakened condition. They never lie down with their backs downhill, so they are able to rise quickly and easily. This habit is reversed in cattle."



This looks like all horse, but he is really the grandson of a mule.

The name of the final product of the cross-breeding of cattle and bison is itself a cross: "cattalo." Several spellings were put forward, but this one was accepted as standard by the American Genetic Association of Washington, D. C.

A MORE recent cattle hybrid than the cattalo, but one which has been more favorably received in the Texas area, is the cross between the humped zebu, or sacred Brahmin cow of India, with domestic stock. It was discovered that the zebu does not fall victim to the tick-borne cattle diseases that take heavy toll of the native stock of European origin.

Since the zebu is more nearly related to domestic cattle than is the bison, the two species amalgamate more readily and there is less loss in breeding. Moreover, after a couple of generations a "grade" animal shows little sign of the Indian admixture, but looks very much like its European ancestors. This, of course, interferes less with conventional market requirements. For these reasons, males with Brahmin blood in them have come to be in considerable demand in the tick-infested parts of the Southwest.

Since quarantine regulations do not permit the importation of any more breeding stock from the Orient, there are relatively few full-blooded zebu bulls in Texas, and the highest proportion of Brahmin blood usually encountered runs from three-fourths to seven-eighths.

From a much more remote quarter of the world than the Southwest, and closer to the zebu's own home, a weird outcross has been reported to the American Genetic Association, although that organization discreetly declines to vouch for its authenticity.

THIS is the offspring of a Philippine carabao, or water buffalo. This animal looks as though it might have been sired by a zebu; at any rate, it is very queer-looking for a carabao. But when all is said, the verdict will probably have to remain like that in many another doubtful case east of Suez: "The paternity remains in doubt."

Up in Northern Canada, where the Dominion Government maintains the greatest bison ranch in the world, they have been trying out another Asiatic animal as a possible contributor to the solution of the range-cattle problem. This is the yak, the long-haired, brush-tailed, slow-moving, patient, stubborn animal from the cold, storm-swept plateaus of Tibet.

The yak has to be patient, for his age-long owners and drivers have been the Tibetans. He has to be stubborn, or he could never have survived association with them. But, what is more to the point, he can endure the worst winters in the world.

As mates for the yak the Canadians have brought in some Galway cattle — those rough-coated, hardy beasts that can thrive in the stormy West of Ireland country. The yaks and the Galways must have realized a mutual affinity bred of their respective upland homes, for they have taken kindly to each other, and the result of their union is known as the "galyak," an animal looking rather like a long-haired cow, but still swinging astern the long, white-ended sacerdotal brush of a tail that is the pride of the yak.

The galyak is the serious effort of the Canadian breeders, but they have also tried a cross between the yak and the bison. Only one of these hybrids has ever been produced, and it is certainly a most strange creature. In body outline it is indeterminate between bison and yak. It wears its coat thick all over, yak fashion, instead of heavy in front and thin behind, like a bison.

What it may be like in temperament must be a puzzle to its keepers, for the bison is an unstable, stampedable animal, while the yak wouldn't go faster than three miles an hour if you built a fire under it. But whatever may be the use or interest of this yakson or bi-yak, whichever you may choose to call it, certainly its zoological cousin, the galyak, gives promise of being an animal of real value on the Northern Canadian range.

NORTHWARD still, on the Alaskan tundras, where no imaginable hybrid of the domestic cattle could gain a living, a considerable livestock industry based on the reindeer has grown up, and large groups of Eskimo have abandoned their old nomadic hunting life to become well-to-do herdsmen. The reindeer are descendants of animals imported from Siberia by the Department of Agriculture about a generation ago.

There is in Alaska and Northern Canada a native cousin of the reindeer, the caribou. This animal is the staff of life of hunting tribes of Eskimo, but it has never been domesticated. It is a larger animal than the European reindeer and has more meat on it, so that experiments are being

ELINOR GLYN

Noted Author of "Three Weeks," Who Now Spreads Her "Message" Through the Films, Is Vivisected by an American Realist.

Mme. Elinor Glyn.

The Second of a Series

By JIM TULLY

Author of "Beggars of Life," "Jarnegan," "Circus Parade," Etc., Etc.

ELINOR GLYN'S novel, "Three Weeks," is the greatest and most soul-searching psychological description of love written in the last 50 years. This is the unanimous opinion of Elinor Glyn.

A man high in the film industry had told me that Mme. Glyn was a remarkable woman. Always interested in remarkable people, I met her.

Elinor is an English aristocrat. Observer of formalities, she can be met only by appointment. She is considered a very busy woman. It will cheer young men and women who despair of literature in America and England to know that Mme. Glyn is a great social favorite.

Mme. Glyn sat across from me, overjeweled, but well-dressed. Her hair, a nondescript auburn, was straight. She was, at one time, a handsome woman. And even now, a grandmother three times, she has a form to be envied by a Broadway cloak model. Her eyes are remarkable—not for their beauty, but for their weird expression and their sea-green color. They are the shade of evaporating marsh water suddenly exposed to the sun. Tense, emotional, flippant, and always swimming in affectation, all one has to do is to sit quietly and sail toy boats over the shallow water of her nature.

I led off quickly: "What is your opinion of American literature, Mrs. Glyn?"

"Now, now, I don't know," she answered. "You see, I seldom read any*thing modern. It takes me away from* my beloved classics. Oh, my dear classics," and she pressed her hands together and rubbed the many thousand dollars' worth of diamonds on them.

"But is there no outstanding figure?" I came back.

"Not since Jack London's death," was the reply. "Poor, dear Jack. He once wrote to me and said: 'My dear Elinor, I will trade you 12 of my autographed books for eight of yours. I consider you the greatest psychologist in Europe.' " This jolt dazed me, and I sparred for a moment. I always did feel that Jack London was a boob about women.

"BUT are there no modern American books at all that you care about?"

"Well," she answered, "I read one not long ago. It was on a ship, and I was bored. It was by a person called Fitz—Fitzgerald, is it not?" I wondered whether she meant F. Scott, or Edward, when she said: "It was called 'The Beautiful and Damned,' I think, and, oh, what a very dreadful picture it painted." I told her it was written by F. Scott Fitzgerald.

That was jolt number two—to think that F. Scott Fitzgerald, clever splasher of lavender in the pink tea of life, could shock her. "You see," she went on, "I am an optimist; I don't believe in pessimism at all. I believe there is a power that guides us." I suddenly thought of Bryant's "Waterfowl" going to his home late in the evening after a very hard day at the docks.

I was getting nowhere, so I switched to English woman writers. "You have one remarkable writer over in En*gland, Mrs. Glyn. She has a Hardy*-like grasp on life. Her name is Sheila Kaye-Smith."

She shook her head slowly. "I have never heard of her," she said.

"Do you care for Mr. Mencken?" I asked. "Many of us consider him brilliant in this country—an iconoclast."

"No, no, I would know nothing of him. You see, I don't believe in that."

IRETURNED with Theodore Dreis*er. She was getting ready to an*swer with a blank expression on her face, when a knock came to the door. When she returned to her seat I left Theodore standing with "Sister Carrie" and hurried to Russia.

"What is your opinion of Russia, Mrs. Glyn? You have written of that country."

"Yes, yes," she half-whispered the sacred news and rubbed the palms of her hands over her many diamonds, while her sea-green eyes narrowed. "I have written the most profound and searching study yet to come out of Russia since the revolution." This was amazing. At last we were in the center of the ring. I was jubilant.

"Did you not think Lenin was a great man?" I asked.

"Ho-ho-ho-ho," she laughed, and moved her head from side to side. "Poor, mad, foolish, stupid Lenin," and she laughed again. I was becoming quite a comedian.

"Trotzky"—— I stopped.

Her eyes narrowed again and she snapped her fingers. "Ha, ha—— a fly to brush from the windowpane." That was too much, and I said, in that superior manner we all assume when we think we are saying something: "I think he's a great guy, myself."

Elinor was as horrified as if someone had asked her why Paul had not swung a pick for "Three Weeks" and thereby have done his fair share of work in the world.

"Your literary struggle, Mrs. Glyn, was it long?"

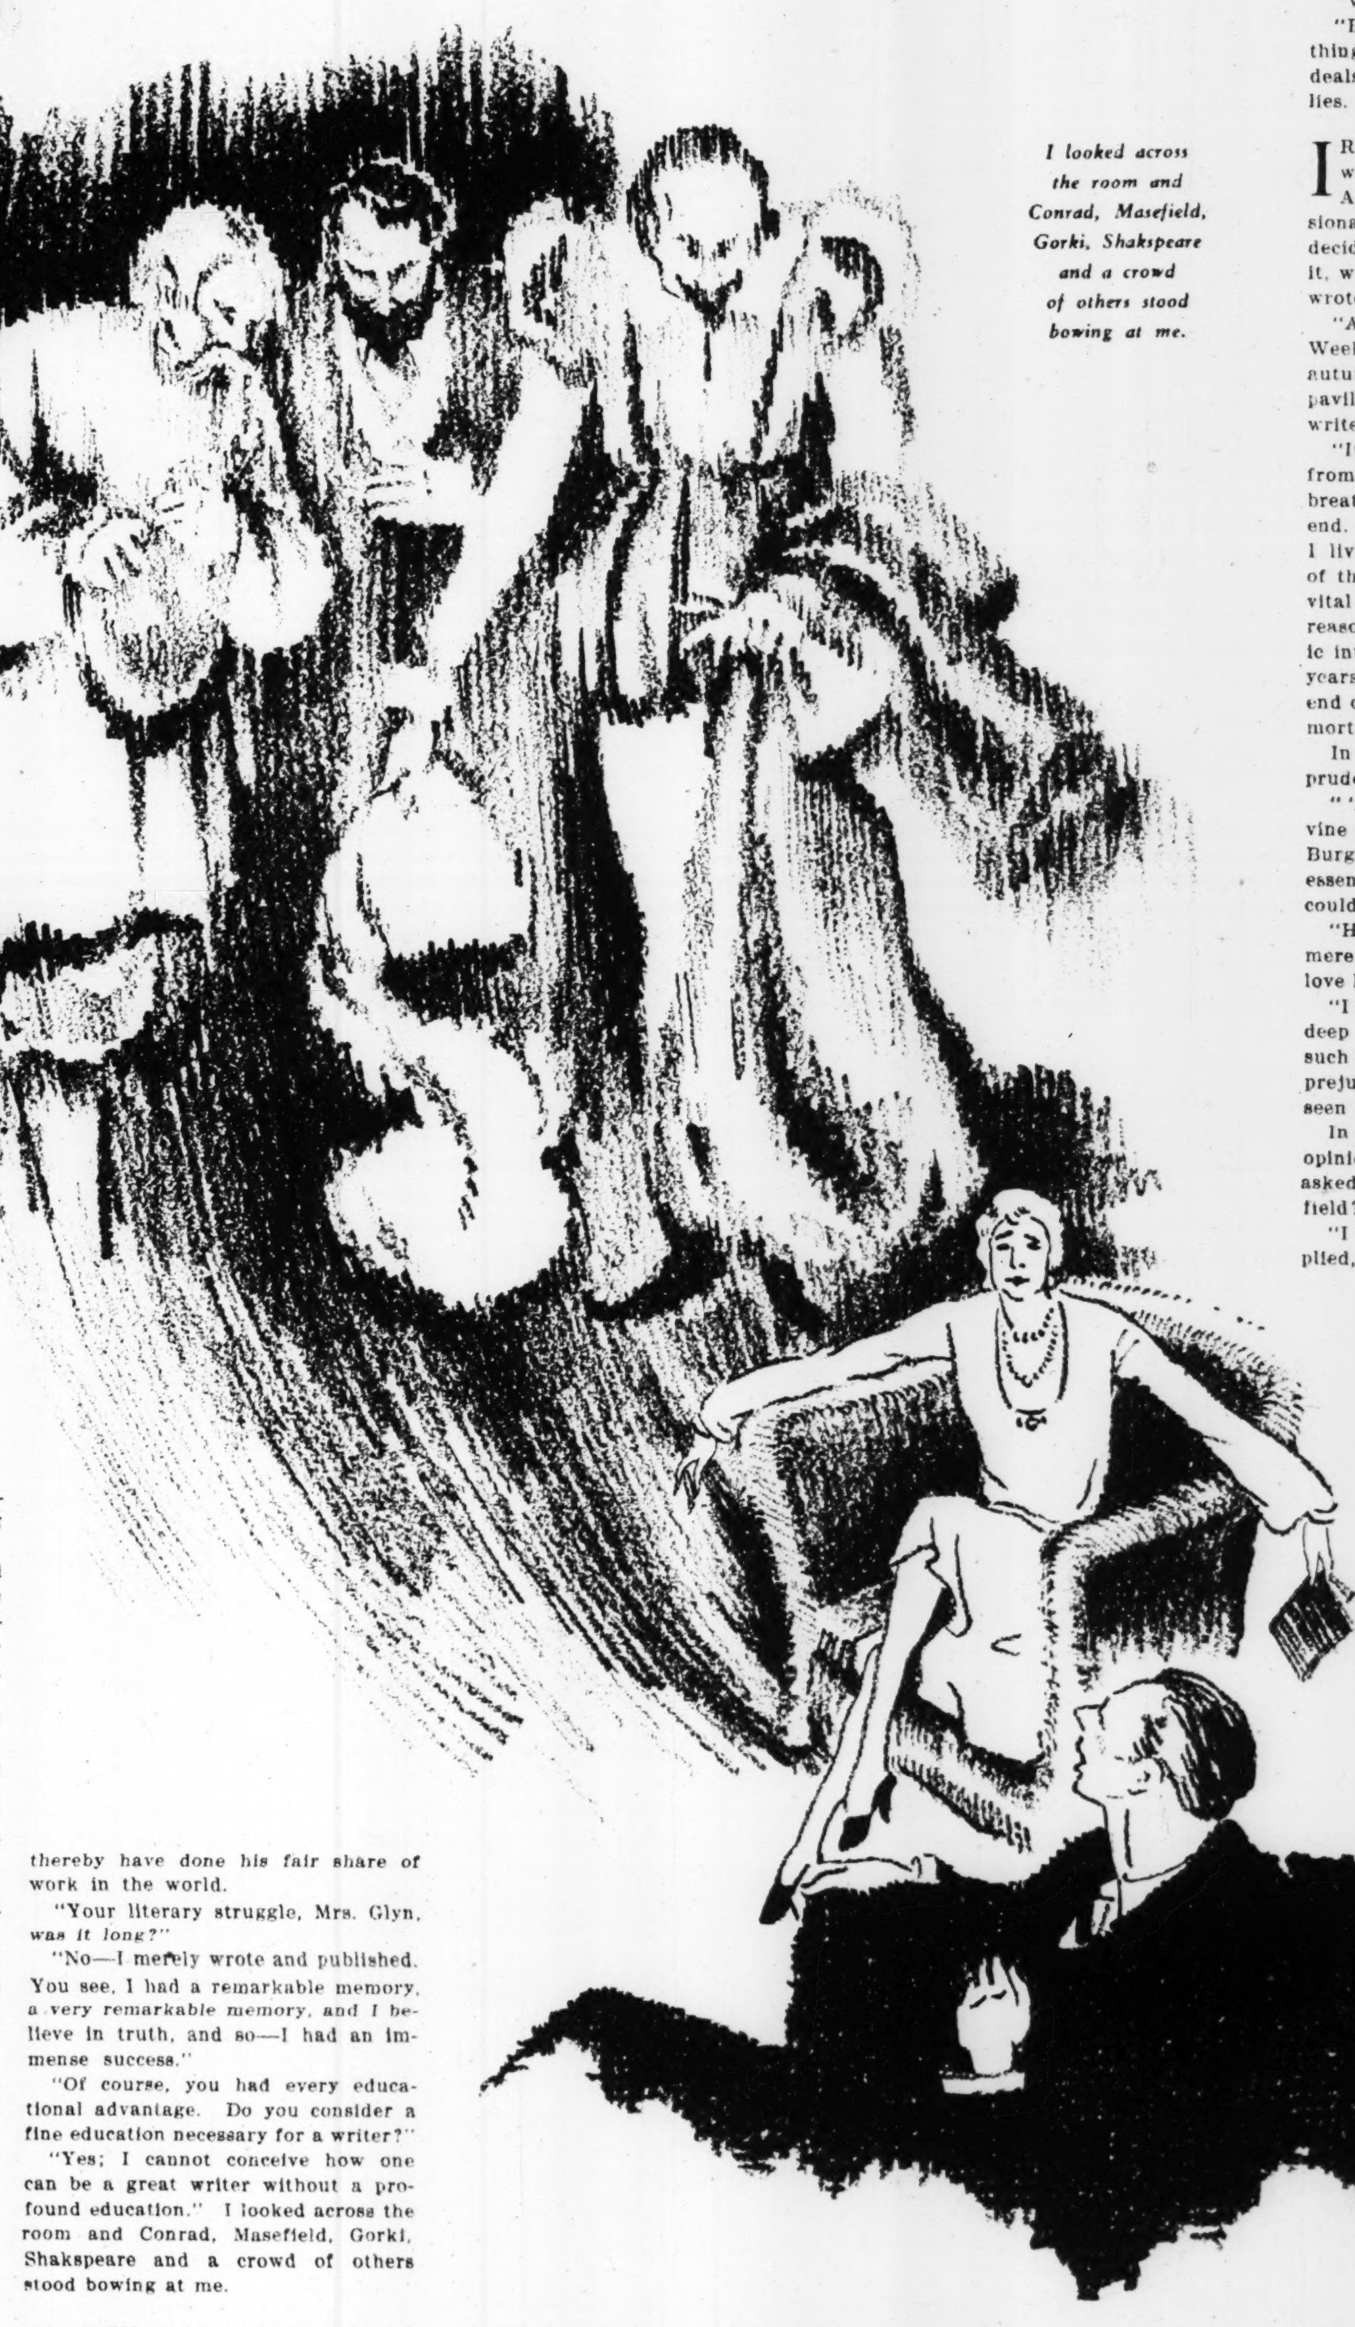
"No—I merely wrote and published. You see, I had a remarkable memory, *a very remarkable memory, and I be*lieve in truth, and so—I had an immense success."

"Of course, you had every educational advantage. Do you consider a fine education necessary for a writer?"

"Yes; I cannot conceive how one can be a great writer without a profound education." I looked across the room and Conrad, Masefield, Gorki, Shakspeare and a crowd of others stood bowing at me.



I looked across the room and Conrad, Masefield, Gorki, Shakspeare and a crowd of others stood bowing at me.

"YOU spoke in high praise of optimism a moment ago, Mrs. Glyn. Don't you think it can be carried too far?" I asked, the while thinking of Ibsen's "The supreme optimist is a damn fool."

"No, no, I do not. Suppose a young man were very ill, and the doctor told him that death was certain in 10 days. Would that doctor be wise?" I made no answer, but thought that it would not make so much difference to one who wanted to live hard enough.

Further conversation proved that Elinor Glyn believes in the great English and American forward march. That the poor boy can rise to great heights despite every handicap. "Look at Lord Reading, a poor Jew boy, and look at his position now."

"Yes," I ventured, "but even so, every poor Jew boy cannot become a Lord Reading."

"Perhaps not. But they can rise far by their own intellect."

I thought of the hundreds of young boys I had known from orphanages and reform schools who were now degenerates, broken and pitiful, carrying dwarfed souls and shriveled lives over the rocky road that leads to the last oblivion.

A slight turn in the road can wreck a life. What, then, must be the plight of boys who learn more about the viciousness of life at 20 than any of our social leaders have the capacity to imagine? Has anyone ever noticed the weary expression in Judge Lindsey's face? He knows.

Are these boys without appreciation of their real friends? Seventeen years ago I stood in front of an art museum in Chicago with three other boys. A venerable and wonderful-looking woman passed us. A boy, now serving life for murder, said: "Take off your hats, kids, here comes Jane Addams."

But Elinor Glyn sits across from me and she is talking about a dance she had with a potentate from Siam, name happily unremembered. Her diamond necklace sparkles on her white throat and recalled to my mind a saying of Kate Barnard's that I have remembered for years. Kate Barnard was, or is, a power in Oklahoma politics, if I remember correctly. She said: "I'll never wear a diamond so long as there is a hungry child."

" 'Three Weeks,' " she was saying, "has been translated into every language and it still sells 50,000 copies a year."

"What is the secret of that success, Mrs. Glyn?"

"Truth," was the terse reply.

"Why is it," I went on, "that most of the great delineators of female characters have been men—Balzac, Hardy, Dreiser, Zola, Sudermann—nearly all?"

"Because," was the decisive answer, "a woman cannot tell the truth about anything."

"Why is that, Mrs. Glyn?"

"Because a man deals with big things and tells the truth. A woman deals with little things and always lies. I write like a man."

IRECALLED a pamphlet she had written about her best-known book. After trying to remember a passionate case of love in England, she decided to invent one. She invented it, which is, I suppose, a paradox. She wrote:

"And finally the vision of 'Three Weeks' came to me suddenly in the autumn of 1906, and I retired to the pavilion in my garden, where I used to write in those days, and began.

"It seemed as though some spirit from beyond was guiding me—I wrote breathlessly for hours and hours on end. . . . I felt intensely as I wrote. I lived in imagination every moment of their two lives. For me they were vital human beings. And that is the reason they have remained of magnetic interest to the readers for all these years and will go on doing so to the end of time." Which is—almost—immortal.

In defending the book from the prudes she quotes a chapter end:

" 'And this night was the most divine of any they had spent upon the Burgenstock, but there was in it an essence about which only the angels could write.'

"How could any low thought of mere sensuality have entered into a love like this?

"I maintain that 'Three Weeks' is a deep and elevating tragedy, and as such will live far beyond my life, when prejudice will be less and the truth seen more clearly."

In an effort once more to get an opinion of American woman writers, I asked: "Do you care for Dorothy Canfield?"

"I have not heard of her," she replied, and then said quickly, "but Gertrude Atherton is a marvelous writer. Her psychology is wonderful and will endure."

"Mrs. Atherton is of the same opinion—are you her disciple?" It was a brutal question—which she ignored. As though Mrs. Glyn could be anybody's disciple.

Mrs. Glyn is not in sympathy with the American system of coeducation. She believes that it brings boys and girls in too close contact in and out of the schools.

Close association fritters away the procreative instinct and destroys all reserve, so that the only thing that comes to them later in life is what comes to animals in the mating season, real love being impossible. Woman, according to Elinor Glyn, must keep herself mysterious and aloof. It is only by so doing that romance can be preserved.

It will be seen that Mme. Glyn is not stepping ahead of Havelock Ellis and Ellen Key as a modern thinker.

The business manager of the studios knocked at the door. We both rose, Mrs. Glyn saying: "I have a message for the world which I shall deliver everywhere. My latest book tells of it. It will be out soon." I wondered why writers always tried to push their latest books on other writers, and, so wondering, I walked out into the California air, leaving the author of the greatest treatise on love in the last 50 years (and of the greatest book on Russia) alone with the man of business.

THE next article in this series will be concerned with Laura La Plante, the Missouri girl.

"VANCE at that time was 34 years old. He was just under six feet, slender, sinewy and graceful. His chiseled, regular features gave his face the attraction of strength and uniform modeling, but a sardonic coldness of expression precluded the designation of handsome. He had aloof, gray eyes, a straight, slender nose and a mouth suggesting both cruelty and asceticism. But despite the severity of his lineaments—which acted like an impenetrable glass wall between him and his fellows—he was highly sensitive and mobile; and though his manner was somewhat detached and supercilious, he exerted an undeniable fascination over those who knew him at all well."

Miss Tallerman was well suited to the part of the attractive if slightly sinister Ada, who, as it develops at the very end of the story, had committed the four murders.

The LIP-STICK PORTRAIT that STARTED a CRAZE

By a Special Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch Sunday Magazine

Kees Van Dongen, Fashionable Parisian Painter, Used a Lady's Vanity Case for a Palette —and Now Regrets It.

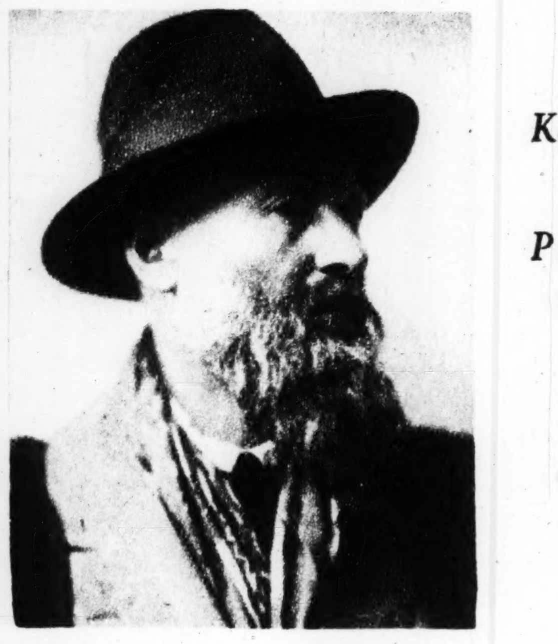
PARIS.

KEES VAN DONGEN once did a longshoreman's chores on the Rotterdam water front. Now a painter of the vogue, he is little short of art dictator to the smart women of Paris. It was Kees Van Dongen who started the bobbed-hair fashion for women in France. It is Kees Van Dongen who must take the responsibility for the latest craze; one must have one's portrait painted with the numerous implements found in the Parisian lady's vanity case. That's not limiting the artist so much at that.

For milady of Paris carries a supply of colors around with her that would well-nigh satisfy such a colorist as was Delacroix. She has reds, she has black, she has ochres, she has blue for the eyelids, you know; she has them in liquids and in powders and in paints; she has lipstick, she has powder loose, she has rouge caked.

KEES VAN DONGEN got himself into this portrait painting a la cosmetics mess quite as many another fellow has got himself into difficulty with a lady. Kees Van Dongen talked too much.

It was one day not long ago. He was giving a causerie on "Lady Painters" at his magnificent studio in the Parc Monceau Quarter. The Dutch artist, absolute lord of the female silhouette that he is, held forth in such manner:



Kees Van Dongen.

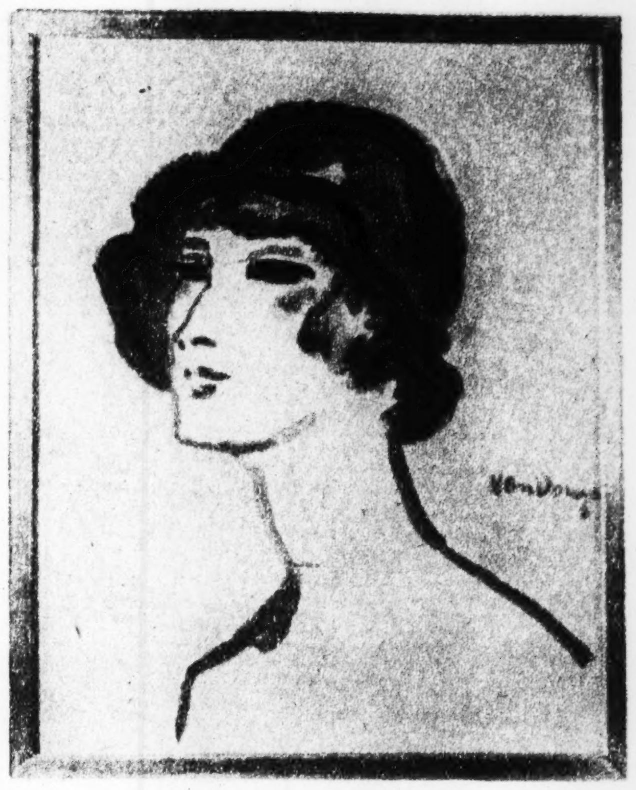
"The women are so lovely now, they know so well how to emphasize their charms and conceal their defects, and they paint and powder so cleverly, that I always dream of painting portraits with a vanity case."

So Mynheer Van Dongen declared, smiling solemnly. He continued:

"It is an art for a woman to make up, and although I am a painter, I envy her. She must have the skill of a Raphael to put just the right shade, the right amount of rouge on her cheeks; she must have the mastery of a Rembrandt to color her eyelids blue—this blue that gives the sweetness and melancholy of a lovesick doe. And it would take a Leonardo da Vinci to equal her in dipping her eyelashes, blackening her eyebrows, painting her lips. It seems that Da Vinci spent three years on the Mona Lisa, but milady of today will often turn out as charming a piece of work in three minutes—or perhaps three seconds. After that come the touches of white, cream, ochre or lavender powder—in the best manner of Greuze—and you often have a living pastel that is priceless. Unfortunately, your work, your artistic work, does not survive."

Ah, Mynheer Van Dongen was in fine fettle today; he seemed to realize it, too, for he went on:

"I cannot walk down the Rue de la Paix, or Fifth avenue, or Regent street without seeing living Madonnas who put the old Italian masters to shame. Alas! These living beauties are so temporary."



The lip-stick portrait.

HE PAUSED, and his audience, transitory though their beauty was, threw hasty but triumphant glances at their respective vanity mirrors.

"Isn't it terrible?" asked Van Dongen. "You have painted a masterpiece on your face this morning that would be worth thousands of dollars if it had been on wood or canvas, and then you go and wash it off in the evening. Ladies! Ladies! How extravagant you are!"

And Mynheer Van Dongen had gotten his foot into it. For a pretty and audacious young woman arose, held up her well-equipped vanity, and said:

"Dear Monsieur Van Dongen"—she smiled sweetly—"you are always teasing us poor women, so I think it is our turn to tease you a little. I believe you said that you had always dreamed of making a portrait with a vanity case. Why not try it now? I am not one of those millionairesses who can afford to pay several thousand dollars to have you make a painting of me, but I have always coveted a Van Dongen of myself. I know paints and canvas are expensive, and so I offer you my lipstick, my pencils and my powders free of charge, if you will make your dream come true. Please tell me that you are not joking. Oh, please!"

There was a terrific roar of applause, as a Van Dongen signature is as good as a check on the Bank of France. The women had him cornered and Van Dongen and the ladies knew it.

"And me!" "And me!" they shouted, clapping their hands and holding up their vanity cases.

In face of at least 40 charming and determined young women the painter gracefully surrendered, but he promised to make only one pastel at the moment and the other 39 women at some other time, as it is abhorrent for artists to work in series, as though they were making Ford cars of the same model. And so with the aid of lipstick and the innumerable paints, powders and liquids of the Parisienne make-up kit, he cheerfully dashed off a hasty little portrait with his signature on it.

It was to be expected, of course. Within 24 hours the "top of the basket" of society, as the French say, were rushing to his studio to demand a lipstick pastel, until the artist had to throw up his hands in despair.

Later Van Dongen told the writer: "I was partly joking and partly serious when I spoke of woman's cleverness in making up.

"It really is marvelous," he said, "what skill some of them display in using their colors. I think that if I were a dictator the first thing I would do would be to issue a decree compelling every woman to take lessons in makeup. There are still too many who don't know the fine points of it."

VAN DONGEN says that he has found beauty everywhere, but sometimes it has been a tragic kind of beauty.

"I have seen beauty around the baccarat table at Deauville, and it has been a sad sight," he relates. "The women who play baccarat know how to dress, how to fix their hair, how to wear jewels, but when they get around the green table they forget everything—they forget even their husbands, and, worse still, to powder their noses.

"They forget that their noses shine, and when I see that I tremble for our civilization."

woman's lead, which is the part of Ada Greene, went to Miss Tallerman without any question. She has had some experience on the stage and is at present understudying Hallulah Bankhead in the London production of "Her Cardboard Lover." And to Dr. Proetz's brother, Victor Proetz, a member of the firm of Hall & Proetz, architects, went the part of that brilliant, if amateur, analyst of crime, Philo Vance. In the book the author, S. S. Van Dine, describes Vance as follows:

"VANCE at that time was 34 years old. He was just under six feet, slender, sinewy and graceful. His chiseled, regular features gave his face the attraction of strength and uniform modeling, but a sardonic coldness of expression precluded the designation of handsome. He had aloof, gray eyes, a straight, slender nose and a mouth suggesting both cruelty and asceticism. But despite the severity of his lineaments—which acted like an impenetrable glass wall between him and his fellows—he was highly sensitive and mobile; and though his manner was somewhat detached and supercilious, he exerted an undeniable fascination over those who knew him at all well."

Miss Tallerman was well suited to the part of the attractive if slightly sinister Ada, who, as it develops at the very end of the story, had committed the four murders.

The cast having been chosen, the players were ready for action. There were 24 characters in all. Dr. Proetz acted as director and under his direction there were no half-way methods. He even wore the reversed cap of the Hollywood species, but he explains that this is not an affectation but a necessity, since the large camera must be up at one's eye frequently and would thus interfere with any kind of headgear worn normally.

The scenes had to be taken for the most part in the evening, on Sundays and occasionally on other afternoons when the cast could be assembled. But, as called for by the scenario worked out from the novel, a majority of the shots are interiors. And here Proetz Cinema Productions encountered a bit of luck.

In the cast were Mr. and Mrs. John B. Johnstone. It happened that Mrs. Johnstone's mother and father, Mr. and Mrs. Peyton Carr, were away and that their large home at 62 Vandeventer place could be used for the interior scenes. It couldn't have been better if it had been built for the purpose. Both inside and out the house had a distinct flavor of a great house of the 'nineties, the setting for the Greene murders. It was even found, as a rather striking coincidence, that in certain of the rooms the furnishings resembled those described in the Van Dine thriller.

Filming went forward rapidly. Dr. Proetz worked out a system which closely resembles that followed by professional directors. He numbered all the scenes that were to be taken and then selected, by number, those which were to be photographed on the same location. For example, scenes 10, 28, 32 and 40 were laid in the Carr library. All these were photographed in sequence, although they might be widely separated in the script.

Dr. Proetz went to endless lengths to get the proper effects. One scene out of doors called for footprints in the snow. Dr. Proetz arose at 5 o'clock one morning to get just the right kind of snow, before it should have melted or become soot covered. Again, the script called for a policeman. Dr. Proetz persuaded a member of the motor-cycle squad to play a brief part in the film. There were many trick shots, through speeding motor-car windows and on crowded streets. Occasionally startled passersby had a glimpse of Proetz Cinema Productions in action. Several scenes were staged on a bluff over the Mississippi.

IN FIVE weeks the picture was completed, cut, edited and in the form of a five-reel mystery thriller. Dr. and Mrs. Proetz gave a private showing at the Artists' Guild Theater for the cast and 50 friends. It was pronounced an unqualified success even though it was a little difficult to get goose flesh from seeing someone that you knew quite well being murdered by someone else that you knew.

Dr. Proetz now has other scenarios in mind that will get done as soon as the weather improves. He is planning one now which will be a thriller of a different type. It will be a night of horror to which a honeymoon pair is subjected. Nothing really happens but a great many unpleasant things will seem to happen. As now planned the scene of this new movie will be the Proetz summer home at St. Albans on the Missouri River. Still later Proetz Cinema Productions contemplate doing a series of movies about the missing Russian crown jewels. And the director of productions promises that the same high standards will be maintained that have prevailed in the past.

It is doubtful, of course, that anyone else in St. Louis has gone to such professional extremes. There are, however, a large number of people taking movies. A majority content themselves with photographing the family and friends.

There are some who have attempted small scenarios. Four girls in Webster Groves, who prefer to remain anonymous because they believe their picture was a fizzle, attempted a thriller that included a holdup staged before startled patrons of a St. Louis restaurant.

R. A. Buermann of 6229 Pershing avenue has long been interested in motion-picture photography. He is now experimenting with movies in natural colors and his son, Howard Buermann, has begun to play with small scenarios. Young Buermann, who is a student at Washington University, is organizing a movie club among fellow-students. He also took many thousand feet of film on a student cruise around the world.

J. M. Guyol of 2312 Kienlen avenue is interested in making movies out of puppet dolls such as Felix and Krazy Kat. This takes infinite patience as the puppets must be moved hundreds of times to gain the semblance of movement for a few inches of film. Guyol also writes scenarios about his small son who was recently the star of "The Great Pie Robbery."

ANOTHER amateur movie photographer, John Langensand of 4306 South Compton avenue, is more interested in photographing natural scenes and wild animals than anything else. Another enthusiast is Mannel Hahn, who has recently returned from South America with many thousand feet of film. Animals are usually favorite subjects, according to A. C. Erker of the Erker Optical Company. Erker himself has taken some 10,000 feet of film at the St. Louis zoo.

Still another movie-making fan is Fred Campbell of the Campbell Auto Supply Company. His favorite stunt is to make movies of costume parties and other gatherings of friends. He has been interested in still photography for 30 years.

Various supply companies report that the movie game is just getting a start. They all agree in reporting a remarkable sales increase during the past year, both in projectors, movie cameras and film. So that it may be that every back yard will have its own movie lot before long and Gloria Swansons and Greta Garbos will bloom by every fireside.

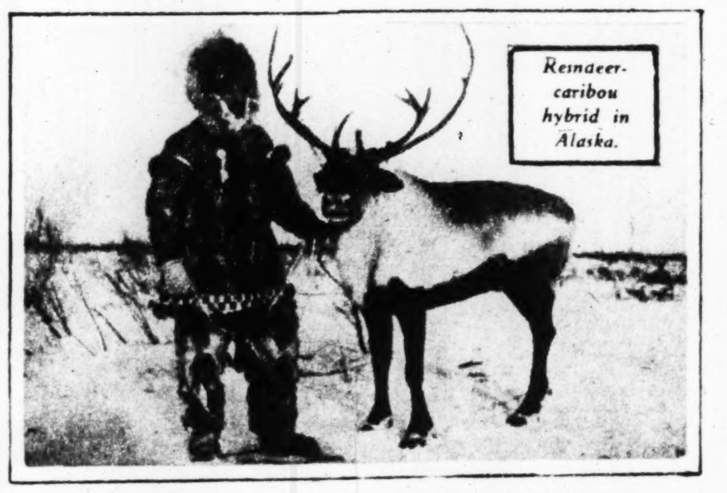
The old dictum that hybrids are all sterile and can't reproduce has, of course, been handled pretty roughly in all these experiments. In some cases it holds, in others it doesn't.

ANYHOW, the doctrine seems to have been established originally by reference to the most familiar of domestic hybrids, the mule. Mules as a rule do not breed, yet in the recent past two undoubted cases of mule mares giving birth to healthy foals have come to light.

Erasmus Haworth of Lawrence, Kansas, reports the case of a mule mare that produced a foal sired by a jack. And rare as such cases are, this same mule is now believed to be with foal for a second time.

"Old Beck" is only an ancient Texas "cotton mule" mare who has been on this planet long enough to vote, but she has done her bit toward breaking the age-old reproach of sterility leveled at her hybrid race. For she has not only borne offspring—two lusty colts—but now has a grandchild. This grandchild, representing the third lineal hybrid in a row, is a horse in appearance, although one-quarter mule.



Reindeer-caribou hybrid in Alaska.

For a mule to have a foal is an almost miraculous rarity, but for one of these to propagate is practically unheard of.

Yet this is the record of "Old Beck," as reported by A. H. Broth of Texas A. and M. College. Her first offspring was a daughter, sired by a jack and foaled in 1920. This feat brought her to the attention of the college authorities, and she was soon given a home on the campus. Subsequent matings with other jacks failed to produce another colt, but a noted stallion of the college stud sired a foal that has grown up to look quite like a horse—and a fine horse at that. "Old Beck's" mule daughter has remained without issue, in spite of several attempts to breed her, but the horse-like colt, a stallion, has sired one healthy colt, now over a year old.

Every once in a while someone takes a notion to hybridize the zebra with the horse or the donkey. It isn't especially hard to do, for all three animals are fairly closely related—as closely, say, as cattle and zebu are, and more closely than cattle and bison.

THE offspring are called by various names, such as "zebrass" and "zebrule." As a rule, they are of no practical use, for they usually inherit the wild intractability of their striped ancestors; but at any rate they are interesting animals and make curious specimens for zoos.

At present the U. S. Zoological Park in Washington has two of these zebra hybrids, one a cross between zebra and horse and the other between zebra and ass.

The physical characteristics of the parent stock are apparent in both these unusual animals.

Although the zebra strain in mules has not thus far proved to be a desirable quality, it is believed that further experiments may produce a cross worth while.

The ROSE TREE OF CHINA (Prunus Triloba) is the most beautiful and showy of all small trees. It begins to bloom before the leaves appear in the spring, being literally covered with very double rose-like pink flowers. As an ornament from early spring until late fall it has few equals. This symmetrically formed, graceful little tree grows usually to a height of but 8 feet, and is attractive as a specimen or when planted in groups or shrub border. It is hardy and easily grown, and no lawn is so small that room can not be found for at least one of these wonderful trees. Many who have seen it declare it to be the most beautiful tree they have ever seen. The rose-like blossoms make fine cut flowers.

THE RETURN OF RAMON

Love and Hate in Sunny Spain.

IT WAS a quiet night at Don Miguel's, ordinarily the liveliest roadhouse in Seville County. There had been practically no carving and the orchestra still retained its original seven members. Moreover, the two ambulances kept parked at the entrance had not made a single trip to the dispensary.

Don Miguel was quite discouraged, as preceding events had just actuated him to engage the coroner as master of ceremonies.

"The dullest night in our history," he complained to Ramon, the lanky porter. "Only one man dead and he—perdition!—was bored to death."

Ramon secretly enjoyed the tranquillity. It was his job to scatter sawdust around following bloody fights, and he was exhausted from the night before. Now, he might gaze undisturbed at beautiful Dolores, Miguel's daughter, who, by the way, was the most doleful blues singer in all Andalusia.

"I ask you," said Dolores with disgust, "how can a star like me keep her reputation at this joint? If it wasn't my old man's, I'd make tracks. Why, up in Madrid, where I had my last engagement, not a night went by but that five or six of the boys didn't duel over me, and if I didn't have to attend an inquest three times a week I'd change my beauty parlor. The only thing they use knives for down here is to cut their meat. Bah!"

Ramon fastened his soulful eyes on her and sighed deeply. Would that he had the wealth and social position to demand her hand! But, alas, his father was only another candidate for Mayor. And then they came from Toledo, which is in the minor league.

SUDDENLY there came a shout and four caballeros leaped to their feet. Swords flashed. The crowd broke into spontaneous applause and the orchestra leader, delighted at the unexpected demonstration of pep, signaled for "Hail, Hail, the Gang's All Here." The party was waking up. Outside, the two ambulance drivers put down the form sheets they had been reading and started their motors.

"Great stuff, great stuff," smiled Don Miguel, rubbing his hands. "At last, Dolores, they fight for you. This will net me an eight-column banner in the morning paper and the extent of tomorrow's business will be nobody's business."

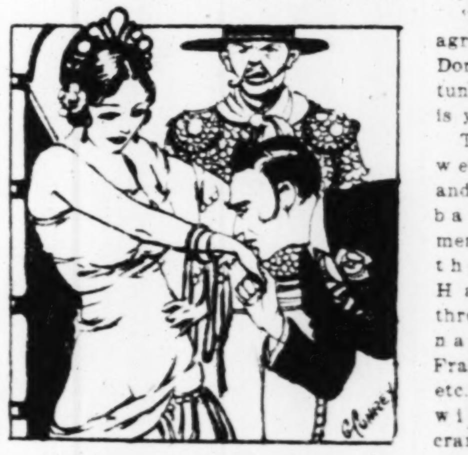
The contestants were: Don Arturo Gomez de Rueda Incandescent y Rotunda; Don Enrique Petunia Salamander de Favorita y Emanelo; Don Francisco Valdez de Salazar y Palido and Don Felipe Hermosillo Rio de Janeiro Pesces en Casserole. The Seville telephone directory weighs about 16 pounds without classified advertising.

After 20 minutes of vicious hacking, nobody had suffered any damage except slight contusions of the coat. The panting swordsmen rested their weapons and went into conference. Ramon, relieved, put up his sawdust bucket.

The four caballeros approached Dolores, removed their hats and bowed deeply. Handsome youths they were, imbued with the fire and dash of old Spain. They wore sideburns, bright shirts, red sashes and latticed pantaloons. They looked as if they were dressed for a masquerade party, but this was the real thing.

"Fair Dolores, star of Andalusia," said Don Arturo Gomez, etc., "we fought for your heart, but it was a no-decision contest. Hence we have decided on another course. Each of us shall depart and stay away one year. At the end of that time, he who has won the greatest fame and amassed the largest fortune becomes your husband."

"Well, gents, it's romantic, and I'll agree to it," said Dolores. "It's a whale of a publicity yarn—'Four Youths in Fame-Fortune Battle Over Night-Club Beauty.'" Her lustrous eyes fell on poor Ramon, who was standing nearby caressing wine glasses with his apron. "What about the mop engineer? Is he with you?"



"I claim your hand, fair one," he said, kissing Dolores' hand.

"He signs the agreement," said Don Enrique Petunia, etc., "if it is your wish."

The papers were prepared and the four caballeros commenced signing their names. Half way through his signature Don Francisco Valdez, etc., was seized with writer's cramp. However, he struggled on, and inside of three hours all the names were down. The four caballeros shook hands with each other, but had only kicks and taunts for Ramon.

"Don't take it to heart, kid, you may win out," whispered Dolores. She gave him a rose. "Take that along with you for luck, but don't entertain any Andalusians about me." Ramon kissed the rose and murmured a lot of silly nonsense.

IN A YEAR, 12 months had elapsed. But time had dealt unkindly with Don Miguel's once-prosperous night club. It was padlocked—in the hands of the Sheriff. And so was the Miguel homestead. For Dolores had pined so deeply for Ramon that her blues singing became too realistic and she couldn't even jazz the second chorus. This had had a bad effect on business.

The four caballeros had returned and met with Dolores outside of the night club. Only Ramon was absent. Dolores was to name the most valuable man. Don Arturo Gomez, etc., now was known as the greatest bullfighter in all Spain; Don Enrique Petunia, etc., had broken the banks at Monte Carlo; Don Francisco Valdez, etc., was the most feared swordsman on the continent and Don Felipe, etc., was playing the two-a-day vaudeville circuit as a guitar plucker.

As Dolores was about to select Don Arturo Gomez, etc., a tall figure approached. It was Ramon—in flannel slacks and a blue coat. He had a rose in his lapel—her rose.

"I claim your hand, fair one," he said, kissing Dolores' hand.

"Bosh, you suds accountant," sneered Don Arturo Gomez, etc., "what's your racket?"

"Tennis!" snapped Ramon. "Haven't you read of me—me, the Caliph of Clay, the Wazir of Whitewash, the Sultan of Smash, the Begum of Backhand? At Forest Hills in those United States have I copped the Davis Cup!" He produced it.

"Grand!" cried Dolores, leaping into his arms. "This will sound swell: 'Spanish Net Wiz Weds Beautiful Blues Singer.' Gee, kid, it'll only take a few matches to pay off the old man's debts. We have a castle in Spain, but it's mortgaged."

"You mean I should play for keeps?"

"Of course!"

"Nothing doing," said Ramon, picking up his satchel and glancing at a time-table. "It would impair my amateur standing."

Two coughs too many

--until she gave the children REM

"My two children, Joseph and Margaret, are subject to bronchial coughs," says Mrs. Cook. "They had severe ones that started early in the winter, and it's troublesome to a mother to have two children coughing in the house. I was in Herbert's Drug Store, at 10th & Virginia, S. W., and told him about the children's coughs. He sold me a bottle of REM and I'm glad he did. It gave them wonderful relief. Since then I've used nothing else for coughs. I wouldn't be without REM, for it's the only thing that gave Joseph any relief at all."

Youngsters quickly find out that REM doesn't taste bad. Mothers quickly find out it's a mighty good cough medicine.

No Excess Fat

It's easy to avoid

Everybody knows that excess fat is nowhere near so common as it was. Mothers look like daughters. Slender figures are the rule. You should know how scientific research has brought this change about.

Science has discovered that a great cause of excess fat lies in a deficient gland. No starvation, no over-work can cure it. The cause must be corrected, and that lies in a gland which largely controls nutrition.

Modern physicians, in treating obesity, attack that cause. They supply the lack. That is why excess fat has so fast disappeared in late years. Slender figures are the vogue.

A great medical laboratory, years ago, embodied this new method in Marmola prescription tablets. People have used them for over 20 years—millions of boxes of them. You see the results wherever you look. There is new youth and beauty, new health and vitality. Excess fat is nowhere near as common as it was.

Do what these people have done—multitudes of them, for 21 years. They have seen the fat go, seen new youth and vigor come back. Friends all about you will testify to that.

Every box of Marmola contains the formula, also the reasons for results. You will know exactly why these good effects appear. Get back to normal weight in this scientific way. Fat is a disease. You will benefit in many ways when the cause is ended. Start now.

Marmola prescription tablets are sold by all druggists at $1 per box. If your druggist is out, he will get them at once from his jobber.

No Excess Fat

It's easy to avoid

Everybody knows that excess fat is nowhere near so common as it was. Mothers look like daughters. Slender figures are the rule. You should know how scientific research has brought this change about.

Science has discovered that a great cause of excess fat lies in a deficient gland. No starvation, no over-work can cure it. The cause must be corrected, and that lies in a gland which largely controls nutrition.

Modern physicians, in treating obesity, attack that cause. They supply the lack. That is why excess fat has so fast disappeared in late years. Slender figures are the vogue.

A great medical laboratory, years ago, embodied this new method in Marmola prescription tablets. People have used them for over 20 years—millions of boxes of them. The one function of a dentifrice is to clean the teeth. No dentifrice can cure pyorrhea; no dentifrice can permanently correct an acid condition of the saliva. Any claim that any dentifrice can do them is false and misleading.

Why Colgate's has become
AMERICA'S FAVORITE TOOTHPASTE

The reason why more people use Colgate's than any other toothpaste is simply that it cleans teeth better.

Cleaning the teeth, say dentists, doesn't mean merely scrubbing the outer smooth surfaces. It means penetrating down into the thousands of tiny crevices in normal teeth and gums where food particles and mucin collect and where decay starts.

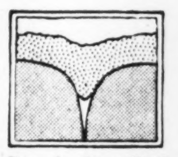
No toothbrush can reach these hard-to-clean places. They must be cleansed by the dentifrice.

Hence the real test of your toothpaste is its ability to get down into these crevices and cleanse them thoroughly.

A recent scientific test proved that Colgate's has a greater penetrating power than any of the leading toothpastes on the market today.

The amazing story of Penetrating Foam . . . that cleans where the toothbrush cannot reach

How Colgate's Cleans Crevices Where Tooth Decay May Start



Greatly magnified picture of tiny tooth crevice. Note how ordinary, sluggish toothpaste (having high "surface-tension") fails to penetrate down where causes of decay lurk.

This diagram shows how Colgate's active foam (having low "surface-tension") penetrates deep down into the crevice, cleansing it completely where toothbrush cannot reach.

Colgate's superior penetrating power is due to the fact that it contains the world's greatest cleansing agent. When brushed, this cleansing agent bursts into a sparkling, snow-white foam that sweeps over teeth and gums. This foam possesses a remarkable property (low "surface-tension") which enables it to go deep down into the tiny tooth crevices where decay starts. There, it dislodges clinging food particles and mucin, washing away these impurities in a detergent wave. In this foam is carried a fine chalk-powder—a polishing material used by dentists—which polishes the enamel safely, brilliantly.

Thus Colgate's cleans and beautifies; purifies and refreshes the entire mouth, restoring natural loveliness of teeth and gums. If you have never used Colgate's, please try it. Mail the coupon below for a generous free tube.

Have Trouble Going To Sleep Nights?

Now An Utterly DRUGLESS Way To Instant Sleep . . . Boundless Energy The Next Day

PLEASE ACCEPT 3-DAY TEST
NOTE COUPON BELOW

THIS new way not only induces almost instant sleep, but rebuilds your wasted tissues while you sleep. On doctors' advice, people are flocking to its use. It is as free of drugs as the bread you eat or the milk you drink.

Please accept a 3 nights' test. Doing so has made a great difference in the lives of thousands of nervous people.

What It Is

It is called Ovaltine; a scientific food concentrate developed in Switzerland by a scientist of world-fame. You take it in a cup of warm milk at bedtime; a super-delicious drink.

First it induces sleep; sound, natural sleep. The kind that rebuilds and rejuvenates.

Then while you sleep, Ovaltine re-supplies your system with the energy lost the previous active day. For it contains practically every building element necessary to life and energy, in a form which the human system can easily absorb while you sleep.

You can take it night after night and not only not form a habit, as with drugs, but build up your health as well.

Do you wonder then, that people are flocking to its use? New to America, Ovaltine is being recommended by over 20,000 doctors. Used for 30 years in Europe, its use has spread to over 50 different nations. It marks one of the most important scientific findings of its time.

Accept Test

Doctors urge it not only for sleeplessness, but for all nervous and run-down conditions. They recommend it, too, for nervous, underweight children. Thousands of busy people take it during the day to relieve fatigue. A few week's use will make an amazing difference in the way you feel. Believe or not what people claim for Ovaltine. Try it. Obtain at any drug or grocery store, or use coupon for special 3-day test.

MAIL FOR 3-DAY SUPPLY

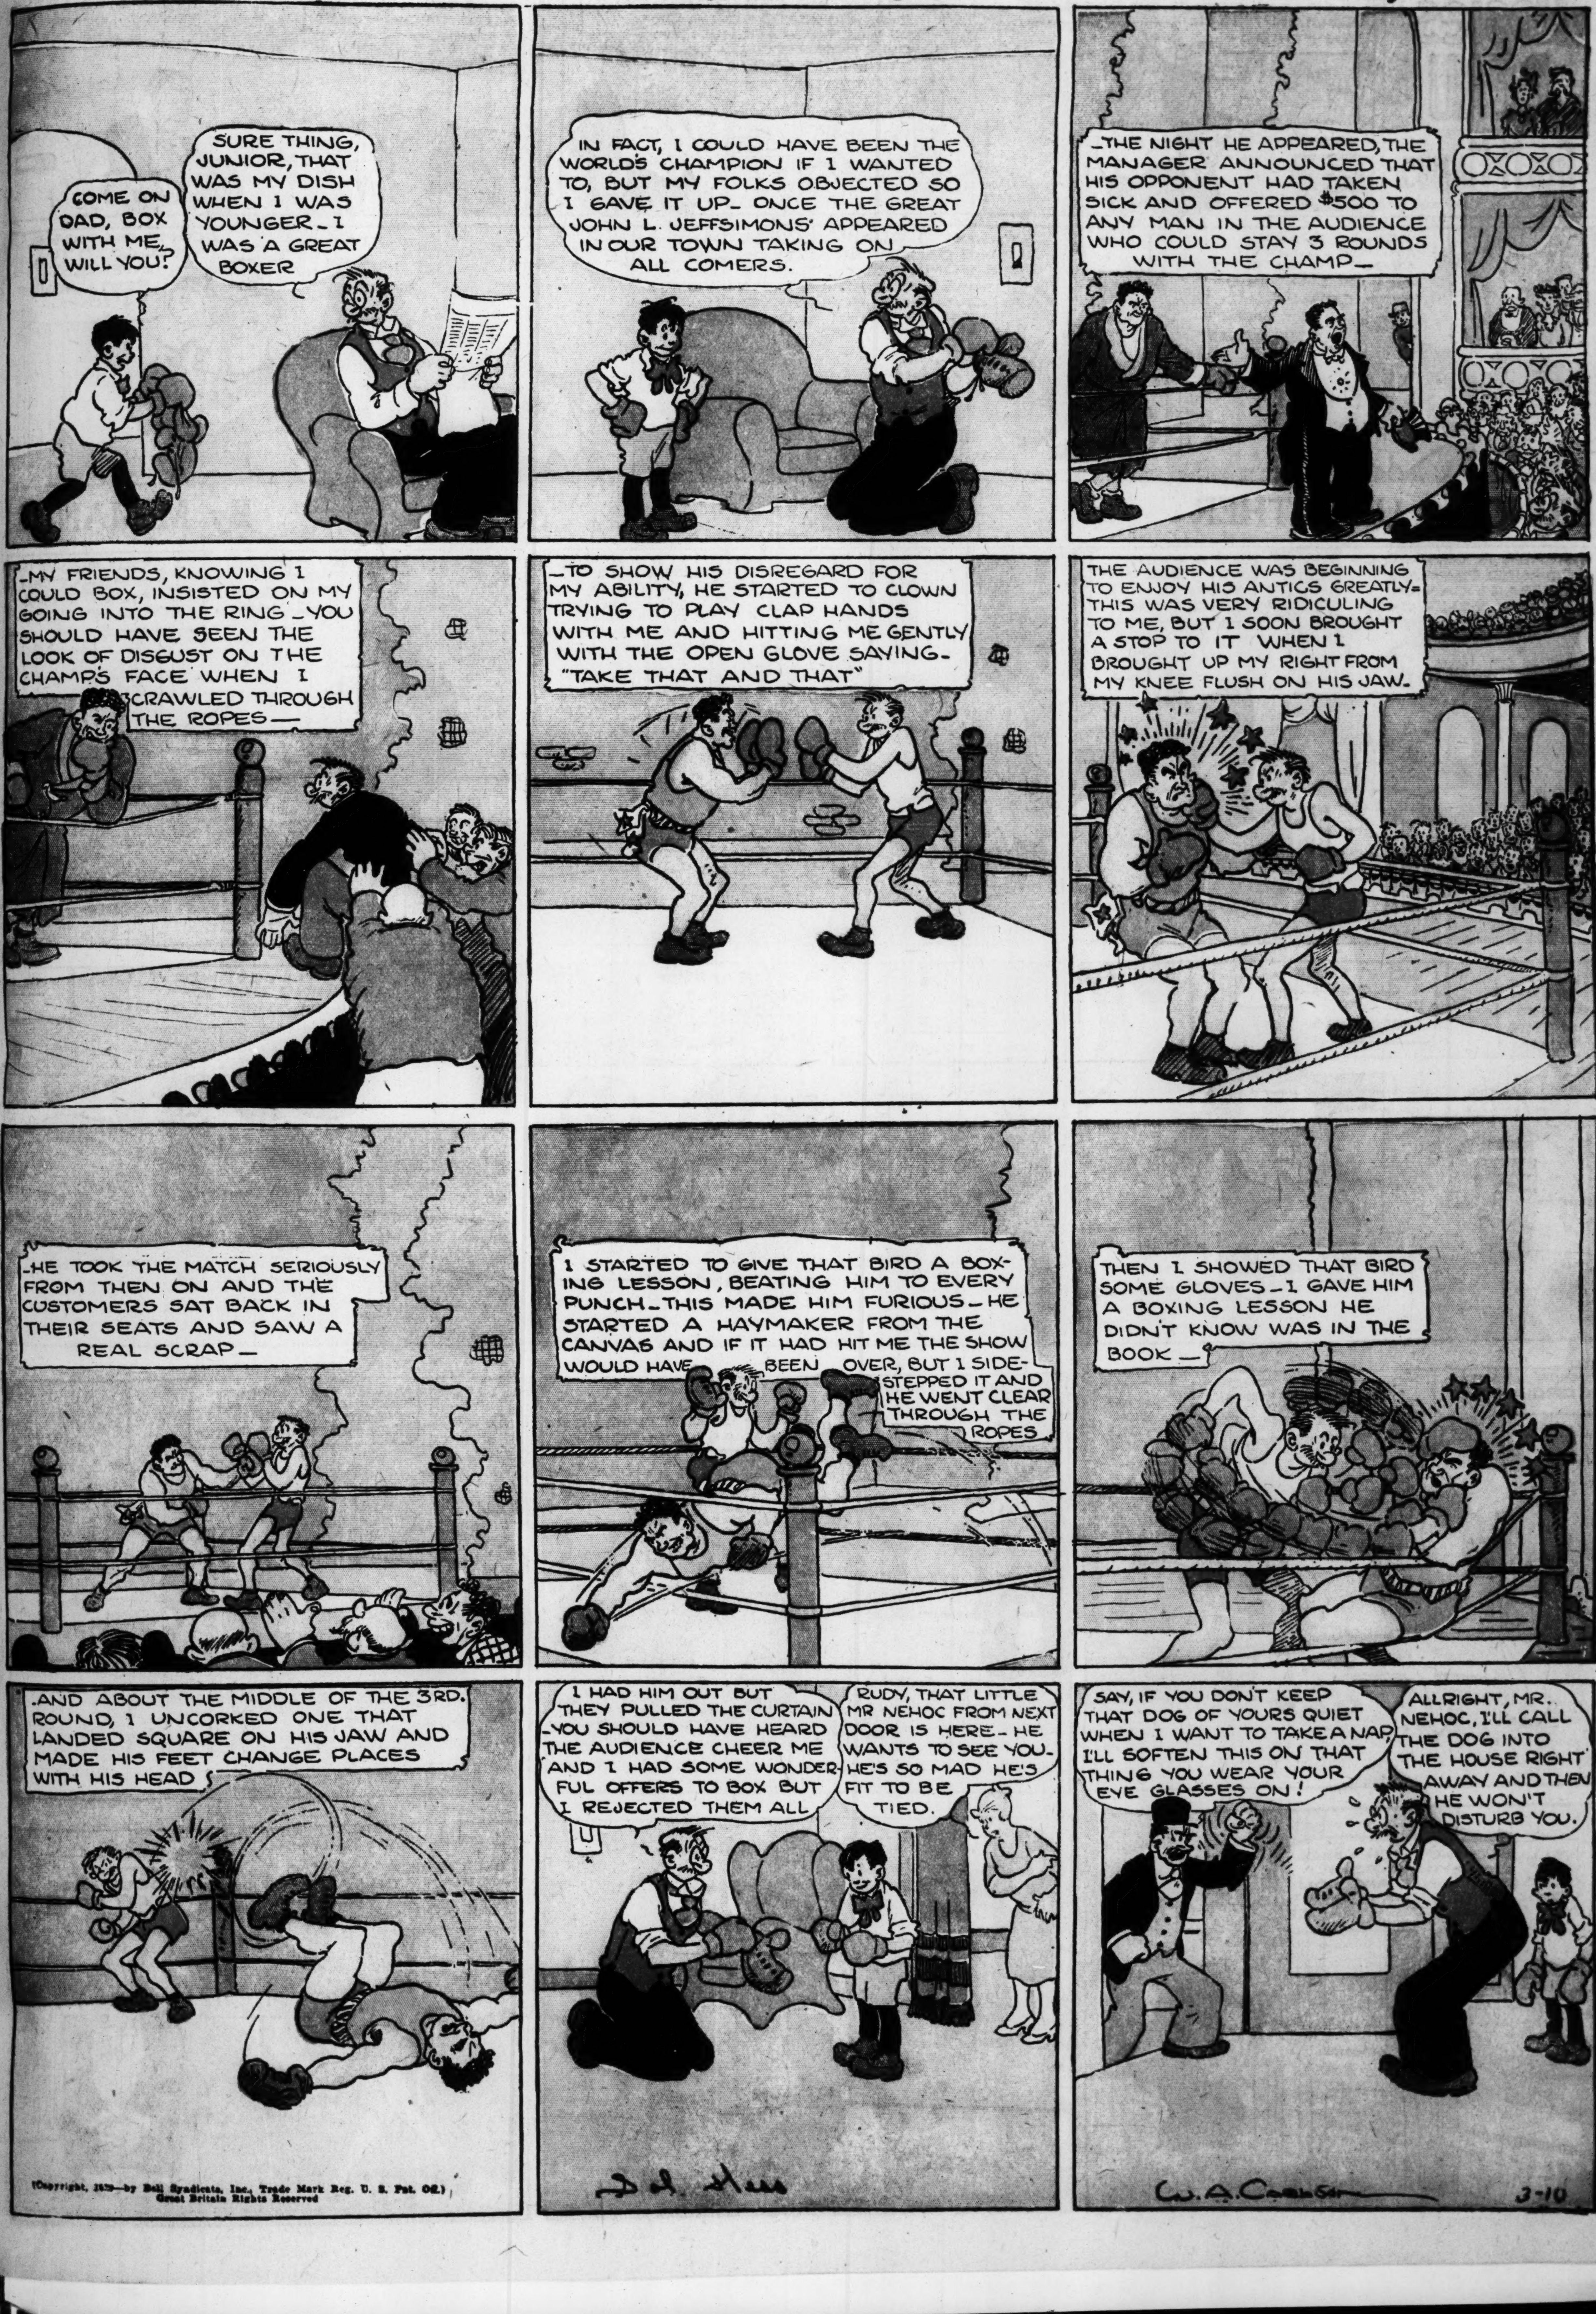
THE NEBBS -:- Rudy, The Ex-Pugilist -:- By SOL HESS



COME ON DAD, BOX WITH ME, WILL YOU?
SURE THING, JUNIOR, THAT WAS MY DISH WHEN I WAS YOUNGER - I WAS A GREAT BOXER
IN FACT, I COULD HAVE BEEN THE WORLD'S CHAMPION IF I WANTED TO, BUT MY FOLKS OBJECTED SO I GAVE IT UP - ONCE THE GREAT JOHN L. JEFFSIMONS' APPEARED IN OUR TOWN TAKING ON ALL COMERS.
- THE NIGHT HE APPEARED, THE MANAGER ANNOUNCED THAT HIS OPPONENT HAD TAKEN SICK AND OFFERED $500 TO ANY MAN IN THE AUDIENCE WHO COULD STAY 3 ROUNDS WITH THE CHAMP -
- MY FRIENDS, KNOWING I COULD BOX, INSISTED ON MY GOING INTO THE RING - YOU SHOULD HAVE SEEN THE LOOK OF DISGUST ON THE CHAMP'S FACE WHEN I CRAWLED THROUGH THE ROPES -
- TO SHOW HIS DISREGARD FOR MY ABILITY, HE STARTED TO CLOWN TRYING TO PLAY CLAP HANDS WITH ME AND HITTING ME GENTLY WITH THE OPEN GLOVE SAYING - "TAKE THAT AND THAT" THE AUDIENCE WAS BEGINNING TO ENJOY HIS ANTICS GREATLY - THIS WAS VERY RIDICULING TO ME, BUT I SOON BROUGHT A STOP TO IT WHEN I BROUGHT UP MY RIGHT FROM MY KNEE FLUSH ON HIS JAW -
- HE TOOK THE MATCH SERIOUSLY FROM THEN ON AND THE CUSTOMERS SAT BACK IN THEIR SEATS AND SAW A REAL SCRAP -
I STARTED TO GIVE THAT BIRD A BOXING LESSON, BEATING HIM TO EVERY PUNCH - THIS MADE HIM FURIOUS - HE STARTED A HAYMAKER FROM THE CANVAS AND IF IT HAD HIT ME THE SHOW WOULD HAVE BEEN OVER, BUT I SIDESTEPPED IT AND HE WENT CLEAR THROUGH THE ROPES
THEN I SHOWED THAT BIRD SOME GLOVES - I GAVE HIM A BOXING LESSON HE DIDN'T KNOW WAS IN THE BOOK -
- AND ABOUT THE MIDDLE OF THE 3RD. ROUND, I UNCORKED ONE THAT LANDED SQUARE ON HIS JAW AND MADE HIS FEET CHANGE PLACES WITH HIS HEAD
I HAD HIM OUT BUT THEY PULLED THE CURTAIN - YOU SHOULD HAVE HEARD THE AUDIENCE CHEER ME AND I HAD SOME WONDERFUL OFFERS TO BOX BUT I REJECTED THEM ALL
RUDY, THAT LITTLE MR NEHOC FROM NEXT DOOR IS HERE - HE WANTS TO SEE YOU. HE'S SO MAD HE'S FIT TO BE TIED.
SAY, IF YOU DON'T KEEP THAT DOG OF YOURS QUIET WHEN I WANT TO TAKE A NAP I'LL SOFTEN THIS ON THAT THING YOU WEAR YOUR EYE GLASSES ON!
ALLRIGHT, MR. NEHOC, I'LL CALL THE DOG INTO THE HOUSE RIGHT AWAY AND THEN HE WON'T DISTURB YOU.
